Otto Peters is professor emeritus at the FernUniversität in Hagen, Germany. He studied education, psychology, and philosophy at the Humboldt Universität and the Free University in Berlin and earned his doctorate at the University of Tübingen. Since 1965, he has been active in describing and interpreting distance education at the Educational Centre in Berlin and, as professor of didactics, in Berlin. In 1975, he became founding rector of the FernUniversität in Hagen and served in this function for nearly 10 years, after which he devoted his time exclusively to the examination of pedagogical and didactic problems in distance education. In 1998 he was appointed consulting professor of the Radio and Television University of Shanghai.

Peters has published extensively in the field of distance education, writing or editing more than 20 books. His books and articles, translated into several languages, have been influential in characterizing distance education as a vibrant, distinct, and innovative form of education. Peters is best known for his description of distance education as an industrialized form of education. These views, first expressed in a landmark 1973 article, continue to evolve. His latest book is Learning and Teaching in Distance Education (Kogan Page, 1998).

An open and enthusiastic communicator, Peters is an active participant at international conferences on traditional and distance education. For eight years, he served as vice president of the International Council for Distance Education and, in 1999, he was awarded the ICDE Prize of Excellence.

Otto Peters lives in Hagen, Germany, with his wife, Sabine.

Changing Learning—Learning to Change

Over the past decades—particularly the last decade—important debate has been raised about the need to rethink the roles of learning and knowledge and how centers that are involved in the promotion/facilitation of learning and the production of knowledge (such as universities) should adapt to the circumstances of our time.

The panel will be composed of the following participants:

Ray Ferrero, Jr., President, Nova Southeastern University, Fort Lauderdale, Florida
Otto Peters, Professor Emeritus, FernUniversität, Hagen, Germany
Ron Burnett, President, Emily Carr Institute of Art and Design, Vancouver, BC, Canada
Fabio Chacon, Corporate Training Manager, INTESA, Caracas, Venezuela:
Adjunct Professor, Nova Southeastern University, ITDE Program

The panel will be chaired and the discussion facilitated by Jan Visser, president of the Learning Development Institute.
