Nova Southeastern University is one of the most evaluated universities in the country; it has undergone scrutiny to meet regulations in over 30 states. The more than 2,000 PHE doctoral graduates have a strong record of being recognized by employers for promotion in academic rank, for appointment to positions of greater responsibility, and for increased salary benefits.

CLUSTERS

Clusters are channels through which instruction and other services are provided to program participants. Generally, program participants from the same geographic area are assigned to a specific group in that area (see cluster list below). The faculty, all of whom have doctoral degrees, are recognized scholars from Nova Southeastern University and other major universities and institutions across the country. They are contracted on the basis of their subject expertise, teaching abilities, and professional involvements.

PHE students are involved with education, training, or development in their respective work settings. Their employers include both public and private colleges and universities, hospitals, the federal government, religious organizations, the military, and private corporations. PHE students come from diverse cultures and backgrounds. The current median age group is 46-50 years; 58 percent are female and 42 percent are male.

PROGRAM DELIVERY AND COMPONENTS

Delivery

The Nova Southeastern University field-based delivery system combines formal instruction, supervised independent study, collaboration, and applied research. During the first two academic years, formal instruction takes place for the six core seminars. National lecturers teach/facilitate these seminars one Saturday a month at the local sites. Cluster staff lead program-related workshops each Friday night preceding the seminar. Program participants research and write the required practicum reports at the same time they are completing the core seminars. At the appropriate time, participants sit for the comprehensive examination, and in the third year they are ready to begin work on the major applied research project. The specialization seminars, which are unique to each specialization, are offered in conjunction with the summer institutes.

SUMMER INSTITUTES

Students must attend two week-long summer institutes. These conferences bring together students, faculty, and nationally known educators. Formal and informal sessions provide ample opportunity for elaboration on the application of theory to current issues in education.

PRACTICUMS

Practicums are applied research projects designed to put theory into practice through identifying and solving current work-related problems. Four practicums must be successfully completed.

COMPREHENSIVE EXAMINATION

All students must pass a comprehensive examination following completion of seminars and practicums. The written exam assesses the student's ability to address broadly significant educational issues based on a foundation of knowledge and perspective.

MARP

The major applied research project (MARP) is the capstone of the PHE doctoral program and Nova Southeastern University's equivalent of the typical dissertation. The purpose of the MARP is to identify, research, and solve a major work-related problem, leading to an educational improvement.
