

5-1-2001

Conscience

Carly Stewart
NSU University School

Follow this and additional works at: https://nsuworks.nova.edu/uschool_litmag

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Stewart, Carly (2001) "Conscience," Hieroglyphics: the NSU University School Literary Magazine: Vol. 8 , Article 85.
Available at: https://nsuworks.nova.edu/uschool_litmag/vol8/iss1/85

This Poem is brought to you for free and open access by the University School at NSUWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in Hieroglyphics: the NSU University School Literary Magazine by an authorized editor of NSUWorks. For more information, please contact nsuworks@nova.edu.

Conscience

The Medical Examiner's Decision

Carly Stewart

This is the third case I've seen today,
Identical to the others who died in this way.
A prominent citizen, one of New York's finest,
Overdosing on cocaine; it seems rather heinous.
Once again, I have that nagging feeling deep down in my gut.
It's my conscience making me feel in a rut.
The public must be made aware of this recent trend.
Perhaps this could save a few lives in the end.

My higher-ups say it's my job I could lose
If I went to the media with this type of news.
"Your conscience doesn't belong in this job,"
They tell me, "and the media is really just one crazy mob.
They'll jazz up your story and distort all the facts.
Now, would we want that burden of risk on our backs?
It's a social thing, you know, completely political.
Besides, these OD's are not at all that critical."

But people are dying and I can't help but think
I could undoubtedly save a few with a media link.
It's my conscience and morality versus strong social standards.
I suppose the newspapers could cause great harm with their slander.
I decide to keep my medical findings to myself
Letting more and more druggies abuse their health.
So this fatal trend continues, and I still get paid...
I only wish social expectations weren't so demanding today.