The Solitude of the City Night by Nicole Wiesenthal

The plane peeks out of the Black night sky
Its sound soars
Through the night
Like a churning, roaring
Machine gobbling up the space
It fills the void of the night
With a sweet emptiness
Straight from a packet
Of grainy brown sugar
The red lights flash on in
The distance as the People sleep cozily inside
Biding their time as they
Return home or arrive
In a new destination...
Characterized by soaring
Steel skyscrapers
And a silence only
Broken by the rusty
Whirring of the engine
Of the metal bird in the sky.
