A Perfect Place

by Jessica Dolberg

The waves crash across the deserted shore.
The sunset reflects off the deep blue sea.
There is nothing that I could not adore
About this moment of you here with me.
The sand sinks slowly beneath our bare feet.
Leaving an unclear track in the white sand.
Using no pattern, no need to be neat,
We go and explore the vast, barren land.
As the sun turns the sky a shade of pink,
It slowly sets in the clouds lying low.
The sounds and the scenery make me think
Of how much of the world I do not know.
With the blending of the sand, sun, and sea,

There is nowhere else I would rather be.
