Traditions

Carrie Fertig

The past, present, and future all mix into one, Memories and rituals from when a family had first begun.

Children live their lives and don't think about their past,

Not realizing that they are growing up too fast.

Days go by, and they have no regard for family treasures,

It makes a major tragedy for them to fulfill an old relative's simple pleasures.

Being near their family on occasions and holidays,

Is all someone can wish for in so many ways.

So live your life to its fullest, with comfort, joy, and love as it abounds,

Keep the people who matter most to you always around.

Don't lose sight of family from the present and the past,

For you never know which day might be your last.

Live your life with no regrets, so you never look back and say,

I wish I had done this or that, or lived my life
a different way.
