ABOUT PEACE AND CONFLICT STUDIES (PCS)

PCS is committed to interdisciplinary explorations on conflict resolution, peacebuilding, humanitarian assistance, and other alternative mechanisms that seek to prevent and control violence. PCS is also interested in articles focusing on promoting social change and nonviolence: sustainable development, ecological balance, community revitalization, reflective practice, action research, social justice, human rights, gender equality, intercultural relations, grassroots movements and organizational transformations. Manuscripts may address various human experiences, social issues, and policy agendas that are connected to the literature, practice, and experiential learning in the fields. As a semiannual academic journal, PCS is published in both print and online formats (<http://shss.nova.edu/pcs/>). Views expressed in articles and other contributions that appear in PCS may not necessarily reflect endorsement by the Editorial Board or Staff. PCS provides opportunities and forums for dialogs over various ideas, assessments, recommendations, and critiques.

Peace and Conflict Studies is indexed and/or abstracted in Peace Research Abstracts Journal, Public Affairs Information Service, Sociological Abstracts, ERIC, Psychological Abstracts, PsychINFO, Political Science Manuscripts, International Political Science Abstracts and Worldviews.

About the Authors

John Lord Alderdice, was educated at Queen's University Belfast, graduating in Medicine in 1978. He specialised in psychiatry and psychotherapy and was appointed Ireland's first Consultant Psychotherapist in 1988. He is a Fellow and Honorary Fellow of the Royal College of Psychiatrists and an Honorary Affiliate of the British Psychoanalytical Society. To apply his psychological ideas to political conflict resolution he entered Northern Ireland politics and served as elected leader of the non-sectarian Alliance Party from 1987 to 1998. During this time he was one of the key negotiators of the Good Friday Agreement. In 1998 he was elected to the new Northern Ireland Assembly established under this Agreement and appointed its Speaker. He is also a member of the British House of Lords, and the Deputy President of Liberal International, the world-wide federation of 90 liberal political parties.

Michael A. Cowan was educated at Loyola University (Chicago), graduating in psychology in 1967. He holds master's and doctoral degrees in psychology from the Ohio State University and a master's degree in systematic theology from St. John's University (Collegeville). He currently serves as professor and executive director of the Lindy Boggs National Center for Community Literacy, Loyola University New Orleans. He is a founding leader of three interracial, civil-society organizations: the Jeremiah Group (the New Orleans Industrial Areas Foundation [IAF] affiliate); Shades of Praise: The New Orleans Interracial Gospel Choir; and the Literacy Alliance of Greater New Orleans. He has lectured, consulted, and learned in Northern Ireland annually for the last 20 years. He can be reached at MCowan@city.loyno.edu

Patsy Palmer has served on the staffs of two Florida Governors, a Florida House Speaker, a Florida Senate President and the Carter White House. She holds a Master's degree in conflict resolution from Antioch University and a Master's degree in theological studies from Harvard Divinity School. Her interests are in children's issues, community building and the civil society. This fall, she will enter law school at The Florida State University. She can be reached at patspalm@aol.com.

Marc Howard Ross is William R. Kenan, Jr. Professor of Political Science at Bryn Mawr College where he has taught since 1968. He received his degree in political science at Northwestern University and in addition he spent a year studying at the Philadelphia School for Psychoanalysis. He has done research in East Africa, France, Northern Ireland, the Middle East, Spain and

South Africa. His current work has two major themes (1) social science theories of conflict and their implications for conflict management and (2) the role that cultural performance and memory play in the escalation and deescalation of ethnic conflict. He has written or edited six books including The Culture of Conflict and The Management of Conflict both published by Yale University Press and several dozen articles that have appeared in diverse academic journals. He can be reached at mross@brynmawr.edu

Tracy Wallach, trained as a clinical social worker and worked as a psychotherapist in various organizations and in private practice for 20 years. For the past 10 years, she has been an organization development and leadership consultant based in Brookline, MA. Her clients have included manufacturing, health care, social service and public sector organizations. She has taught extensively on the topics of group and organizational dynamics, leadership, conflict, and communication in professional, organizational and academic settings, both in the US and abroad. She holds a Masters Degree in Social Work from Smith College and has done post graduate work in Organization Development and Human Resource Consultation at the Boston Institute for Psychotherapy. Currently, she serves as President of the Center for the Study of Groups and Social Systems (Boston Affiliate, AKRI), and is a past board member of AK Rice Institute for the Study of Social Systems. She can be reached at tracywallach@aol.com.

Alvin W. Wolfe, is Distinguished University Professor Emeritus, Department of Anthropology, at the University of South Florida. For thirty (30) years he coordinated applied anthropology internships and taught courses in network analysis. With his students, he has been applying formal network analysis to many social situations, including personal support networks and networks within and among organizations, especially in the area of health and human services. Dr. Wolfe serves as Resident for the Society for Applied Anthropology (SFAA). In 1994, he organized, with Honggang Yang, the Southern Anthropological Society's Key Symposium on Anthropological Contributions to Conflict Resolution, the Proceedings of which were published in 1996. Professor Wolfe was among the founders of the Sunbelt Social Network Conference, as well as the International Network for Social Network Analysis. In 2001, he founded the Florida Health and Human Services Board, Inc. He can be reached at wolfe@chumal.cas.usf.edu

Honggang Yang is the Dean and Professor at the School of Humanities and Social Sciences (SHSS) at NSU. He is an anthropologist by training, and worked for The Carter Presidential Center of Emory University. He chaired and taught in the Antioch program in conflict resolution. He has served on several leadership councils and boards, and is currently on the editorial boards for Conflict Resolution Quarterly, and American Review of China Studies. In 1998-1999, he launched the distance learning programs in conflict resolution at the SHSS with the support of his colleagues and students. His specialties include reflective practice, distance and experiential learning, and ethnographic methods. He can be reached at yangh@nova.edu
