Theatrical Warehouse and Nothing But Classics Theatre Group Inc. presents play

By Stephanie Scploc

"Cinderella" opened the show, followed by "The Crucible," "Arsenic and Old Lace," "Othello," and "The Wizard of Oz." Mickey Lester and Tyschka Downs portrayed the wicked step-sisters, with Dr. Aurieute Hahn playing Cinderella. Tyschka received tremendous laughter throughout the scene owing to her make-up, comedic acting and extra padding around her hips.

"The Crucible" by Arthur Miller, the trial scene was performed by Jonathan Brewster, Mortimer Brewster, Mortimer as aunda critic who is about to get murdered in the scene performed. Dr. Doan turned in a great performance as Jonathan Brewster, one of the men performing the murders.

In the next scene, Junior Cleveland performed the murder, assisted the younger members of the audience visualize pageantry of a Shakespeare scene.

The final scene was a showstopper. "The Wizard Of Oz" was definitely worth waiting for. Tyschka gave a phenomenal performance as "Oz." Doan turned in a great performance as Jonathan Brewster, one of the men performing the murders.

Introducing The Volunteers Club

By Leah Guss

The Volunteers Club is a brand new organization that has grown in leaps and bounds. The club’s goal is to get Nova students involved in making the world a better place to live.

Members are ready and willing to volunteer their time to make a difference in the community. They are eager to help anyone and everyone in need.

During the summer, the club raised thirty dollars for Save Our Strays. This money will go to the homeless and starving dogs and cats, as well as needing to solve the problem of overpopulation.

Last year Volunteers Club Members visited the Meridian Nursing Home on several occasions and handed out flowers, stickers, Valentine’s Day Cards, necklaces, green jello on St. Patrick’s Day, made Christmas ornaments and helped decorate their Christmas tree.

This year the members will continue their involvement with Meridian Nursing Home and expand their contributions to many other centers.

On September 6th, the Volunteers Club visited Meridian Nursing Home and handed out 30 helium balloons to the residents. More than twenty-five members present as the residents were very pleased.

On October 16th, a speaker from Big Brothers/ Big Sisters came to explain their programs to Nova students.

For Halloween the children from the Baudhuin School dressed in costumes and visited Meridian Nursing Home. The club raised thirty dollars for Save Our Strays.

Please see page 14 for findings.

Letters to the Editor

The Bookstore Blues
Dear Editor,

Thoughts of a book for a macroeconomics course at $49.00 at the beginning of this semester, I took the book at the end of the term only to receive $19.00. The reason for such a low buy-back price was that the book might not be used again. I signed my name to a page in the book to see if it would be resold. When I returned to buy my books for the second eight weeks, I found the same book and paid $39.00. Something has to be done about misleading Nova students with cop-out lines when returning books. I realize business is business, but Ed has to be willing to work with the students.

Mandate SGA To Create A Barter System
Dear Editor,

It is clear that Nova Books is out for profit and Ed is out for himself, with grade school qualifications for marking up books. The Student Government is supposed to work for us. It is up to us, the students, to sign petitions and get the faculty not to change the books so often, mandate SGA to create a barter system, and if necessary go to the Board of Trusrest and have them take over Nova Books. We have a voice. We are paying to these people to give us first rate service. Let’s stop some line under their noses and get them to work for us!

A Concerned Consumer

Bookstore Promotes NO School Spirit
Dear Mr. Ferguson,

This letter is directed at the article in the previous issue of The Nova Knight about the bookstore. Books are expensive, but how does the bookstore produce to the profits? Nova students with cop-out lines when returning books. I realize business is business, but Ed has to be willing to work with the students.

Barter System
Mandate SGA To Create A

Nova Books is a Ripoff?
Dear Mr. Ferguson,

I am writing this letter in response to the one-sided article you and your adviser authorized to go to the last issue of The Nova Knight, "Is Nova Books A Ripoff?" I understand your concerns about printing articles on someone’s operation that support yours. You are to be commended because you didn’t succumb to the pressures of promoting advertisements that many of our regional newspapers confirm today.

Nevertheless, I have a few complaints, that I will venture to air in this issue. Nova Books is a ripoff. But it is not just the fault of the bookstore. The faculty contribute to our problems as students as well. Assigning four or five books per class gets expensive. It is intriguing to find out at the end of the term that the instructor only sees two or three. With exception to those courses that are commonly affected by the changing times of the world’s socioeconomic and political structures, courses that deal with philosophy, literature, psychology and others do not need to be updated every 8 or 16 weeks. This stress of pondering our present situation is compounded when one realizes that when editions are up-dated, it is just a matter of the title being moved around and not necessarily new information.

If the faculty would use the same books for the course and only assign books that the class is going to have enough time to cover, then the students would have a chance to cut down on unnecessary expenses. It is monopolized by the monopoly we have of a bookstore.

Is Nova Books a Ripoff?*
*Due to the volume of letters received in regards to the succeeding article, we have decided to reprint the story for easy reference.

By Jennifer Lynn Baldwin

Many Nova College students feel the bookstore unfairly charges them for books and does not buy back the books at a fair cost. Ed Panariello, Nova Book Store Owner, would like to tell his side of the story.

"There’s more to buying and selling books than meets the eye," he explained, "in cases where we cannot unbind the books in the store, we take a loss from them. I am not afraid to take the risk in purchasing used books; I make more money from them." Students can purchase new or used books at the book store. There are both advantages and disadvantages in buying used books. The advantage is used books cost less. The disadvantage is it is a risky purchase.

The reason why used books are bought back for so little and then sold at a higher cost is because they create a risk for the store owner. If a professor teaching a class decides to use a different book or the company publishes a new edition, the book store will take a loss on those books.

Mr. Panariello pays between forty and forty-four dollars for a fifty dollar book. There is a profit of eight to ten dollars. On the other hand, if a student buys a used book, the book store makes a larger profit. This happens because students sell back their books and he is able to resell them, making total profit from the sale.

Nova students are fortunate to sell their books back to the book store. Many college do not accept buy backs and those that do only buy back at the end of the semester. Not all professors buy used books due to the cost of the cover. A percentage of the profit is given to Nova University. This money has helped build the radio station, finance a good deal of Nova’s Student Activities Budget, and for three years the book store paid for the full cost of the newspaper.

Mr. Panariello suggests the best time to return books is right after finals. All books will be gladly bought back. Their value depends on class adoption and store inventory. Some books may have no value.

Books is Robbing Students
Dear Editor-in-Chief,

We would like to express our displeasure with the recent article, "Is Nova Books A Ripoff?" Ed is in business to make money and that is clear. We don't have a problem with that. We worry about students who have degrees, many of whom would like to have more opportunities and make our clients in the home to buy 1991 Corvettes as well. Perhaps there are some ethical considerations that need to be looked at. Ed is unwilling then maybe the University should look into other sources. Our bookstore is steadily robbing us and Ed isn't even trying to hide it. Our SGA should deal with this issue. They should create a book exchange or some kind of barter program because the bookstore is the bank.

Local AASU's Convene At FAASA Convention

By Lisa Starke

More than 400 African-American students from community colleges and universities gathered last weekend to discuss and establish agendas for African-American students at predominantly white colleges and universities. The Florida African-American Students Association, Inc. (FAASA) sponsored its 16th Annual Presidential Conference hosted by Palm Beach and Indian River community colleges.

This year's theme, FAASA: Using the Light of Education to Dope the Darkness of Ignorance, was the backdrop for a weekend of workshops and cultural presentations. FAASA, founded in 1976, is designed to develop and implement programs which address educational, economic and cultural concerns. The organization has a membership of 60,000 students from five regions in Florida. "The focus of FAASA is to create a forum in which African-American students can study, share concerns about faculty members, and ensure a voice in student government," said Cleveland Ferguson III, Second Vice President of the group, which disseminates information through a newsletter, 213 wire services and 167 Black and Caribbean-owned newspapers.

Members of NUBSA in attendance at the Conference

One of FAASA's new resolutions establishes a political action committee.

The Director of Political Action will go to Tallahassee on a monthly basis, find out what the lobbyists are doing in terms of getting cuts established by Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles.

"At one time," she said, "it was understood that if you have an associate of arts degree from a community college you had automatic admission into the university system. (Because of the budget cuts, students with an AA degree might not be accepted.)"

Yolanda Newton, a student from Indian River Community College (IRCC), felt she had learned much about African history.

"It got much out of the workshop because there wasn't much that I knew about our past in Africa."

Newton was also motivated by the three-day event.

"The Conference motivated me to strive for excellence in my major and never settle for mediocrity."

Gwen Steele, another student, said the challenges at IRCC has set up community service projects.

"We have established tutoring programs and food drives," she said.

Most of the FAASA members seem to know: "The price of life we fail to win because we doubt the power within. This power relies on unity, understanding and Hoej (peace)."

For more information about FAASA and its programs, write to P.O. Box 292551, Fort Lauderdale, FL 33329-2551.

Club Presents Collection of Clothing And Accessories

By Delores Kory

Vintagc clothing and accessories from one of the finest collections in the country will be presented by the Women's Committee of 100 on Saturday, November 16, at the Miami Women's Club, 1737 North Bayshore Drive, 4th floor.

The collection was assembled by The Fashion Group of Miami. Included will be a 1905 Yale prom dress, several hand-carved boxes from the 1920's, a 1940's short gown, plus several pieces from the International Fine Arts College Oleg Cassini Collection.

Groupings of nineteenth and twentieth century accessories, millinery, fans and shoes will also be displayed.

Until a suitable building is found to house and display the collection, it will remain in storage (it was put in storage with the closing of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in Coral Gables). The search is on—help is needed—so that the collection may come out of storage and be enjoyed by the community.

At the November 16 luncheon/demonstration, Edward Porter, founder and president of the International Fine Arts College, will speak on the needs of a building to house the costume collection.

The importance of the collection, the display and slides will be covered by Mrs. Charlene Parsons, director of fashion merchandising and fashion design, and Fran Huchting, instructor of fashion and textiles/historian of fashion and textiles for animation.

Costumes is regarded by social historians and major museums throughout the world as a reflection of the time it was created. "It is worthwhile in any major city where students can study from original garments—but particularly here, because we have such a large apparel industry," Mrs. Parsons.

Cost of the luncheon and program is $13.50. A Women's Committee of 100 business meeting at 10:30 a.m. will precede the noon luncheon. Please call Elizabeth Pyke at 885-1589 or 887-2992 for reservations.

Are you wondering how to spend a Saturday leisurely? Why, don't you come and browse at the First Annual Recyclying Fun Market? The Nova University Environmental Committee, known as "ReNOVAte", is proud to sponsor the Fun Market under the big north of the Rosental Building on Saturday, November 23, from 9:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

If you wish to donate goods to be sold by ReNOVAte, drop-off bins will be placed at various locations around campus. For more information, call Cheri Hansen at 476-1961. If you wish to bring in your own goods to sell, you must pay a table for ten dollars.

The Nova University Environmental Committee has two main goals. The first is to recycle used products throughout the Nova University campus and to promote the use of recyclable and environmentally-friendly products. Currently, people are asked to call Brenda Woodman of the Physical Plant (475-7598) to have the paper recyclable bins in their area emptied.

The other goal is to educate Nova University faculty, staff, and students concerning our environment and their roles in protecting and saving it.

Student selected as "spokeskid"

Megan Lowe, a six grade student at the University School of Nova University, has been selected by WPLG-Channel 10 to be one of the station's "spokeskids." Lowe, of Hollywood, was one of 20 kids selected out of approximately 20,000 who auditioned.

As a "spokeskid," Lowe will broadcast school lunch menus, participate in promotional events such as youth fairs, and broadcast service messages. One of Lowe's first assignments was to broadcast the station's Halloween safety announcement.

Chris & Cosey Mesh the Senses

by Gog Sallard

"Pagan Tango" is the new CD from the electronic wizards at the Creative Technology Institute, namely Chris & Cosey.

Chris Carter and Cosey Fanni Tutti were originally part of the underground 70's band, Throbbing Gristle. Once Throbbing Gristle broke up these bands were created: Chrisytic, Psychic TV, and Chris & Cosey.

The decade of the eighties saw the growth of the Creative Technology Institute, CTI, headed including "Pagan Tango .." Sacred Silence," "Synaesthesia," and the title track, although each song holds its own excellence.

The single from the CD is "Synaesthesia," a song about the combination of one's senses. There are three mixes of "Synaesthesia" on the CD single.

Anyone interested in modern alternative music would be well advised to take a listen to Chris & Cosey.

Rod Stewart Plays Soccer in Miami Arena

by Jason Watson

When I was first given the opportunity to see Rod Stewart in concert I didn’t have an immediate response. There are certain musicians you would love to see, and others whom you have no desire to see. Rod Stewart is one of those musicians for many, as well as myself, fit neither of these categories.

Like all musicians, Rod Stewart has many fans. Over the past twenty years he has accumulated an above average number of fans. One factor that separates him from many other singers is the number of people who would not call themselves Rod Stewart fans. These people can sing along with him without any difficulty.

Stewart’s music may not grab you the first couple of times you hear it, but before long his raspy voice and soft style begin to grow on you. Soon you find yourself turning up the volume on the radio, rather than changing the station.

One special quality Stewart possesses is his long-time ability to release album after album of quality music and to sing his songs for an amazing three decades.

With all of this in mind, I decided to attend the show, Monday, October 14th at 7:30. When I arrived at the Miami Arena I had hopes of an enjoyable, lengthy concert.

The curtain was raised and there stood, Rod Stewart, an ex professional soccer player, bouncing a soccer ball on his knee. He kicked off the show by launching the ball into the audience and immediately starting with a bit from his younger years, "Maggie Mae."

I was slightly surprised at his choice for an opening song, because most people will start with a more recent hit. Yet, I think the choice was a good one because it got the audience into the show right away.

He continued with more of his older hits like "Tonight’s the Night" and "You Wear it Well" before he first spoke to the audience. He noted that he was "in good voice," because of the lengthy concert from the night before but up until that point it went unnoticed.

After a couple of songs from his new album, he went into a rendition of some old Motown singles, capped off by his own recent hit, "The Motown Song.""The crowd seemed to enjoy to Motown portion of the show. It was great they were having a very good time.

Unfortunately, as the night went on, Stewart’s voice problem became more and more evident, for why a very effective soloist audience’s participation to help him get through the show.

After about two hours, which is an average amount of time for a concert today, he apologised for his voice and the fact he wouldn’t continue.

As he left the stage the crowd was more than appreciative for the quality of the show and the jokes that distinguished 1985 ‘s "Trancers." Fans of the first film will probably be disappointed by this sequel.

"Trancers 2" lacks the energy and imagination of its predecessor, repeating the same themes and jokes that distinguished 1985’s "Trancers." Fans of the first film will probably be disappointed by this sequel.

"Trancers 2" is very nice to its female characters, compared to earlier Bud films such as "Puppet Master," which featured the slow-motion rape of a woman in an elevator.

"Trancers 2" is very safe with an endless parade of gunshot killings to satirize the average college student’s unchannelled aggressions.

This film is worthy of your renting funds if you enjoy B grade science fiction and you can tolerate laughable production values long enough to experience the director’s subtle indulgences.

Daring, Violent "Trancers 2"

by Jason Demasky

Charles Band’s Full Moon Entertainment group released "Trancers 2: The Return of Jack "Dutch"" straight to video last month for a very good reason.

The target audience for plodding, badly acted, low-budget movies like this scour video rental outlets for speedy, exploitive tales emphasizing special effects over quality and talent.

Charles Band directed and produced this science fiction story, which is an attempt to blend time travel, future galatry, a love story, humor, and film noir without the noir.

Band also scored the film with his familiar, brooding rhythms and moody sound loops that enhance the otherwise unsubstantiated production values.

The joys of "Trancers 2" are overwhelmed by the shortfalls, but they are worth noting.

Environmental awareness is stunted by the Countrworld Foundation, which Band portrays as a villainous mind-control system.

Jack Dutch (Tim Thomerson) is a cliched detective character who always seems to be chasing his minions over the females around him, with surprisingly positive results.

Dutch's conservation and the negative view of environmentalism are too bold stabs at political correctness that Band subverts instantly into the film.

Cable Channel Brightens TV Wasteland

by Greg Stallard

In an age when most people sit in front of the television set for hours watching situation comedies, the Discovery Channel is a light in a dark place.

We have had the Public Broadcasting System for a while, but the Discovery Channel (TDC), a cable channel, operates on a much higher budget and provides much better programming.

TDC offers shows which enlighten and educate as well as entertain. Programs vary from "America Coast to Coast," which portrays different cities in our country, to "Wildlife Chronicles," which teaches us about animals.

If you are interested in future technology, then you should watch TDC’s "Beyond 2000." This program informs the viewer about advances in technology like cars that run on electricity and ways of growing vegetables in the desert.

The channel offers news on a program called "World Monitor." Food enthusiasts can watch "Great Chefs of Chicago," "Pasquale’s Kitchen," and "Great Chefs of the West."

TDC has something for everybody, including a magazine called "TDC." This publication acts as a program guide with descriptions of the shows.

A great deal of space is taken up by excellent articles, making it worth while a subscription.

So if you feel broadcast TV is a dead end, give TDC a try and you will be surprised by what a good time you can have While learning.

Fort Lauderdale Celebrates Heritage

by Jason Demasky

The Fort Lauderdale Historical Society and the Broward Art Guild will present the "Old Fort Lauderdale and Heritage Celebration on Riverwalk" on December 7 and 8, downtown along Southwest Second Street.

This annual holiday festival features artists and artisans, activities, and all manner of historical goings-on. Formerly called "Christmas in Old Fort Lauderdale," the celebration still runs from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on both days.

For more information, ring the Historical Society at 485-4431 or the Broward Art Guild at 764-2005.

Roaches In The Morning
By Sean Walker

RRRRRing! The alarm clock screams to you at six o'clock. The image of your classes for today flash through your mind as you lie in bed trying to convince yourself to get up and start the day. The covers are so warm that you find yourself rolled up in them like a sausage that took you to the day off to the right. Start with a large cup of black coffee, a bowl of Life cereal, and a glass of orange juice. You open the food cabinets that you've been meaning to clean, and there he is: the longest customer. He's about to have breakfast. "Where did he come from?" How did this happen? Why? Is he dead?

It is too early in the morning to answer these questions. Instead, you tell yourself to eliminate the problem and continue with your day as normal. The objective now is to exterminate this invader of your already minimal food supply. You try to quickly examine the shelves to find therey should have three pieces of toast, but they're too drunk to drive. You try to wash dishes at three o'clock in the morning when the party finally ends. So they decide to wait until the next morning to whip up a bag of popcorn, but the cat takes it to the roof. It is 10-15% more work as this may seem. So the solitude is quiet and simple. Life is so beautiful.

It is generally understood that insects carry various diseases and viruses that cause sickness and death in humans. If these bugs manage to move into your home, you can rest assured that you have a bigger problem than you intended. This may sound like a very simple phenomenon, but it can be quite dangerous. The first step to taking care of this problem is to remember that insects are no less dangerous than other Kitchen pests. If you have food that is open and exposed, insects may easily get into your home all the more. Segmentation into your home all the more important. As a big problem as this may seem, the solitude is quiet simple. A wide variety of pests can either inhabit or move into your home. Since food and water are required for life, insects will thus be attracted to your home if not properly disposed of or cared for. Keeping windows and doors closed at night and air conditioning to keep a room cool instead will definitely reduce the possibility that cockroaches enter your home. Food that you have opened and exposed is open to insects. It is simple to eliminate the problem before it arises.

The problem continues when any member local exterminators can be hired to spray the areas where these bugs percolate. Many non-poisonous and perhaps more effective would be a more logical choice to your local hardware store and purchase a can of insect spray. Rabinowitz abandoned a proposed project to purchase a can of drain cleaner. I wish you the best of luck now on, let your husband know that although your idea was a good one.

New Book Helps Efforts In Saving Wild Cats In Asia
By Wildlife Book Review

For the last ten years, Bangkok has been known as one of the major nestings for illegal wildlife smuggling. Early in its existence, 96% of Thailand was covered by forest. By 1981 the figure dropped to 38%. As a result, only about 10.15% of Thailand remains naturally forested. In Thailand's more than 60,000 square kilometers of national forest land (government-owned land not included) there are currently estimated to be about 10 million illegal squatters. In July 1989 the Convention for International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) condemned Thailand. Thailand signed CITES in 1973 but has not enacted any laws to enforce its provisions. Therefore, trade in endangered species thrives in Thailand.

However, in spite of all these environmental threats, Thailand's mountainous terrain and relatively pristine and contains wild populations of tigers, leopards, tapirs, wild cattle, and elaphus. It is also the refuge for the country for the wild cat populations and its wildlife trade and souvenirs.

Sir Reynold Unis Straté

Jamie Peabody

Once upon a time, there lived a boy named Reynold Unis Straté. He lived a life not quite standard to that of a regular knight. When we last saw Reynold, his father, the King, sent him upon a quest to slay a dragon, but he strayed from his journey in a tavern, only to be caught in a drunken brawl...

Tis only a dream...

Once upon a time, there lived a boy named Reynold Unis Straté. He lived a life not quite standard to that of a regular knight. When in a drunken memory, he rides faster and faster on the horse's back, only to fall off the other side. He painfully mutters, "Hold still, ye stupid animal!

He stands and peers with glassy eyes into the darkness. "That is my horse? Well, I must be going!

Reynold wobbles over to his horse, and lifts himself onto its back, only to fall off the other side. He painfully mutters, "Hold still, ye stupid animal!

After successfully mounting his horse, Reynold rides off into the night. Angry with the horse's events, he rides faster and faster on the horse.

Suddenly, a low branch strikes him, and he falls hard to the ground.

His eyes flutter open and he gazes at a beautiful woman holding a dampered cloth to his head.

She smiles and says, "There ye are. Tis okay. Only a bump."

Their eyes meet, embracing Reynold as he cannot help but stare at this beautiful woman with the greenest eyes, he ever beheld? He forces out the words, "Where are I?"

"That hast no importance. What does, are you my prince," the woman whispers. She leans forward, and presses her lips to his.

Reynold thinks, "All is so beautiful. It is almost like a..."

Reynold's heart skips a beat as he awakens in the dust of the street to the ugliest woman he ever saw on top of him kissing him full on the lips. He lets out a disgusting yell that pierces the calmness of the morning. The woman leaps away.

"Where is thy mind you news? Hast you no decency?" Reynold says as he jumps to his feet, placing his hand on the hilt of his sword.

The woman scrambling behind a tree, peeking out, shaking in terror. She screams, "My mind! Your mind is still on the branch. Ye ought to know better than to ride merry!"

She realizes that she is in the wrong, and says, "Please good sir, I meant no harm to thee. It has been so long since my husband disappeared!"

Reynold feels something inside of him, "I am sorry fair lady. I know not of my madness sometimes," He sits on a rock next to the lady, and says, "Whence did thy husband disappear?"

She replies, "He went north into the mountains. People call them the Dragon's Scales now.

You see, there has been a mighty dragon that burns those who travel there, or so they say. They are never heard from again."

"Thank you, fair lady. I must be going. I have business that way, if you see thy husband, I will return him to ye,"

Reynold says as he mounts his horse, and rides away.

He rides for some time north into the mountains. The scenery changes from wooded lands to shrubs and boulders. Sun reflects off of the graysone of the rocks, making Reynold squint in his eyes.

Sweat beads off of his face. From the corner of his eye he can see a glint of metal in the rocks, high upon a cliff. He decides to investigate.

As he scales the cliff, rocks bite into his soft fingers. He mutters to himself, "Nearly there. Just a bit more."

He climbs upon a ledge staring at an incredibly smooth cliff face, save for a bronze chain that hangs unassured. Giving a powerful tug to the chain, metal grinds against the stone, and magically the smooth face of the cliff pulls back, revealing an illuminated room.

We'll point our names in the ebony night
With the white of the clouds from day
And the rays of the sun and the velvet moon
To guide us alonethis way.

We'll travel upon the dragon's wings
With the silver sparrows above
And on thousands of scarlet rose petals
We'll make sweet memories of love
Forever engraved in a warm summer night
Our souls captured by sky,
Say good-bye to the sadness here
All the times we've sat and cried
Hostages in a forsaken land.
Finally set free of all
You and I let one together
Wait on the dragon's call.
We'll walk with unblessed spirits
Guided by horse's mane.
It'll introduce you to game,
A game called "Go Insane."

Nova College Fall Baseball Begins

By Dan Finn

The Nova College Fall baseball season started on September 8 and continues through to November 5th. This exhibition season, competing primarily against state junior colleges, allows coaches to look at new and returning players for the league's sanctioned spring season. The NAIA (National Association of Intercollegiate Athletes) governs the Knights, which requires the fall season to be short because the NAIA allows only intramural softball and spring competition.

This year Nova competes in district 25F, which includes all of Florida, but not Georgia, as it did in past.

Thus far the Fall season promises a successful spring showing, according to team sources. The Nova baseball program gets stronger and stronger each year. Nova has its best potential ever of taking the district 25F title, it did in past.

This year Nova combines a number of techniques in its recruitment efforts. Nova finds some players through recommendations from high school teams. Nova's contacts other prospects at college fairs. Other players transfer from junior colleges. The baseball team has an intercollegiate, pitching coach Pat Jones. He travels all over Florida to recruit.

After a player is noticed, he is contacted by phone, and the process continues. All Nova sports programs follow this procedure.

Golf Off To An Impressive Start

By Dan Finn

The Nova College golf team's 91- season got off to an impressive start, finishing second at the Oyster Invitational hosted in North Florida. Nova placed ninth out of twelve teams.

The second tournament was the Nova Invitational, played at Jacksonville Country Club East, on October 4th and 5th. Nova edged Barry University by four strokes.

The goal of the players is to shoot an average of 305 as a team. That would take an average of seventy-six from each player.

Five players from Nova play in each tournament. The top four scores are posted. So far, three of the top four players are turning in seventy-six's: the fourth's game hasn't come around yet.

"We always knew that we could do well. Now we're doing what we're supposed to be doing," player Tom Vitucci said.

Now we're doing what we're supposed to be doing.

This year the team is having a lot more practice. There is much more concentration on putting and chipping.

Emory Riddell of Florida Atlantic College was the top two at the districts so they can qualify for the National Championship.

Ladies Volleyball Win 2 of 3 Games

By Dan Finn

The weekend of October 19th, the Lady Knights won both of their matches, improving their chances for post-season play.

On Friday, October 18th, the Lady Knights battled St. Leo College in a four game match, in which the Knights won. During the match St. Leo won the first game by a score of 15-8, but the Knights rallied and won the next three games 15-11, 15-9, and 15-12. In the match Natalie Kramer had 18 kills, while Luna Shatas had 25 assists.

The next match on Saturday was an important conference match with the University of North Florida. The Knights were defeated in the first two games 15-1 and 15-6. The Lady Knights then rallied by winning the first six points of the third game. The Knights went on to win the next two games 15-11 and 18-16. The fifth and final game of the match the Knights battled valiantly, but came up short by losing to the Ospreys of UNF. In the Match Natalie Kramer had 18 kills, while Luna Shatas had 35 assists.

The third match of the weekend was a three game sweep over Embry-Riddle College. The Knights were a little flat in the beginning of the series, but rebounded and won the match 15-11, 15-10, and 15-10.
