Love

Christen Brown

She can see it in the distance
That feeling that once brought her joy
Yet it hangs around in the dark
And it seems unattainable

She vaguely remembers what it was like
To be overwhelmed with that feeling
To bask in its goodness
To be at peace with herself

After so many years of internal anguish
She feels like a lost cause
Her heart is broken into pieces
Irreparable they lie scattered in the dust

Into a dark pit she falls
A never-ending spiral it seems
She finally comes to a stop
And nothing but darkness surrounds her

There is nothing to do but sit
There is nothing to do but think
A lost cause she feels
But she still remembers

Remembers the feeling
That had the power
To turn tears of sorrow
Into tears of joy

She misses that feeling
The feeling that once could
Turn her dark nights

Into a radiant daylight
She wants that feeling
That feeling of love

She remembers that love
The love that brought her past her pain
The love that brought her past her shame
The shame of her past

She finds that love
In a place unimaginable
A place so close, yet so far
She finds it in herself.

The love that seemed unattainable
Is now within her reach
And it completes the task it was made for
It loves her back to light
