Ph.D. in Information Systems

The Information Systems doctoral (DISS) program is especially well-suited to professionals working in areas such as information system planning, information security, systems analysis and design, project management, information system administration, information science, or software engineering.

The uniquely structured Ph.D. in Information Systems program combines traditional and online instruction to give professionals the opportunity to pursue graduate study while continuing to work in their current positions. It provides information technology professionals with the knowledge and ability to develop creative solutions to substantive, real-world problems in information systems. Each student must complete eight courses, two research courses, and a dissertation.

Admissions Requirements

- online application (apply.nova.edu)
- $50 application fee (nonrefundable)
- an earned master's degree with a GPA of at least 3.25 from a regionally accredited institution and with an appropriate major
- sealed official transcripts from all institutions attended
- a résumé/curriculum vitae (CV)
- essay
- three letters of recommendation

International students should visit cec.nova.edu/admissions for additional requirements.
