Divisive Destinies

Peter Jean-Francois

One is chosen to protect the people
Protect them from oppression,
Protect them from tyranny,
Protect them from corruption,
And protect them from evil

Chosen to return order in the world,
To bring wealth to the poor,
To bring peace to societies,
To bring prosperity to all people,
And to return the good in people's lives

Chosen against one's will
Pressured by friends
Pressured by family
Pressured by strangers
Time shaping destiny
Affecting decisions
And causing tension

Is it fate or free will?
Was it preordained?
Was it written in the stars?
Was it foretold by gods?
Or was this destiny determined
By the decisions one makes in life
By the choices one makes?

Can one control destiny?
Control one's life?
Overcome recurring obstacles?

Or
Should one accept fate?
Accept reality?
Accept that the task is impossible
And allow crimes to go unpunished
Without reaction or retribution?
