GRADUATE SCHOOL OF HUMANITIES AND SOCIAL SCIENCES
DEPARTMENT OF CONFLICT ANALYSIS AND RESOLUTION (DCAR)

Because Society Can Change . . .

It is not enough to manage conflicts. It is also important to build for peace in the future. We don't just study ways to prevent disputes—we also study peacemaking. Our lively learning environment offers the philosophical basis for conflict resolution as well as practical, specific tools of the trade. You will be able to practice the principles of conflict resolution in almost any significant situation you will face in life.

The Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences (SHSS) is celebrating 15 years of excellence.

The Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences has grown not only in enrollment but also in the number of programs offered over the past 15 years. SHSS offers doctoral, master's, graduate certificate, and graduate minor programs in conflict analysis and resolution, family therapy, peace studies, college student personnel administration, health care conflict resolution, family systems healthcare, and family studies. SHSS also offered joint graduate degree programs the Criminal Justice Institute and the Shepard Broad Law Center. Most of the graduate programs are offered in both on-campus and online formats.

What makes SHSS unique is that its programs are multidisciplinary learning processes that provide hands-on experience. Family therapy students learn to cultivate their skills at the school's Brief Therapy Institute, a clinical site that provides therapeutic assistance to couples and families. The Department of Conflict Analysis and Resolution provides practical experience in mediation and other professional skills application through its Community Resolution Services, which provides direct services and trainings through community organizations and agencies.
