4. Pedagogical Innovations

Faculty	Description of Pedagogical Innovation
Bertha K. Amisi	Designing and delivering an Academic Writing course for DCRS students. This course is offered for the first time by the Department of Conflict Resolution Studies. I developed a course syllabus in collaboration with the Dr. Robin Cooper. Dr. Cooper and Dr. Ismael Muvungi and I, selected the required texts for the course. I organized the course round revising a previous written assignment as a way for students to a) identify the extent to which they addressed the different aspects of academic writing learned, and b) use their learning to address problems identified. Students also studied two articles from Conflict Resolution Quarterly as a first step to their becoming familiar with academic writing styles in the field of conflict resolution. Students had numerous opportunities to share their work and provide constructive feedback. I created these opportunities with the intention for students to a) practice constructive critique using the vocabulary of academic writing and b) form writing groups that support their writing beyond the course. Contributed to the development of a revised research design and program evaluation course. I initiated meetings with Dr. Mary Hope Schwoebel to collaborate on developing a new syllabus on research and program evaluation. The outcome was an agreement of the major themes to be addressed in the course.
Elena Bastidas	Practicum Course on Conflict and International Development
Mark Cavanaugh	Developed podcasts and technologically sophisticated video lectures for various online sociology courses. The videos integrate live lectures with original PowerPoint presentations (which are heavily animated).
Neil Katz	Adapted Conflict Intervention course CARD 6639 to focus role of Ombuds, including tools, techniques, and models, as well as a case study. First to teach Capstone CARM 6450 GE1 – Masters students' opportunity to bridge theory-and-practice by way of an independent Scholarship of Engagement Project that demonstrates competency in the areas of theory, research and methods (services).
Eileen Smith-Cavros	Prepared syllabus and worked with Office of Service Learning to add a service-learning optional component to Introduction to Sociology 1020

4. Pedagogical Innovations

Faculty	Description of Pedagogical Innovation
Flemons, Douglas	Recorded a hypnosis demonstration with a volunteer in front of the class during the first weeks of the semester for course on Ericksonian Hypnotherapy (Systemic Family Therapy 4). Each class member was assigned a portion of the recording to transcribe, employing the research methodology of Conversation Analysis. Once their detailed transcripts were accurate, the students uploaded them to a wiki on Blackboard; their combined efforts created a seamless document that accurately depicted the demonstration. For two of the four questions of the final exam for the course, students drew from the wiki to demonstrate their sophisticated understanding of the principles and methods of hypnosis. The different facets of the assignment gave the students the opportunity to practice new skills as qualitative process researchers as they developed their expertise in hypnosis.
