Painting: Lacrosse by Leith Van Schalkwyk

Untitled by Eric Rosenthal

Another face amongst the sea of faces in a crowd.

Behind those who are known, I am not,

Could never be noticed by others.

Don't really care what they think.

Enough with the norms and the typical.

Forgotten but not out of mind.

Generality and simplicity

Hopelessness and individuality

If one were to be different

Jests would be assumed.

Knowledge is lost among the youth.

Leaving it all behind.

Moving on but not completely forgotten.

Never completely out of mind.

Opened as if they were a book.

Putting all the secrets in view.

Questions are asked but still cannot be answered.

Revealing a side that should be hidden.

Seeing what should have been concealed.

Thrusting the truth into the world.

Underneath the same and identical

Very much are they thought to be similar

When in reality they are diverse

Xeroxes are what we see, but when

Yearning

Zephyrs go by, they reveal how they were different all along.
