GOOD LUCK!

IT'S RIGHT! OR IS IT?

Florida's legislature will be meeting in November to decide the laws of the lives of approximately 25,000 women, 232 of which are between the ages of 18 and 19. The legislature will be meeting to discuss the abortion laws to be determined by the state to which they will apply. Many people are envisioning a return to the anti-abortion laws of the 1960's. If the new laws resemble the laws of the 1960's, we can expect some of the same problems to be similar. In the late 1960's up to 1.2 million illegal abortions took place each year and that 15,000 women a year died from illegal abortions. In November, Brett Harvey describes the conditions under which those abortions took place. If abortion is legal, women may want to stop reading now. Imagine abortions in dark, dirty rooms that smelled of alcohol and urine, done by doctors who breathed bourbon fumes and cared a feel before they got to work and warned you not to scream or they'd walk out and leave you alone in the middle of nowhere or self aborting alone in your college dorm - scared to tell anyone watching your metal uterus being cut up with blood, flushing the fetus down the toilet terrified that it would clog the plumbing and you'd be found out or being rushed to the hospital hemorrhaging from a perforated uterus only to be interrogated by police. This is the situation demanding to know where you got the abortion. The severity of the new laws depends on what each state's legislature decides. If abortions are completely legalized, they will become less accessible, less safe, legally risky, more expensive and have more consequences. According to the National Abortion Federation, 16% more maternal deaths were attributed to childbirth when abortion was illegal. Therefore maternal infant deaths would also rise as well as an increase in the birth of children with genetic defects, in the absence of genetic screening to detect fetal abnormalities, severely disabled infants would have to be considered terminally ill only to die shortly after; pregnant women who are HIV positive would have to deliver their babies with the result that pediatric AIDS wards would be burdened beyond their already strained capacities. The 1.6 million women who got abortions each year would be forced to carry their babies to term and possibly ruin not only the women's lives but also those of the newborns. Dr. Francis King of Catholic University for Planned Choice says, "This is a very sad situation because you have a风扇atical anti-choice movement with 16 years of organizing under it's belt, committed to stopping that abortions don't take place. You'll see an organized kind of vigilante, complete with sophisticated monitoring hotline, 900's and all the rest." Meanwhile, pro-choice activists are just getting organized because previously there was no strong threat to the Roe vs Wade decision. Janet Flit, a lawyer, has said, "There's obviously something very threatening about the empowerment of women when you see that the one Supreme Court decision that gives women more power over their lives than anything else in 25 years is the only Constitutional right that the government has asked to be taken away." And with those thoughts in mind, I conclude that I really haven't placed myself in chaos, but in a positive environment. This environment I speak of is a place where I can educate myself about ideas, communicate my thoughts with others. This means that I have the power to reflect and apply ideas to my life. But my power is totally dependent on how much I'm willing to learn. In college, I can meet willingness to learn and it overpowers any notion which could lead me to believe that I am confined to facts and statistics, I am no longer restricted to believing what I am told without challenging it. I can doubt and challenge any hypothesis and discover my own conclusions. And so can every student here at Nova. So I suppose college isn't really a mess, but it can get messy.

Caveat Lector

As my summer break comes to a halt, I wonder how much of my mind I managed to set myself up for this new school year, and what it is going to take to get myself out of it. Of course, I have been thinking as such isn't going to help me look through whatever lies ahead. So in the midst of all my worries, I wonder what ideas I will be exposed to, how much I'll incorporate into my everyday existence.

With those thoughts in mind, I conclude that I really haven't placed myself in chaos, but in a positive environment. This environment I speak of is a place where I can educate myself about ideas, communicate my thoughts with others. This means that I have the power to reflect and apply ideas to my life. But my power is totally dependent on how much I'm willing to learn. In college, I can meet willingness to learn and it overpowers any notion which could lead me to believe that I am confined to facts and statistics, I am no longer restricted to believing what I am told without challenging it. I can doubt and challenge any hypothesis and discover my own conclusions. And so can every student here at Nova. So I suppose college isn't really a mess, but it can get messy.

If we as students don't confront ideas, if we blandly accept the abstract as obvious, if we fail to challenge our minds, then college life could get REAL messly. The end result won't be an assimilation of knowledge and ideas in our everyday decisions, but an unwarranted aloofness towards our own selves. And, worst of all, the theory of "how they told me" will become a theory of "know the instrument they trained you to be." As you begin this new school year, open your mind, question the answers, ponder solutions, and most importantly, educate yourself by thinking.

The children
Softly whispered school girl's secret
Bravely boasted school boy's strengths

Under golden pig-tails, hush-hushed voice
Songs of Puff the Magic Dragon who lived in Homalee

Wet eyes, cries and screams
For a scraped up knee, curses mispronounced

Mom's best recipes for chocolate-chip cookies, or cake,
Discussion teddy's new tie, or rhyming nursery rhymes with dolls at ba time

Teasing, who likes the new girl, or who eats worms or flies
Battle cries of red-faced Indians, Giddy-ups of Cowboys on tall, brave horses
somewhow all named Silver

School's over, can I play in the yard Suppertime, may I leave the table
but mom I don't like the green ones

Soft, calm breaths long since in bed, deeply asleep
Dreams of laughs and giggles and songs
When you close your eyes and listen hard to the sounds the children make

Attic Sleeping on Top

Small town country life quiet, peaceful, tired, old Small town country house hides
a sagging, shuddering, two-car garage, with attic sleeping on top

Rain gutters half falling here and there bear heavy loads of chilly autumn leaves holes on one side dance along the wall up towards a door above missing stairway
Paint chips, cracks, and flakes, and crunches under small tip-toeing feet

Curious as a little fox, quiet as a fatten footfalls venture slowly
Behind the cobweb and old furniture, creeping softly
He grins and test the creeping stairs

The upstairs windows pale and yellow filter and scatter the light-rays
On stale, dry air, sunlight slits flies, bobbing up and down
In dark corners, shadows hide old treasures bound up in spider-silk and twilight

Wooden beams hung with rusty nails moon or creak in the breeze Farming tools hang rusted on a wall loan against a wall fallen long ago

Creaking, squeaking stumps march boldly across the floor beneath small feet wooden planks lie pitted splintered and stained Tapestries ruin stained darling.
Colors faded from frayed and brittle, cracking edges

Ancient trunk sits center stage the floor beneath it presses down, bearing the weight of passing years Hands stretch out, little muscles strain and stretch and struggle to open the top
So far halfway open,
But little arms can't hold such a heavy lid...
Slate

A little heart races and pounds little legs, down the croaking, squeaking stairs out the back and around the side

What are you doing out there young man?
in a whisper, out of breath
Just looking

A little feet leave behind the garage
A sagging, shuddering two-car garage
with attic still there, still sleeping on top

"When the first two hundred letters came, the guards gave me back my clothes. Then the next two hundred letters came, and the prison director came to see me. When the next pile of letters arrived, the director got in touch with his superior. The letters kept coming and coming: THREE THOUSAND of them. The President was informed.
The letters still kept arriving, and the President called the prison and told them to let me go."

Are you having trouble registering for classes? Did you and your roommate forget to ask who should bring which items? Are you new in town and unsure of where to go and what to do? Just call SOS!

The Student Orientation Staff, SOS, will be on campus throughout orientation week to answer questions from students and parents. SOS members can be identified by their hot pink t-shirts and their nametags.

"These students were chosen because they represent the cream of the crop at Nova University," stated Sandy Vaden, a counselor from the Student Affairs office. "The teaching faculty, deans, and student affairs staff chose these students, from both the Liberal Studies and Professional Studies programs, for their leadership and responsibility."

SOS members will be performing "The Days of Our Knights," a series of informative skits, during the Welcome Ceremonies on August 30. The skits will involve problems one might have with housing, commuting and registration. SOS members will also be helping run other orientation activities including the softball game, the Western Style Bar-B-Que, and the "School's-A-Beach" party.

If you have any problems, questions, or if you just want to make a new friend, don't hesitate to talk to a SOS member. Reach out and ask someone!

Mentors

"The important idea is to help new students feel more confident in their academic work and not to feel that they are alone. It is important that students assume responsibility for their educations and peer groups in support of the academic areas can help a great deal in this," commented Dr. John Paskus, who was asked to describe the Liberal Studies mentor program.

The 1989 mentor program is an updated version of the 1988 mentor program. The original idea for the program was for one professor to be in charge of a group of five or six students. These groups were supposed to meet at certain times in order to discuss any problems the students may have had. Several groups went on to say that, despite the problems, the program let them experience "getting to understand a little better where students are coming from on a personal and emotional level before we got into a classroom setting."

Dr. Jim Doan stated, "I found the mentor program to be a good ice-breaker both for me and for the students in my mentor group. I'm looking forward to working with a new mentor group as well as second year LSP who decide to participate in the program."

The 1989 mentor program will be focused mainly on the academic life of the students. Dr. Ed Paskus stated, "Social studies are also very important whenever one enters a new environment." The experiences of the program have not been forgotten, but the academics will be in the forefront.

One professor, one counselor from Student Affairs, and two second year LSP students will be assigned to a group of seven or eight students. The incoming freshmen were divided into groups by Dr. Paskus' secretary, Diane Gannott. She arranged the groups in such a way as to get a good mix of majors, years, and out of state/local.

The groups will meet at their own scheduled times to discuss the lessons being taught in the circle classes. The second year LSP students have already taken in the "Change and Tradition" course including most of the information this year's freshmen will learn. This background will enable the mentors to lead study groups to prepare for classes and test.

Mentors will also be available to answer questions concerning communications classes, math classes, use of the computer, and general college life.

When asked about their thoughts on becoming mentors, second year students expressed an overall feeling of enthusiasm. Heather Dobkin stated, "I have noticed by being in the program that sometimes the greatest ideas come from more than one mind. I hope that by being a mentor I can inspire the freshmen to learn as much as we did our first year."

When Amherst replied, "I feel that the mentor program will be a success...Hopefully mentors will feel more comfortable coming to us for help." "Direct interaction between faculty, staff, and the experienced will make this year's students transition that much more bearable," thought Tonya Simmons. Another student summed it up by saying, "I think the mentor program is an excellent opportunity that allows students to get a first-hand experience at dealing with the inadequacies of college life, professors, and their new surroundings."

With its new format, the enthusiasm of the staff, and a willingness to participate by the new students, the 1989 LSP mentor program is sure to be a hit.
the aim of a university education

by Ben Mulvey

So you’ve decided to go to college, to pursue a university education at Nova. Perhaps as you stand in line to pay your tuition bill, or while you wait to see a counselor in the Financial Aid office or in Student Affairs, you’ll have occasion to ask yourself why you’re here. ‘Just why am I pursuing a college degree?’ What is the aim of a university education anyway? These are important questions that run through most students’ minds at one time or another, but are just as often not seriously pursued. I’d like to offer a few suggestions for your consideration when reflecting on these questions.

Most of you would probably say that you’re pursuing a university education in order to get a good job. This means getting a job that pays well enough for you to get those material things that you associate with a pleasant life, a nice car, a comfortable home, the ability to take vacations, etc. And you think a university degree is a ticket to this sort of life. And you’d be right, but only partly so.

Of course universities are supposed to prepare you for certain careers. Anyone who claims that the service function of a university is a perversion or degeneration of some purer tradition is simply misinformed. In an address delivered at the opening of the Harvard Business School in 1928, Alfred North Whitehead pointed out that at no time have universities been restricted to pure abstract learning. The University of Salerno in Italy, the earliest of European universities, was devoted to medicine. In England, at Cambridge, in the year 1316, a college was founded for the special purpose of providing clerks for the King’s service. Universities from the very beginning have been for lawyers, medical people, and engineers.

Consider the sad fact, though, that most people leaving the university with their degrees enter jobs that are routine, dull and unimaginative. It is not just the case that most university graduates replace caps and gowns with Italian designer clothes, German cars and an L.A. Law lifestyle. Even if one does get lucky enough to land a job that pays enough to afford one those clothes or that car, that job itself will likely be one of routine drudgery. Why does this happen? Is this what you are going to the university for?

Unfortunately many students, still attending it, see the university only in terms of its service function. All too often this means they readily accept the idea of being ‘instructed’ as opposed to ‘education’. What I mean by instruction is a practical enterprise in which set and standard quota of information is imparted for determined purposes. Instruction is standardized, uncritical, undialectical, and it discourages speculation about ends and means alike. A student who spends his or her time being instructed is simply being absorbed material. He or she contributes nothing and his or her intellect remains unengaged. This kind of enterprise is dull, routine and unimaginative. You deserve more than this and you should demand more than this.

‘Education’, on the other hand, is a dialectical enterprise. It is discursive and largely idiosyncratic on the part of student and teacher alike. This kind of learning requires the cultivation of imagination. It’s true that education presupposes the possession of some skills and the possession of some information. But these are subordinate to education, not its only aims.

What is ironic about many students’ perceptions of the aim of university education is that they are not shared by corporate and professional leaders. Pick up the magazine section of any Sunday newspaper in any city in the county and you’ll find some business executive moaning about the fact that new college graduates seeking jobs with their companies are unprepared, undereducated, not ready to compete with their Japanese or European counterparts. In short that they are dull and unimaginative, suited for only dull and unimaginative positions.

Our world is changing. For better or worse, we are more and more a global community. As a result many fields students plan to enter are changing as well. For instance, business relations used to be simpler, being based on the immediate contact of person with person. Today, to do business is to require imagination. It requires an imaginative grasp of organizations, political, governmental, political, social and environmental effects, the application of science, and the variations and limits of human nature. Imagination means the ability to conceive of alternatives to the way things currently are; it means being critical, being able to say ‘yes’ or ‘no’ to others, not by reason of blind loyalty or deference to authority, but with a firmness derived from a conscious evaluation of relevant alternatives. It means being educated.

And education should be anything but routine, dull and unimaginative. It should be that which allows so many people after having gone through college, to claim that those were some of the most fun and rewarding years of their lives. Education requires a freedom, the freedom to probe, grope, to be wrong, to test new waters, to exchange ideas with others without fear of losing a contract, promotion or job. It means trying on new identities until a suitable one is found. As a student you have a duty to yourselves and to your faculty to demand such freedom and be prepared to accept it. Of course all this requires some effort, but so do basketball and sex. Only with effort can your university experience be truly fun and rewarding.

The danger in modern universities is that students will be regarded, and worse, that they will regard themselves, as capital equipment; that in being instructed they will be conditioned, partly at their own behest, to take their place in the technical, commercial, or administrative machinery of a society which recognizes no value but consumption. They will, therefore, in the words of one contemporary philosopher, “be made ready for being used.” Just as the excellence of a painting cannot be defined in terms of its monetary value or in terms of its social usefulness, neither can the excellence of education. As EDUCATION, in the sense I’ve been developing here, may help you avoid university experiences and future jobs that are routine, dull and unimaginative.

Alright, you're here: Fun-in-the-sun city- Ft. Lauderdale! What's the first thing you want to do? Go where the boys are (or girls?) Cruise the streets endlessly? Party ALL the time?

Wait, what's this? Tired of prune-looking fingers and sand in your hair that resembles drabuff in dim light? Are the bags under your eyes from partying all night heavier than your groceries? Run out of money from paying your roommate to tell your parents that you're studying? Well, let's explore some fun, safe, and inexpensive alternatives.

Let's see; where should we begin? You like the beach? Try something other than splashing around in the water, like renting a sailboat for only $35 per person. Just call Fantasy Charters at 761-8845 for a quiet, romantic way to enjoy the sea.

Or perhaps you'll want to rent your own boat for cruising, skiing, fishing, or diving. Call Club Nautico at 523-003 for more information. Not enough action for you? How about parasailing on an aerial recliner? Call 462-SAIL and 463-1136 and compare prices. In any event, be prepared to spend approximately $20 and above.

How about some serious water entertainment — a cruise. Sea Escape, Florida Princess, and Discovery II all offer cruises to nowhere and to the Bahamas from as low as $29 per person. But watch carefully for applied restrictions. Watch for school sponsored trips also.

Inter-costal cruises are also available. The Jungle Queen sails daily from Ft. Lauderdale and the Empress from Dania. Both rates vary according to the time of the year.

There are places for animal lovers, too. Ocean World in central Ft. Lauderdale on 17 Street Causeway provides dolphin, whale and sea lion shows in addition to other oceanic attractions. The Miami Seafarium, just south of the International Airport, offers similar interests.

For those of you who love outdoor fanatics, Palm Beach Safari, a drive-thru outdoor lion expedition, also has Moon Key Jungle and Parrot Jungle just outside Miami in all types of species.

Approximately 25 miles east of Miami on the Tamiami Trail are the Florida Everglades and the Miccosukee Indian Village. Both are historical sites in Florida and offer informative tours, souvenirs, and alligator wrestling. Entrance fees vary with the seasons.

For you shoppers, the hot place to be is the Swap Shop. Recently recognized as a gentle giant, the Swap Shop offers the very newest innovations and the intriguing old/used all within the same 75 acres! The air-conditioned food court is fabulous, offering cuisine for any taste. There's a game room and even a merry-go-round, so come prepared for some fun. Parking is $0.25. However, bring some serious sun screen and your super-duper-extra-padded walking shoes.

Take University Drive north to Sunrise Boulevard, go east and you will run into it.

Local malls are well-equipped also. The Broward Mall offers many stores such as Jordache, Berdine's, Sears, and JC Penny's, as well as anything else you may be interested in. The Shoppes at Plantation, immediately north of the Broward Mall on University Drive, offers Macy's and Lord & Taylor's in a new, moderately expensive environment. The Galleria Mall, on Sunrise Boulevard just west of the beach, contains Saks Fifth Avenue, Lord & Taylor, Neiman Marcus, J. B.ędin, Jordan Marsh, and hundreds of other gift and novelty shops.

Finally, some intellectually stimulating sights to visit in Palm Beach county. The Morikami Park-Museum-Gardens is open most days of the year. Not only do they offer beautiful gardens and paths to think or study, there are also Japanese Festival events held year-round and a cultural museum to visit. Contact the Palm Beach Department of Parks and Recreation for more information. Right next door to Ocean World here in Fort Lauderdale is the Fort Lauderdale Museum of Art, which offers frequently changing displays by local, national, and international talent in an array appealing to all ages.

Items of the area interests include Disney World, MOT Studio, Sea World, and Spaceport USA, all in the Orlando area (central Florida approximately 4 hours conf.

HILLEL - Jewish Student Union

The twentieth century may have brought the world great advances in technology, but there has been little advances in the methods to meet others to share similar interests. With each burst of electronic progress comes even less reason for people to leave their homes to accomplish even the most complex tasks. The Hillel group is an organization that offers young Jewish adults opportunities to meet others from various campuses, including their own, in a social atmosphere. Every month Hillel sponsors a great number of social gatherings ranging from group discussions to parties.

It is up to the individual to choose what he or she feels would be most enjoyable. No one is forced to participate in any of the events, groups discussions, dances, picnics, or weekends away. There are no penalties for not joining in with the rest of the group because Hillel is based on the principle that all members are old enough to choose what is appropriate for them. Last year, Hillel sponsored a weekend in September at Marco Island for any member that wanted to come. There are no fees to join the group, but Hillel still subsidized a substantial amount to anyone who signed up.

All the events during the weekend were made optional and available for everyone to enjoy. The weekend served as both an icebreaker for members and an opportunity for everyone to see what Hillel has to offer.

Friendships bloom so quickly to the Hillel family that the events not sponsored by Hillel are followed through by the members. Events put between friends who meet through Hillel are common. The Broward County Fair provided a good example of Hillel friends getting together on their own. Several members of Hillel from Florida Atlantic University, Florida International University, and Broward Community College met at one particular booth and went together to the Fair. Hillel opened a channel to bond friendships with people from campuses who perhaps may never have met. The entire ideal of the Hillel organization centers around creating opportunities for the young Jewish adults beyond the confines of their campuses, states, or even countries.

Hillel does not stop at national borders. The group offers summer scholarships to Israel and gives students the opportunity to speak about the personal ventures.

For more information about the Hillel Organization please feel free to contact Kim Schermer, Director of Student Activities for Broward areas. Phone: 954-356-299.

Quick. Name ten animals whose picture you'd like to see on a piece of clothing. I can almost bet that none of you said a cockroach. But Roach Ware, ink, a division of Susan Wonderly Designs, has a friend named aloischus who just might change your mind.

Susan Wonderly thought up the idea for aloischus, whose name "always appears in bold lower case letters because he's a bold lower case bug," during the winter of 1979. She drew the design as a protest against the high priced polo pony and alligator symbols. She couldn't understand why some people will spend hundreds of extra dollars for a designer label while there are homeless people freezing on the streets, struggling to survive. She threw the sketch into a box and didn't locate it until seven years later. When she found it, a business was born.

Roach Ware, ink, has products ranging from nightshirts, beach towels, and boxer shorts. Its most expensive item is "stuffed Roach Under Glass," which pokes fun at the high priced pheasant under glass.

Roach Ware, ink, has another surprising twist other than its emblem, aloischus. The companies' sales representatives are college students. Wonderly felt that this would be a good, honest way for college students to make money. They sell the product on their own time so their earning potential is only limited by the amount of time and effort they put into the job.

Anyone wishing to receive further information about Roach Ware, ink, may call the company at (617) 631-6014 or write to:

\[\text{MY GIANT LEAP TO STATUS!}\\]

"I don't mean to sound cocky, but I'm just one of those guys you'd love to take home!"

Congratulations on your interest in me. You are a very smart human with a sense of humor; I'm a remarkably funny guy. My name, pronounced a-ro-oish-us, means "of noble birth and readiness." It always appears in bold lower case letters because, after all, I am a bold lower case bug!

For the first six years of my life, I lived in a cardboard box with paper and books. It was so boring, I read the words, ate them, then the bookbinding glue, learned a lot. But do you know what it's like to eat someone else's words... for six years? I wish!

Enough words. Last summer I ate through my box! After tailing a knapsack with all my earthly belongings, I trudged onward in quest of a real home.

aloischus

"Roach danders lurked everywhere!"

Une night, I was terrified suddenly by roach cuddling shrieks. At once, all of my six legs bolted high into the air. Vanished in my antennae and knapsack, I crumpled to the ground.

eye-to-nozzle with a duct spray can. The nozzle closed. I permitted a flash second for me to give into a crevice right on my head, smashed my leg hairs shattered and my antennae cut off. I died. How could I be without my last legs, tired, hungry, depressed—about to call it in. I came upon the most wonderful dark, damp cupboard under a kitchen sink with a drifty pipe. Had I died and gone to heaven?

While reveling in my new abode, the most outrageous event occurred. An unknown force urged me to close my eyes, take a deep breath, open my wings and tense my leg muscles ready for take-off as never before. Thusly, I took a giant leap out of that cupboard, swarmed onto all kinds of quality clothing, onto all kinds of quality items. I am so proud.

As spokesroach for the underprivileged, being featured in human newspapers, magazines, and on talk shows around the country, is done so much for my roach-esteem.

Aw-v-v shucks! I'm ready to be your noble friend. Won't you be mine?

Heartless

by Janet Brugman

An explosive high energy band with impact has begun to make their mark in music. Heartless, a local band from Fort Lauderdale has already opened for many top name performers including Molly Hatchet, Blackfoot, Bad Company, and the Bullet Boys. The band is currently signed with Fantasma productions, and will soon be releasing an original four song EP consisting of their hit songs "Shameless Heart," "Bite the Bullet," "Don't Tell Me Down," and "Long Live the Night." Heartless also performs cover songs from a variety of big name bands such as Autograph, Dokken, The Cult, Ozzy Osborne, AC/DC, Deep Purple, and Whitesnake.

Heartless consists of five talented musicians: Jim on lead vocals; Tommy on lead guitar and backup vocals; Chris on bass guitar and backup vocals; Billy on keyboards, lead guitar and backups, last but certainly not least Dean on the drums and backup. Their success is a joint effort, no one member more important than the other.

Recently the band performed here in South Florida and I had the chance to talk with a few of them.

The Knight: Who are your major influences? Heartless: Zeppelin, AC/DC, Ozzy, Scorpions, Kiss, everyone but we like what we do better.

The Knight: How long have each of you been playing? Jim: I've been singing at least five years now. Tommy: My whole life! Billy: About ten years. Chris: About six, seven years.

Dean: Somewhere between eight and ten years.

The Knight: How long have you all been playing together? Jim: This band, over six months now.

The Knight: What's the hardest thing about being in a band? Tommy: Finding people to work TOGETHER! It's the mood that drives you.

Knight news: Why exactly are you in the business? the money? the women? Tommy: I was born into it. Strictly music, and the love of it!

Jim: Nobody could get a job, and Chris's hair was too long to do anything else.

Dean: I got in it for everything!

The Knight: How do audiences respond to your music? Jim: We get better responses up north, places like West Virginia and the Carolinas, people in the south respond better to an all original band.

The Knight: What do you think about other local bands? Dean: We like seeing other good bands, and besides it's not good to go around on your own. There is a spot for everyone in the music business.

The Knight: What do you think about the rock scene here in south Florida? Dean: Florida has potential, it's just going to take time for south Florida to be recognized as a place of talented musicians. People just have to stick with their music and stop running to California and New York for success, it's gonna happen here.

Heartless: We have what it takes to make it, and we believe that will be the first or one of the first bands from Fort Lauderdale to get signed for a major recording contract.

Well you read it, this is certainly no garage band. These guys are experienced musicians serious about the business, and ready to prove they've got what it takes to make it in the music industry.

This is for the music buff in everyone. Try these lyrics on for size, and if it fits wear them:

1. And I raise my head and stare
2. Got a picture of your house
3. Darlin' don't wait up for me
4. In order to free the body, you've got to free the mind
5. I will be your keeper, you possess the key
6. Hold me until tomorrow
7. If you want to talk that's fine with me, but if you want more
8. East L.A. at midnight, papa won't be home tonight
9. Alright you win I'll pack up my C.O.
10. Who knows where the cold wind blows surf report

Who ever said there are no waves in Florida, was very wrong! There are waves in Florida, it's all a matter of being at the beach on the right days. Yes, Florida has a good share of the nicest waves on the east coast. It's not very consistent but it's enough to keep all the local surfers stoked to catch them. Here in Florida the waves can get as big as 12 feet, as small as two feet, or totally flat. It's all a matter of where you go and when you're there.

In this addition of the Surf Report I will tell you what kind of waves you can expect to see and where to find them.

Here in Florida we get two kinds of waves. The first one is called "Wind Chop." These types of waves are caused by strong winds (15-20 mph) blowing from the east. These waves are somewhat mushy and not give the long rides. They are very common in the Ft. Lauderdale-Deerfield Beach area during the fall and winter months. The second type of wave is called a "Swell." These waves are caused by strong storms out at sea. This is the most perfect wave one can ride here because it's very smooth and offers a long, fast ride. This type of wave is seen often when you travel up the coast. No matter what kind of wave you ride around here you will still have fun doing it.

Okay, now that you know what kind of waves you can find in Florida I am going to tell you where to find them. Here I will tell you about the most popular places to surf in the order from the closest to Nova to the farthest. Most of these places are accessible from I-95 so I recommend that you use I-95 to get there. Well, here they are.

FT. LAUDERDALE PIER
end of Commercial Blvd. on A1A (15 minutes from Nova) - breaks well on strong E, SE, NE winds (15-20 mph) producing windchop - Common Wave Height (CWH) 2-6 ft.

DEERFIELD PIER
one block NE of Hillsboro Blvd. on A1A (20 minutes from Nova) - breaks mostly on E, SE, NE winds producing chop - CWH 2-6 ft.

BOCA RATON, SOUTH BEACH
Palmetto Pkwy. to Beach (25 minutes from Nova) - breaks on wind and swells - CWH 2-6 ft.

DELRAY BEACH
Atlantic Ave. from I-95 to A1A (35 minutes from Nova) - breaks well on NE, E winds producing good chop - CWH 2-6 ft.

SEBASTIAN INLET
take I-95 to Sebastian exit, take US1 to AIA, go north on A1A until you hit the beach park entrance on the north side (2-3 hours from Nova) - breaks well on all swells producing the best waves in South Florida, best time to surf is "Dawn Patrol" (early morning) - CWH 2-9 ft.

Well, that's all the spots I recommend for you to go to and surf or just watch. To find out if these spots are breaking, call these numbers for a free recorded wave report: 561-7879, 561-4102, 564-7875. These numbers are for local surfshops offering surf reports. Go out and enjoy the sun and the waves.
