Trust

Eric Diemar

Trust is a difficult idea
It is neither taught nor learned
Through experience it comes to play an important factor.
The people you trust are the people you care about
They are the ones for whom you would give your life.

Time is what develops trust.
Trust is a character that workers have among one another
They can rely on people to do their jobs
This is trust.

Tragically, this feeling can be overturned
Trust in a person is not always a constant throughout life.
Truculent people can deceive you
Terminating this great feeling.
