Editorials-Letters

Triumphs of the Spirit

The object was to create something where almost nothing had been before. The spirit was present but the proper facilities, experience and guidance were lacking. It was a scrawny excuse for a newspaper, eight pages with pictures looking as if they had been engraved on pieces of bread. The editorial staff fitted easily in one car. In an all-night seige amid torn papers, BLT sandwiches and transfer type letters, the first issue went to the xerox machine. And yet when Elizabeth Armstrong, assistant editor, looked at the result the next morning, she was pleasantly surprised: "It was quite good. Somehow it all held together."

Not everyone agreed with Liz's estimate. At any rate, The Nova Knight caught on, and it became part of Nova College; its presence reaffirmed in the rapidly increasing circulation. Its style with its inverted prose, typos, run on sentences and piled up adjectives was endlessly spoofed, notably in one of Dr. Alford's classes (Let's go over the Sports Page, 101).

The fact is, however, that not many publications (if any) of this kind have survived the Nova apathy, thrived, and become a necessary part of the college. Without undue self-congratulation and with much gratitude to our readers, we are proud that The Nova Knight did.

The Knight's tone was flip and irreverent, but the paper combined with this, certain values. These included honesty, reliability, and accuracy. Although I did not expect striking, unprecedented news stories to appear every seven days, on deadline, I did hope to recognize them when I saw them. It was rarely that simple.

We are in the "business" of making judgements and we do not claim objectivity, which from the start we considered impossible and undesirable. Instead we aimed for fairness and balance. A number of individual voices have been heard in the Knight. Even so, we maintained a broad consistency of policy and beliefs.

The basic form of Knigh- journalism was the narrative -- chronological narrative when possible. But increasingly, exposition and analysis had to supplement narration.

Journalism can never be silent: that is its greatest virtue and its greatest fault. It must speak, and speak immediately, while the echoes of wonder, the claims of triumph are still in the air. The Knigh has spoken once a week for the last year and, in so doing, helped break some of the apathy and provide valuable information.

I am certain that this is exactly what The Nova Knight will be doing next year.

Under Investigation...

In an effort to keep students informed of the progress on the pursuit of an on-campus bookstore (which the Central Administration of Nova University has agreed to investigate), The Nova Knight asked the S.G.A. President for an update on this matter.

According to Mr. Artau, "Vice President of Finance James Guerdon is still looking at the alternatives; he is meeting with Follet College Book Services again this week."

The Central Administration will be further interested in having an on-campus bookstore after they look over the suggestions from the Southern Association and Schools (SACS). According to Dan Sullivan, Director of Student Affairs, "SACS has strongly suggested that we acquire an on-campus book store."

As for now, we have to wait for final answers. How long this will take, remains to be seen.

 LEGAL STUDIES MAJOR **

The Legal Studies major is designed for students interested in preparing for law school or other graduate study, and for those seeking a liberal arts major emphasizing the central role of law in the American social fabric.

MAJOR:

Courses in the Legal Studies major range from those dealing with specialized areas of law to those which examine the relationship of law and legal institutions to contemporary society and the ways law is influenced by the values, behavior and organization of social, economic and political systems.

The Legal Studies faculty is drawn from Nova College, Nova University Law School, other graduate centers of Nova University, and from judges and practicing attorneys in the legal community.

Please notify the Student Affairs Office (P245) if you are interested.

Important

If you have less than sixty credits and are receiving financial aid you will be cut off from the assistance if you do not take the CLAST exam. The deadline for registering for the CLAST is Friday May 3, 1985. Contact the Student Affairs office (P-245) for an application form.

POOL TOURNAMENT RESULTS

On Tuesday, April 30, 1985, the last game of the pool tournament was played. The tournament was continued from last week with many players being defeated and many more never showing up for the games. The final match was between Alex Capaldi and Richard Curry. The end of the game left three balls on the table, one for each player and the eight ball. Alex shot to sink his last ball but missed. Richard grinned and in two shots won the game and the money. The pool pot money had dwindled from forty dollars to fourteen dollars. The paltry sum did not disturb Curry, he was saddened only at the competition. After his win Curry stated, "Too bad I won't be here next year to take the amateurs' money again. Remember, experience rules." Congratulations Richard, and don't spend the money all in one place!!
