Transcending

Lea Hirsch

Little pictures blurred and fading.
From the very beginning swirling in a massive abyss
They wait for recovery.
Waiting to be recalled, waiting to be remembered.
Blending in, the picture seems never to be complete,
There's always a new discovery.
As time ends and bends with the weight on your back the picture's gray.
Flowing down the eternal stream glide all your hopes and dreams.
The little pictures melt in the heat of the sun.
What was once a newly-born soul will now meet eternity.
Its whole life, it has waited for this moment
dreaded the moment
prayed for this moment never to come.
When life seems infinite at this very moment, everything starts to fade.
Falter, for one moment...realize...
no more will anyone betray you.
No longer will you live in suffering.
No longer will you lie and wait for destiny.
What you were hiding from and wishing to avoid for what seems forever you can now view blissfully
You accept the path
you don't look back
you're on your way.
The gates have opened and you can finally move on.
