Prejudice

Hallie Udelson

We're all victims
Of some prejudice.
But we are also the instigators
Of the contagious disease.

It's a perpetual hatred
Pursued by you and me.
This continuous chain
Projects false, undeserved images
On those who cannot defend themselves.

When you want it to stop
Start the obliteration of stereotypes
With the ones you yourself perpetuate.

So don't look to your neighbor
As the one deserving of the blame
Because it's you and I;
Both the victims and the perpetrators
Of this heinous crime we call prejudice.
