Prison

Jonathan Jerome

Criminals banished from society,
Sent to a dark and gloomy place.
Walls as tall as mountains,
Topped with barbs as sharp as glass.

A dark cloud hovers overhead,
As another day of imprisonment passes by.
Families are torn apart and suffer everyday,
As their loved ones sit pondering all alone.

Guarded every hour of every day,
Freedom seems like a light at the end of a tunnel.
It keeps moving closer and closer,
As the endless days and nights go by.
