LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor,

In response to Margaret Weber's letter in the March 26, 1984 in the Nova Knight Newsletter:

Although Ms. Weber made some good points, I believe that she should not have attacked the student body in such a defamatory manner. As S.G.A. President, I have worked closely with the Cheerleaders and "those who go to LaVolcanique Parties". I can assure you, Ms. Weber, that this student body is not ignorant. Furthermore, I truly believe that a majority of the apathy which we do encounter among the student population is due to a fundamental lack of University facilities, as well as a lack of available information on Student Issues. By the way, Ms. Weber, although we are "ignorant, listless and apathetic", I assure you that many of us can competently discuss political, social, and scholastic issues with you.

--Respectfully yours, Edward L. Artau S.G.A. President To the editor.

Unfortunately, I have had to resort to sensationalizing my opinions to get hard feedback from what was previously a lethargic student body. Now that I have your attention, let's stop throwing mud and look at things objectively.

Of double-standards, why is it that one writer is allowed the use of profanity in denouncing another's opinion, but the other is jumped-on for using medical terms to express liberated opinions about a "liberal" movement? Being "liberal" does have its repressive side. I mention ERA in terms of an attitude, a movement, not in terms of legislation. The Equal Rights Amendment may have been a political piece, but the ERA movement to which I refer has strong sexual implications. Subsequently the "liberal" women of our society would like to deny the existence of sexual variations (S&M, promiscuity) of other members of their sex. I personally have had experiences with intelligent, sexually liberated women whose behavior would shock their "liberal" peers.

The sticky issue of the four men who raped a woman in a bar in Mass. is a battleground exemplifying the futility of both liberal and conservative sides. But why would I5,000 people march for the release of common rapists? Perhaps there is something about the woman we are not being informed of. Perhaps she has a sexual variance, a promiscuous reputation, the existence of which our "liberal" society would rather not admit. As "liberal" as many of us would like to think ourselves to be, we find this possibility unacceptable.

Liberal in my opinion, since there is no concrete definition of the word, is liberation, which in my perspective is a far-away dream. To get there we would have to move to a higher plane, a different direction than the side-to-side movements of liberal and conservative. We should be free to practice, print, express our opinions no matter how offensive, disturbing, "liberal", "radical", or "conservative" they may be.

Anthony Arculeo, C.O.

And though I may have lost some credibility, I tripled the readership, lit a fire under some, and don't see anyone laughing it off!

GOPHER TORTOISES OR COMPUTER CORPORATIONS?
FIND OUT HOW THE HAPLESS GOPHER TORTOISE IS COMPETING WITH COMPUTER CORPORATIONS FOR PRIME HABITAT ALONG SILICON BEACH IN FORT LAUDERDALE--AND WHAT IT CAN MEAN TO YOU

At noon Wednesday, April 2nd, in Parker 242, a slide show will be presented especially for Nova University students and staff, by a resident lobbiest who will inform you what you have to gain--and lose--in one of Fort Lauderdale's most important current environmental issues.

This summer a conservation project was initiated to preserve a rapidly disappearing element of Broward County. Namely, an 18-acre remnant of an extremely unusual type of habitat, termed "scrub."

This last vestige of a plant community unique to Florida is located at the north end of the Fort Lauderdale Executive Airport. The site supports many Threatened, Rare, and vanishing plants and animals, including a healthy population of gopher tortoises.

The site is also nearly the last portion of property not presently leased or sold for development by the Airport. The landowner, the City of Fort Lauderdale, hopes eventually to be able to lease the land for development, thereby benefitting the airport, which is presently in the red.

Computer corporations have developed virtually all of the formerly occurring scrub habitat, creating what is known to some as "silicon beach" because of the abundant white sand. The characteristic white sand is a decisive factor in the existence of scrub habitat. Scrub occurs strictly on ancient marine bars left by the higher sea levels of earlier ice ages.

Although the name, scrub, is rather homely, the habitat consists of incredibly fascinating communities and systems that must be seen to be believed. And as small as the area is, it lucidly illustrates many classical ecological principles only recently discovered, yet basic to the existence of life on earth. Scrub is Florida's desert, and its beauty is the naked, severe beauty of the desert, where every living creature impresses those who find them there with the simple fact that they survive.

Take advantage of what may be the last opportunity to acquaint yourself with this natural feature, and become informed enough to decide for yourself which side you stand on in the issue of its preservation.
