Nova’s graduate program in Speech-language pathology addresses the critical shortage ...

This graduate program prepares students for a professional life providing speech-language services to communicatively handicapped individuals.

We are committed to providing a comprehensive clinical program that builds the student’s knowledge base and enhances skills necessary to impact the lives of clients and their families.

- can be completed in two to three years
- provides preparation for the Certificate of Clinical Competence awarded by ASHA
- offers needed flexibility for the working professional

Who is Eligible?
- persons holding a Florida teacher certificate in speech correction
- persons holding a bachelor’s degree in another field, once they have completed the prerequisite courses available as part of the program
- undergraduate students who take specified speech-language courses as electives
- professionals needing courses for recertification

Clinical Training Sites
- The Nova University Communication Disorders Center for clients of all ages
- The Baudhuin School for hearing and language handicapped infants and children
- The Family Center for infants, children, and their families
- Nova affiliated clinical sites including hospitals, schools, health agencies, and private practices

The Faculty

Faculty members are clinicians who are recognized for their outstanding professional capabilities. Academic and research information is supported with examples from the faculty’s daily clinical experiences.

All clinical supervision is provided by experienced professionals holding the Certificate of Clinical Competence in Speech-language pathology or audiology.

Your Career Options

Upon completion of the Nova program, you will be eligible to apply to the American Speech-Language and Hearing Association for the Certificate of Clinical Competence. After passing the Association’s examination and successful completion of the Clinical Fellowship Year (CFY), you can obtain licensure as a speech and language pathologist in Florida and most other states.

The following career options are open to you:
- private practice, either full-time or part-time;
- practice in clinical settings such as hospitals, public health departments, and public and private agencies;
- practice in public and private schools with enhanced potential for professional and financial advancement;
- group practice with other professionals working in related areas.
