Sunlight

Sara Gusky

As I stand at the top of the run,
I look up and down shines the sun.
Through the trees a pleasant glow,
The illusion of diamonds is just the snow.
I glance across to the Gore Range,
The clearness of the day is rather strange.
The sky is so blue; the air is so clean,
The mountainous area is more than pristine.
I ski down a little ways,
But again I am distracted by the sun's warming rays.
I take a deep breath and look down below,
A tall evergreen sways to and fro.
Animal footprints cover the ground,
Small claws to big paws, wildlife surrounds.
Nature is the only sound I hear,
The light winds whisper in my ear.
Everything here is so peaceful and sound,
I must force myself to go back down.
