Winter

Kevin Jacobs

The winter blows in like a furious storm on the sea
The snow drifts softly down on the bare earth
Like a white woolen blanket covering a new baby's birth
The mountains rise jagged as a knife
In the cold and dark they are scary without life
The trees are a naked cluster with their bark being rough sandpaper wood
The wind blows scratching through the trees
Like winter witches sailing through the breeze
The sky has clouds softly floating through the winter's air
Like big hot air balloons
As if they are listening to the winter's tunes
The spring is on the horizon,
The sun rises at dawn,
The mountains come alive with the newly-born fawn.
