Still Got Wood? Oh, Yeah...

by Piper Griff & Jessica Montes

With the most incredible turn-out Got Wood has ever seen, Still Got Wood was more than just a mingling event. Looking at the packed audience and listening to all the yells and applause, one would honestly forget they were outside the Goodwin Dorms. The bonfire burned bright, but not quite as bright as the band, Big Sky. Maybe it was the energy of the audience, or the beat of the band, or possibly the fruity frozen drinks, whatever it was, it worked; SGA and CEC worked hard and it paid off - Still Got Wood 2000 was fun in the flames for everyone.

SGA decided to celebrate Still Got Wood (the third Got Wood) after realizing the importance of welcoming new and returning students to NSU. The Campus Entertainment Committee (CEC), headed by senior Jennifer White, takes pride in its hard work on the event. Since we are currently experiencing incredible development and interest in student involvement at NSU, 'Got Wood' was the perfect way to start the year. 'It's an event that make students excited and anxious about coming back to school," said Jennifer White. She started organizing this event in May of 2000 and with the help of the entire Student Government Association pulled off an unforgettable night.

In the middle of the field outside of the Goodwin dorms a huge bonfire blazed. Still God Wood had over 50 lit tiki torches, Polynesian dancers, Gainesville's own Big Sky band, a DJ, authentic Polynesian cuisine and frozen island beverages, a limbo contest; a prize to Key West, and T-shirt giveaways. But what really made the event something special was the amount of people who attended and especially those who participated. No, that does not include the few of you who could not resist the temptation of jumping on stage to sing at will.

Still Got Wood will be a hard act to follow. Let's hope the same enthusiasm and participation continues throughout the year.

Welcome Students, from Public Safety

The Nova Southeastern University's Public Safety Department is here to provide you with assistance, security information, and protection. The NSU Public Safety Department is open twenty-four hours per day, seven days per week. We use patrolling officers to observe and deter crimes on campus. Our 24-hour number is 262-8999. For general, non-emergency information you can call our office at 262-8981, Monday through Friday from 8:30am until 5:00pm. You can also access the Public Safety Department web page at www.nova.edu/cwis/pubsafety.

I am the crime prevention/investigations coordinator for Nova Southeastern University's Public Safety Department. I also act as the liaison for the residential halls and Public Safety.
A Lively Start to More Fun and Games

by Althea Mease
Staff Writer

On Wednesday, Student Life kicked off a series of games with a Nova theme. Wednesday’s event featured versions of three classic game shows from the ’70s: Classic Concentration, Wheel of Fortune, and Card Shark. All students were welcome to play, and the winners received NovaBucks as prizes. The most popular games, Card Shark and Wheel of Fortune, will be continued over the next two months, with tournaments for the winners of each game.

Everyone is familiar with the popular game show “Wheel of Fortune,” where contestants spin a giant colorful wheel to select a prize, then try and fill in blanks in a word or phrase correctly to win the prize. Nova’s version, hosted by Tom Vitucci, featured a similar giant wheel, with NovaBuck prizes and Nova-themed phrases. Even The Knight’s own Associate Editor Peter Salerno won 200 NovaBucks by correctly guessing the phrase, “Thank God It’s Friday.”

“Card Shark” is a classic game that may not be quite so familiar to younger students. Two contestants face off answering questions about a survey. A host reads the question, the first contestant estimates the percentage involved, and the other contestant guesses whether the actual number is higher or lower than the estimate. If the second contestant is correct, he/she goes on to win further prizes using a set of oversized cards. Frank Majerich hosted Nova’s version of “Card Shark.” To make this game Nova-themed, the questions centered around an informal survey of 100 Nova students. See the box to the right for selected questions used in the game on Wednesday, guaranteed to make one think twice about the “normal” students one passes in the hall.

The games were entertaining, but this is only the beginning. Many more students should attend future games of “Wheel of Fortune” and “Card Shark” to claim their fair shares of the prizes. Card Sharks will be featured first, during the month of September. The games will be held near the Parker building each week on Thursday, starting September 14. The tournament for Card Sharks will be held the Thursday of Homecoming week. Wheel of Fortune will start the Thursday after the Card Sharks tournament, and will continue until its tournament is held on November 2. Generous prizes will be awarded at the games. Watch for announcements from the Student Life office for specific details on times, locations, and prizes. For those who just cannot get enough of those classic game shows, Student Life is working on a series of similar events, starting in January after this series is completed.

Located throughout the campus are blue light telephones. These tele­phones connect you directly with Public Safety for any questions or concerns you may have.

General Rules for Safety

To help keep you safe, remember the following rules:

- Keep residence and vehicle doors locked at all times.
- Always exercise, walk, or jog with a friend or partner.
- Be aware of unusual or suspicious persons or conditions.
- Always stay in well-lit areas on campus.
- Call Novaalert at 262-8999 to report any unusual activity or crimes.
- Avoid giving strangers any information about yourself and do not meet strangers alone. Meet in a public place and bring a friend.

Tip: Protect Your Good Name From Bad People

Identity theft is on the rise so please take the necessary precautions to prevent becoming a victim. If your wallet or purse is ever stolen, and you feel as though someone has stolen your identity as well, call the Federal Trade Commission at 1-877-438-4338 to file a report.

On behalf of Public Safety, have a safe school year!
We arrive at the designated nowhere in particular. Having been strategically plucked from our parents, we are herded as cattle through a line of forced smiles and blue bags which are never to be left behind, lest we be consumed by the monster who eats children lacking this protective accessory. In a flash we are in our rooms, searching desperately for the AC control. So hot, so very hot. (We are later informed it is hidden against a wall.) Classrooms, testing, tours, “Don’t forget the blue bag.” It’s all so fast, so hot, so very hot and humid. Are any buildings air conditioned?

“Why didn’t they tell us we had to take ID photos?” “My hair looks horrible!” “Oh God, I’m so fat!” the cries of frantic teenaged girls shrieking throughout the flight deck, the boys taking advantage of the free condoms from the Wellness Center. There really is nothing like testosterone in mass display. Mind you, Orientation in general was fun if you met the right people, but it was busy; hot and busy.

Having been sent through such a rigorous day, one would think we would be allowed time to rest. I’m afraid not. There was still a mandatory party to attend. Forced fun, how interesting. Even considering that the days events for Team 2 consisted of an off road golf cart ride in the rain with a driver who we believe was displaying classic signs of inebriation, no rest was in sight. We must have fun, we must laugh and dance and smile, and we MUST limbo.

The party itself was not all that bad. The horrid part came when the

by Piper Griff

Editor in Chief

The Flight Deck has somehow done it again. After the much anticipated (and needed) Up All Night food program went over smoothly, the Deck has decided to take their customers another step. In conjunction with the new food program that was started late last year, the Flight Deck will now be serving beer and wine seven days a week. The new service is already up and running, for those of you 21 and up. The food program will be cooking up again in a few weeks.

The Flight Deck is open during the week from 10am until 12pm, and during the hours of 5pm and 11 pm they will be serving beer and wine. On Saturday and Sunday the Deck is open from 10am-8pm, and will be serving alcohol from 1pm until 7pm. But, Saturdays are reserved for private parties - parties that any club or organization can arrange.

Of course, the Deck will continue with their traditional programs, like T.G.I.F and Monday Night Football, but it looks like customers will have a lot to look forward to where new programs are concerned, such as the new "Revenge of the Nerds" contest with a nerd laughing competition, tricycle races, poultry bowling, and naturally, a nerdy dress contest. In conjunction with the "Domestic Male" contest that will be held again this year after last year’s great turn-out, the Deck will be hosting a "Miss Tina Tool" competition. On the last T.G.I.F before the undergrads take off for the holidays look for the "Macy’s Day Parade" – yes in the Flight Deck.

The Flight Deck will continue will their dollar beers and wines all week, but for those picky drinkers, the Deck has added some more expensive beverages. Drinks for $3, $2, $1 will now be sold, and the selection is about three times as large as last year’s. You can even find six different flavored wine coolers. Stay tuned for some incredible specials they will be offering as well.

For those returning to the Flight Deck from last year, things have changed a bit. The Deck will no longer be using tickets for beer and wine. Instead you pay at the bar. Same goes for the wristbands/hand stamps: get them at the bar when you prove you are of age. There will also be no more free water and soda, but the prices are going to stay low. There will still be that glorious free buffet for T.G.I.F and Monday Night Football.

The Flight Deck is really a treat on campus. How can you go wrong with free pool and ping-pong, quality food when the cafeteria is closed, and an entire staff with attitudes that make anyone feel welcome? Last week’s T.G.I.F was quite a success. BETA did an awesome job with Singled-Out, but it would not have gone on, or had gone as smoothly, if it weren’t for the Flight Deck staff. Support this service on campus. It is really here for you!

Nova’s Advancement Towards Understanding & Researching the Environment (NATURE) is NSU’s award-winning environmental organization. Members organize and sponsor on-campus and community events that foster the protection of the environment. The organization’s fundamental goals are to educate the campus on current environmental issues and to promote environmentally friendly activities.

Each semester, NATURE plans a plethora of events. One of the most well known events has been the environmentally-themed coffeehouse talks. Open to anyone, these coffeehouses offer a relaxing atmosphere where one can meet new people while enjoying the free food and drinks. Each coffeehouse includes a discussion on various environmental and other related issues. Previous year’s discussions have included topics like gender issues as well as the environment. Other club activities are centered around Earth Day celebrations, campus and beach clean-ups, and blood drives.

Presently, the club consists of a small group of dedicated students who are looking for more environmentally concerned and active individuals. Club meetings are usually held twice a month. All inquiries should be directed to: NATURE@list.nova.edu.

Our Mutual Covenants

by Dr. Norma M. Goosen
Dean, Farquhar Center

As we start this academic year, I wanted to reflect on our future together as a learning community and the relationship between you, our students, and us, the faculty, staff, and administration of the Farquhar Center. This is an excerpt from an address I gave at Welcome Night, August 27, 2000:

Being famous is a matter of perception. I bet you cannot recall, for the past five years, who won the Pulitzer prize, the Nobel prize, the Heisman Trophy, the Oscar for the Best Picture Award, or even the last five Vice Presidents of the United States. And these are not inconsequential honors. They are top achievers, la crème de la crème in their respective fields. However, I bet you would easily remember five people who have been kind to you, five friends who have helped you in a difficult time, three people you enjoy spending time with, and even a few teachers who have taught you something important, who have inspired you and challenged your intellect. The lesson here is that fame is relative, and heroes are personal. The people who really make a difference are not the ones in the headlines, but the ones who care about you.

And that’s what I want to focus on. Because even though you are all different, you have different reasons for being here, and hail from an assortment of different cities and countries. You are now a part of Nova Southeastern University, and in particular, the Farquhar Center for Undergraduate Studies. This is a place where students are individuals, not numbers. This is a place where the faculty, staff, and administration care about you, our students. And because we care about you, we govern ourselves not just by rules and regulations, which are plentiful in every institution, but more importantly, by covenants. Covenants are promises you make to people you care for, and promises you make to yourself. Unlike rules and regulations that are imposed upon you, a promise is given freely because we care about you and want you to succeed. So I’d like to list ten promises that we make to you, our students, and perhaps later articles I will expound upon them individually:

Number one: We promise to respect you as an individual, as we expect you to respect us. We promise to get to know you, and we hope you get to know us.

Number two: We promise to offer you an honest, good-all-around education. We will give you your money’s worth in the academic arena. We’ll be passionate about our respective disciplines and show you how important they are and how they can relate to you and to the world around us. We promise that when you walk across the stage at graduation, you will have not just practical skills and knowledge about your chosen discipline, but also a true well-rounded education that lays the groundwork for lifelong learning.

Number three: We promise to challenge you. We won’t baby you or water down the content of what we are teaching to go easy on you. We believe that you can reach higher if the expectations and standards from your professors are higher.

Number four: We promise to learn not only your names, but also your preferred mode of learning. Because we realize that people learn in different ways, we will try to incorporate your learning style in our teaching.

Number five: We promise to tell you clearly what is expected of you. On the first day of the course, we will discuss what the rules and expectations are and answer your questions.

Number six: We promise that we will show you how important critical thinking, reading, and writing are if you are to be successful — in any field. We will expect no less of you than the professional world will.

Number seven: We promise that we will give you help when you ask for it. If we cannot find the answer, we will try to refer you to someone who can.

Number eight: We promise to guide you as you shape your values and beliefs about important issues, without telling you what to believe. We will, however, help you distinguish between reliable and unreliable sources of information so that you can weigh the facts, arrive at your own informed opinions, and make intelligent decisions.

Number nine: We promise to let you know how you are doing — in time for necessary corrections. Help will be there for you, if you choose to take advantage of it.

Number ten: We promise to help you learn that helping others in your community is not only your duty, but also a privilege in itself. You will know that you are among the privileged few in the world who have received a higher education and can use it to help others. We will encourage you to acquire a lifelong habit of selfless service.

By these covenants, we become a teaching and learning community. We begin a year full of hopes and challenges. And you too must make promises to yourself — to do your level best, to get involved, to take responsibility for your own learning.
Learn About Greek Life at NSU

by Dan Grenier
Staff Writer

From August 28th until September 1st, students at NSU had a chance to learn the facts about Greek life at our school. Tables were set up outside the Parker Building where the different organizations promoted Greek life on campus. The organizations participating were Delta Phi Epsilon, Zeta Pi, Phi Sigma Sigma, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Alpha Mu, Theta Delta Chi, Beta Theta Pi, and Lambda Theta Phi. Everyone displayed items that dealt with their respective organizations, but the theme of the week was "Go Greek!" Unfortunately, Greek life has been given an unfair stereotype. This week was the students' chance to find out what Greek life is all about. Joining a Greek organization may not be for every student, but if you were to ask the current members of a fraternity or sorority, I guarantee that they will tell you becoming a part of such a great group is the best decision they have made. The experience of being part of such a close group is virtually impossible to put into words. It can only be discovered.

A Greek luau was thrown on Monday, August 28th to show potential rushees the kind of fun that can be had amongst the Greeks. Rushees also had the opportunity to attend a Mar-...

Bless The Child, Only If You Have the Time

by Allison Piranio
Staff Writer

Kim Basinger’s new movie, Bless The Child, is being billed as a supernatural thriller. If people are seeing it on that premise, as this reviewer did, they may be quite disappointed. However, if the movie is looked at more as a dark spin on the classic “good vs. evil” plot, with the bonus of a cute kid, Bless The Child is not a total waste of time.

Basinger plays Maggie O’Connor, the straight-laced, responsible sister to Angela Bettis’ strung out Jenna. Jenna abandons her daughter into Maggie’s care for the first years of the child’s life, and Maggie raises her. When the child is abducted amidst a spree of child murders that are plaguing New York City, the action begins. There is a lot of religious messages in Bless The Child. The “God will triumph” message really is the cornerstone of this film.

Ultimately, after all the morbid images and destruction, the movie is uplifting. In particular, a scene where the child, played by adorable Holliston Coleman, lights a room full of prayer candles and weeps in front of the Virgin Mary is poignant, even to a non-Christian.

As the trailer for the film promises, the movie is full of evil imagery done through computer animation. The effects are not quite realistic, but do a competent job of relaying the terror that the characters were supposed to be experiencing. Like the special effects, the actors are also not quite realistic, but barely competent. Basinger’s Maggie is rather wooden and two-dimensional. This is not totally Basinger’s fault-most of the characters were written this way, more as cliches than living, breathing people.

Also quite gratifying was lazy-eyed Rufus Sewell, who played, to liberally summarize, the epitome of all evil. Sewell gives a nice menacing stare, but that is about it. Though Christina Ricci is given prominent billing, her performance is nothing but a brief cameo. She is reduced to a link that hastily gives explanation of the situation and gets the ball rolling again when the movie starts to drag. As the “Blessed Child,” Coleman was the stand-out of the film.

All in all, don’t expect to see the cast of Bless The Child holding their breath on Oscar night. The movie is a no-brainer. However, for a cheap scare, a cute kid, a quick lesson in faith from your friends in Hollywood and a way to kill a few hours, the film is worth checking out.

Napster vs. The Recording Industry

by Erica Diaz
Staff Writer

Unless you live under a rock, it has become nearly impossible to avoid the thorough media saturation about the ongoing Napster trial. For those of you who do happen to reside under a slab of granite, the synopsis is as follows: Napster allows free downloads of MP3 files to its over twenty thousand users. In the eyes of the recording industry, this violates copyright laws. The recording industry had won a small victory during a trial. Judge Patel ruled that Napster was to shut down by midnight on Friday, July 29 during the proceedings that were to follow. This had many users rushing frantically to download what they could while they could. Hank Barry and Shawn Fanning (the CEO and Founder respectively) of Napster did appeal, however, and to judge’s decision was stated. The Napster users rejoiced. This leaves users with perhaps another two to three months of uninterrupted downloads.

As a means of peaceful protest, Napster has organized a “buycott” as they have lovingly dubbed it. They are asking that supporters of the company buy albums from artists who also support Napster, and that you to let the manager of the store know that’s what you are doing. They have also asked that users and supporters of the Napster cause write letters to the heads of major record companies letting them know the positive effects Napster has had on their artists and music, and that you are “loyal and active music fans.”

This year, The Knight Newspaper will feature local bands from South Florida to further acquaint readers with the thriving scene that is largely ignored. Each issue will feature a different local band, with exclusive photos, reviews, and interviews. NSU’s Radio X plays local music and interviews local bands, and this feature will act as a supplement. The scene is expansive, and deserves more than one medium. Readers will be able to listen to all of the bands featured in The Knight by calling the Radio X request line (262-8460) during the Local Show, Thursday nights 8-9.

So, keep reading. Read about your favorite local musicians, learn about new bands you might like, and listen to them all on the radio. Also, if you know of a local band (or are a member of one) who would like to be featured, e-mail the author at measekitty@aol.com.
"Hurricane" in Dania Beach

by Althea Mease
Staff Writer

In July 2000 Dania Beach started construction on its own roller coaster. Finally, a major attraction for South Florida residents has arrived. Designed by a world-renowned wooden coaster designer, the “Dania Beach ‘Hurricane’” is one of only three wooden roller coasters in Florida. The new coaster is located right off of the I-95 in Dania beach, far more accessible than the Orlando roller coasters. The 100-foot tall wooden behemoth is one of the largest of its kind south of Atlanta. It features two trains, traveling at speeds up to 55 miles per hour. The immense project was developed by Jules Ross, of the Grand Prix Race-O-Rama, and Damaso Saavedra, a Fort Lauderdale attorney. According to Mr. Ross, the new coaster “enhances the amusement park by offering guests cutting-edge excitement right here in Dania Beach!” To see the new coaster as it is completed, as well as to find out more information, visit http://www.xcoaster.com.
United Airlines - Helpful Hints

Press Release for Traveling Students

United Airlines' pilots have been refusing to work overtime since their contract expired in April and thus United has been cancelling hundreds of flights a day (mostly from their hub in Chicago) because they do not have enough pilots. Compounding this problem is the fact that all major airlines are reporting that they are operating at the highest capacity in 40 years. This not only means that UA passengers will have a difficult time arranging alternate flights on other carriers, but other travelers will have difficulties finding ANY available seats.

"Not only are things going to be more crowded, but you're going have fewer choices, there are going to be fewer services available and it will be a genuinely less-desirable experience," said Bill Maloney of the American Association of Travel Agents.

Some tips for dealing with this situation:

1. Use United's Web site to get updates on flight cancellations at www.united.com. Getting through on the telephone is almost impossible.

2. Check with your travel consultant to get their advice and ask them to issue paper tickets for any travel you have with United. Paper tickets are more easily accepted by other carriers if you have to change airlines.

3. UA will offer refunds, even on non-refundable tickets, to all affected passengers and may even offer refunds to anyone who wants to cancel their trip. Check with your travel consultant or UA for more details.

Fall Airfare Forecast - Strong demand will push up prices for travel this Fall especially for the business traveller. Look for increases of about 10-15% for business fares. Leisure travellers who buy 2-4 weeks and stay over Saturday night will see fares similar to those for Fall 1999. Look Out for much higher fares for travel during the holiday season, especially if demand stays strong.

Buying tickets early for travel during the busy Thanksgiving and Christmas season is a must this year. In 1999, the number of complaints to the Transportation Department concerning the 10 major U.S. carriers more than doubled, ballooning to 13,709 from 5,808 in 1998. This increase occurred while the number of passengers on those carriers increased by about 16 million between 1998 and 1999 to 553.8 million, a growth of about 3 percent, the department said. Complaints could include such things as scheduling, overbooking, fares, baggage and service.

What Do Entrance Exams Represent?

by Peter Salerno
Associate Editor

All Life Science majors who intend to graduate are required to take an eight-hour exam called the MCAT (Medical College Admissions Tests) in order to be considered for admissions into any medical school in this country. The exam is designed by the AAMC (American Association of Medical Colleges) who claim that it tests all the necessarily skills required for an entering first year medical student. The exam is said to test the four basic sciences (Physics, General Chemistry, Organic Chemistry and Biology), as well as some components from other biological sciences such as anatomy, physiology, and genetics. The exam is timed-based and broken up into four separate sections, including a writing sample section. The AAMC claims that the exam should be quite "doable" for students who perform well in their undergraduate science courses and that extra help from commercially advertised companies (Kaplan & Princeton Review) probably will not raise test scores substantially.

Almost every medical school in this country believes that the MCAT serves its purpose in weeding out the students who did poorly in their sciences classes and who consequently do not belong in medical school. However, many medical school admission committees over look an interesting fact about the types of students who take the MCAT. In various studies, it has been shown that non-science majors, in particular English majors, actually perform better than science majors do. The primary reason for this is that the MCAT is considered science-based only because the various "science" sections within the exam. The exam is not a true science test that an undergraduate student would expect to see in his or her normally rigorous classes.

The exam is passage based, so all the information that is needed to answer the questions will almost always come from the passages. What makes MCAT "hard" is that you have to read and interpret the information at a speed uncommonly experienced in science tests. Since the exam is timed, each student has a little over one minute to answer each of the 219 questions through out the course of the daylong exam.

The question lies in the manner in which the test is designed. Does being able to read at an incredibly fast pace is an invaluable component to achieving a high score on either exam. The LSAT verbal sections are actually harder than the MCAT verbal section because the LSAT requires the student to make unorthodox decisions based on a small excerpt from a real-world situation that never seems to occur in the real world.

The only truth in understanding the reasoning behind entrance exams is that there aren't any real concrete reasons behind them. However, graduate schools do look poorly upon a potential candidate if his or her exam scores are below average. If an applicant is lucky enough to be considered for a graduate school position after receiving a below average entrance score, he or she must have an excellent GPA, otherwise the student will probably not be accepted. The question still exists: What does graduate school entrance exams truly illustrate, and do they really represent the true abilities of various applicants?
