Doctor of Arts
in Information Science
The Doctor of Arts in Information Science (D.A.I.S.) is for professionals concerned with the effective transfer of information through systems from sources to users. The program is designed to provide a vehicle for individuals to advance in their professions by learning to apply to their organizations or institutions the latest developments in information science, computer science, telecommunications, and strategic management.

This program, by combining individual study, computer-based learning, teleconferences, regional seminars, and field projects in the students' own places of work, permits them to acquire advanced degrees, and at the same time, make significant contributions to the organizations in which they are employed.

This Information Science doctoral program is designed for those professionals who hold one of the following (or similar) positions:

- Library Director
- Information Scientist
- Media Specialist
- Learning Resource Center Director
- Information Retrieval Specialist
- Instructional Librarian
- Public Services Librarian
- Government Publications Librarian
