Student Life’s International Student Services provides amazing services for all

by Juan Pablo Correa

A suau saude.
Prosit. In English, let's just say "Cheers" for the international community attending Nova Southeastern University!

As Student Life Assistant for International Student Services, I'd like to salute the international students who undoubtedly make this university a more diverse, more interesting, and even a more prestigious place. This past August, students from Sweden, Brazil, Guatemala, Colombia, Russia, the Dominican Republic, and the Caribbean, among other nations, made their arrival to the United States of America. All of them had one purpose in mind: to cross their own borders to learn more and increase their potential.

Imagine trying to enter the campus only to have an armed security guard ask for identification at one of several checkpoints. Never, you might be thinking, especially here at Small Campus U where even NOVALENT knows you by first-name basis. Well that's just one of the many changes our campus will experience by July 1996. Most of you are already aware that the Olympics will be held in Atlanta next summer. However, unfamiliar to many is that NSU is making preparations, as we speak, to house eight international soccer teams (six men's, two women's). Yes, that's right, Nova Southeastern University an Olympic Village. Has a certain appealing ring to it, doesn't it?

Nevertheless, here are some of the changes our campus will endure or already has endured before playing host to the Olympic teams competing in preliminary and quarterfinal matches in Miami’s Orange Bowl:

-All students planning on staying in the Leo Goodwin Residence Hall next summer will be transferred to the see OLYMPICS on 6

Recreation Center almost set for opening

by Marsha Berry

The center, being built at this very moment, will have three basketball courts, as well as two tennis courts, a pool, men's and women's locker rooms, and a 1400 sq ft. multi-purpose room. The room will be used for dances, comedic appearances, and specialty classes such as line dancing, aerobics, and martial arts classes.

Originally, the Rec. Center was going to be built behind the dorms, but some people would interpret that to mean it was only for the residents. It was then decided that the center should be placed in a central location for all students to use. Now, if you pass by the main entrance of the see NOVA ON 6

Take back the night
WRI educates women

by Karina LeDezma

If you are a woman, chances are that you are also a victim of the fear that plagues our society. Although we do our best to promote the liberation of women, there is still one set-back to our struggle, the violence that preys on feminine vulnerability. But rather than recoil in paranoia, we have an alternative to wondering who lurks behind us in dark corners. We can protect ourselves.

The Women’s Resource Institute offers a shield against these lurking predators. This month, W.R.I. is promoting a variety of activities that will educate women as well as men on safety. This month’s agenda follows:

September 20th: Steve Bias, Director of the Public Service Office, will be the speaker at a luncheon held in the Rosenthal Student Center’s private dining room, at 12:30 p.m. He will speak on personal safety.

September 26th: “Take Back the Night,” will be held in the Rotunda of the Administration Building. This candlelight ceremony will be held on a Tuesday, beginning at 5:15 p.m. The purpose is to remind women that they are empowered to win over their freedom from the oppression of violence.

September 27th: “Domestic Violence” speech conducted by Bonnie Flynn, the Executive Director of Women in Distress. It will take place in the Rosenthal Student Center’s private dining room, at 12:30 p.m.

“We women are reclaiming our safety... as we are most often the victims of crime in this society,” said Cynthia Griffith, Coordinator of W.R.I. Events such as “Take Back the Night” offer the hope of winning the battle against aggressors. Cynthia assures us that the activities offered by W.R.I. will be valuable in offering support for all victims of violence. The Women’s Resource Institute meetings will be held in Goodwin Hall. Dates have not yet been set. For further information please contact Cynthia Griffith at (305) 476-1933, or e-mail (wri@polaris.ncs.nova.edu).

The safety of any educational institution’s students and faculty members should be a high priority. With the opportunities offered by the Women’s Resource Institute and Nova Southeastern University’s safety priorities, we can procure a safer, violence-free campus environment.

We hope that you too join the struggle against violence.

NSU Offers New Minor

by Nathan Burgess

History, The Arts, and Philosophy. Dr. Steve, Director of Liberal Arts says that the minor will “give them students a stronger background for other majors.” Contact Dr. Steve in the Liberal Arts Department for more information.

School excitement is on the rise at NSU

Dear fellow students,

If you have walked around campus lately, you might sense a higher degree of excitement than usual. This excitement is because of a number of factors.

The most recent event that is causing some of the excitement is the successful Greek Rush Week. Fraternities and sororities displayed their letters and colors for a full week to show students what they are all about.

Information tables with representatives from each Greek organization explained to interested people the benefits and community activities they participate in throughout the year.

After speaking with several Greek members, the rush was a success. The future of every organization relies heavily on the development of potential young leaders to carry on the traditions.

Congratulations to all the new pledges!

In the upcoming weeks, you will be seeing information about the most memorable weekend on campus — HOMECOMING! Homecoming weekend is going to be full of sporting events, contests, and an elegant celebration to cap it all off.

Homecoming traditionally has brought out the most pride for NSU athletics and the University from the students. Aside from the formal dance, the most exciting event is the raft race. The race will take place in the blue and gold canal and will feature a number of campus organizations building rafts from the most unusual floating materials. This is one event no one should miss.

Finally, with October quickly approaching, those students who regularly visit the Rosenthal Student Center may notice our new Recreation Complex coming close to completion. The official opening of the pool and complex will be sometime in the middle of October. The Student Government and Greek Council will jointly host a grand opening party to celebrate the official opening of the long since promised pool.

Recently, Rosenthal added a new attraction for students to enjoy. Two arcade games, Mortal Combat II and N.B.A. Jam Tournament Edition, were brought in by your Student Government as a scholarship fundraiser. All profits will go to the S.C.A. Scholarship Fund which is awarded to deserving students at the end of the winter semester.

Unlike most places, these games are only one quarter per play. We do have plans to increase the number of arcade games in the future but that depends on how much you, the students, show interest.

There are many other things going on around campus to keep in mind in the upcoming weeks. They include the home athletic games for volleyball and soccer, Key West Weekend Getaway, intramural bowling and football, comedians, and a host of other great activities.

Now that I have overloaded you with enough information, I hope you take advantage of what this University has to offer. The Student Government is always working to make this a better place for us to grow, learn, and have fun. If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to call the Student Government Office at 476-4734 or write us on e-mail at sga@polaris.

Sincerely,

Anthony Dominici, President
Nova College Student Government
Summer isn’t just for students

by Nathan Burgess

Despite what many students may feel or think, our professors don’t just spend their time hibernating in their offices over the summer. Most of them, in fact, have summers that are more adventurous than our own. This past summer, many professors took the time to travel to a variety of places for various reasons.

Some went to places as nearby as West Palm Beach and some as far away as Australia. I had the honor to interview a few of these travelers and see what they had to say to the students.

Dr. Linda Gordon, who probably traveled the farthest, hopped on a plane to visit Australia. While there, she attended a conference on the Grotesque in Darwin.

At the conference, she also presented a paper on Surrealism and Sartre, which shall be published early next year. Since the trip was not all for work, Dr. Gordon took the time to visit friends and explore the country, including aboriginal sites in the Kakadu National Park.

If you plan on visiting Australia, Dr. Gordon advises, “Start small. I highly recommend Sydney for its gorgeous architecture and stunning location... But the real Australia is outside of the urban environment.”

Dr. Stieve, Director of Liberal Arts, took a few weeks off during the summer amidst his busy schedule as Director of the Department. He visited both Southwest Michigan and Munich, Germany for pure vacation time.

Dr. Stieve enjoyed the chance to “speak German and visit a city I’d read quite a bit about.”

Dr. Stieve advises students on traveling to take comfortable clothes, get to know the country by reading about it, and talking to other people who have gone there, and to drink lots of water.

Dr. Barker’s many trips to Ecuador, and his dedication to the Cloud Forest Project have resulted in many changes since the team’s first trip this past January.

Student Life begins year with running stretch

by Christie MacDonald

On your mark, get set, stretch!!!

Participants raced their buddies and attempted to defy the laws of nature at Student Life's first T.G.I.F. of the year featuring the Bungee Run.

The September 1st T.G.I.F. held on the Rosenthal patio, had the usual array of B.B.Q. goodies supplied by DAKA, refreshments, and music to put one in a festive mood. However, the Bungee Run added a flair of danger and excitement to the evening.

For the Bungee Run, two participants went onto the padded, vertical "racetrack." The Bungee Coordinators strapped a bungee cord onto the students' waists. Then, the race began. When the coordinator gave the cue, both racers went as far as they could and put a foamy pad onto the center velcro strip. Whoever placed the pad the farthest in three tries was declared the winner. Many students returned again and again to this free amusement.

Five-timer Yiri Ramirez declared after her victory that "I'm exhausted, but I conquered it!"

Every month, Student Life hosts a differently themed T.G.I.F.

Next month features a Psychic T.G.I.F. on Friday, October 13, where students may receive a consultation with a psychic.

Special Invitation From NCSGA Treasurer

by Herve Jean-Pierre

Welcome to all new and returning students. My name is Herve Jean-Pierre, Treasurer of The Nova College Student Government Association (NCSGA).

The semester has begun and we are off to a fantastic, prosperous new year. We, the NCSGA, look forward to interacting with administrators and staff in order to meet your needs. This is Student Government's function and duty.

So far this year we have had two successful meetings which students attended and either asked questions, or gave us ideas on what they thought was vital for us to have a successful year.

These meetings were only one hour in length, but they were effective. They were well-meant because we took the time to listen, and afterwards we immediately took the proper action to solve the problem.

If you missed these two meetings, we urge you to come out and voice your opinions at all our other gatherings. Your opinions count because we base our decisions on your thoughts.

If you cannot make it to our meetings, we encourage you to come out and meet us at our monthly "SGA Day." This is a day that we have set aside for you to meet us outside of Parker. The first one will be September 20, 1995, between 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m.

We look forward to meeting everyone that day and every day thereafter. Thank you in advance for allowing us to serve you.

Phi Alpha Delta: celebrating ten years of fraternal professionalism

by Heather Gates

Phi Alpha Delta is the pre-law fraternity on campus. This organization is celebrating the 10-year anniversary of the Knight Chapter here at N.S.U. During the last 10 years, Phi Alpha Delta has been known for its professionalism.

The fraternity has made many exciting plans to celebrate its anniversary. Under Professional Programming, they are planning a mentor program in which the members are paired up with members of the local legal community, as well as law school students.

Also, many guest speakers are planned for the year including Dean Price from the law school here at N.S.U. Phi Alpha Delta will hold a test fest again this year. People will be able to practice their skills for the LSAT, GRE, MCAT and GMAT.

During February, Phi Alpha Delta will host a cocktail party for Black History Month. In March, they will host a party for Women's History Month. Many prominent members of the local legal community will be invited to the parties.

There will be guest speakers correlating with the month being celebrated. All students are welcome at these events.

The fraternity will do a lot of work in the community also. For the second year, P.A.D. will be volunteering with Broward Respite Care, the March of Dimes, and Kids in Distress.

Many social events are also planned for this year, including a Thanksgiving Dinner and a holiday dinner. In April, the month in which the university actually received the charter, Phi Alpha Delta will hold a barbecue that will be open to all students.

Phi Alpha Delta meets every other Thursday at 6:30 PM at RSC. If you are interested in hearing more about Phi Alpha Delta, please contact Heather Gates (305) 927-5126.
Vegan Recipes

by Cindy Milloy

As I walked from my room in Goodwin Residence Hall the Saturday morning following the first "Welcome Back Party," I was amazed to see how much litter had been left by my fellow students. I found a trail of beer bottles and cans, along with pizza boxes and Wendy bags throughout the second floor. The trail did not end there however.

As I strolled along the path to the Rosenthal building, I observed a variety of beer containers and was left wondering if this was a way of a student (or many students) finding the path back to their rooms after a night of partying. After all, isn't that what I was expected to prepare. (And cheap tool)

Appearance of familiarity with kitchen dinner

1/2 pound lentils
1 small onion sliced
1/2 t crumbled sage
1/2 t minced garlic
pinch of dried oregano
1 t salt
dash of cayenne pepper
3 large potatoes, cooked and UNpeeled
1/2-1 c hot soy milk (rice milk works too)
margarine to taste

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In large mixing bowl, mash the cooked lentils thoroughly and add the onion and seasonings. Put the lentil mixture in a lightly oiled 2-quart casserole dish. In a separate bowl, mash the potatoes and add hot soy milk, margarine and salt. Beat by hand or with an electric mixer until fluffy. Spread the mashed potatoes on top of the mashed lentils and bake for 20 minutes, or until potatoes are dry on top. Place the pie under the broiler to brown the top. Serve warm. Twenty minutes to prepare/25 to 30 minutes to bake.

If you have specific questions on vegetarianism, please e-mail me at (leedsa@polaris.nov.edu). Comments are encouraged and appreciated.

Olympic games come graduate dorms.

- Three new athletic fields adjacent to the baseball field which will be ready for use within thirty days-weather permitting.
- An eight-foot, nine-gauge chain-link fence will surround the village with police and security monitoring who enters and exits the campus.
- An on-site bank will handle foreign currency.
- A prayer-room will face east for Muslim players.
- All vending machines on campus will be changed from Pepsi to Coke because of the latter’s Olympic sponsorship.
- In addition to having met with Defense experts, organizers will also import closed-circuit television, metal detectors, and bomb-sniffing dogs as part of their preparation to bolster security.
- About 150 police officers will conduct on-campus security, which has a budget of nearly one million dollars.
- Once on campus, players will lounge in the Rosenthal dining area after being bused to and from their practices.
- Speaking of practices, an eight-foot high screened chain-link fence will separate each field to keep opposing teams from spying on one another.
- Yes, the Olympic ideal has not been forgotten.
- According to the rumor mill, lights, previously not planned for the new fields, might now be added thanks to the Olympic Committee’s decision to move games to night time. Thus, teams are now seeking to practice in similar conditions, i.e., night practices.
- Gaining new athletic fields with the possible addition of lights improves conditions for both competitive and intramural sports. With more fields now available, the use can be spread around to allow them suitable time to recuperate thus, subsequently reducing the wear and tear on the Bermuda grass which has been a significant problem with the current fields.
- Besides the addition of better on-campus facilities, like the soccer fields, the Olympics also brings international attention to this university.
- Millions of Olympic followers focus their main attention on the world’s most popular sport, soccer. Consequently, all eyes will be on that Davie campus hosting their favorite athletes. Can you say HUGE PROPAGANDA?

Psychology Club has exciting plans this year

by Evan Rosen and Wendy Sloan

Wow, another summer has passed and we're back to school. No need to worry, because the Psychology Club is back as well. This means only one thing: another exciting year at N.S.U.!

As always, the Psychology Club will allow students to expand their undergraduate experience well beyond the classroom.

Those who participate will have the opportunity to hear professionals in the field share their knowledge in various subjects. Previous speakers have included multicultural psychologist, Dr. John Louis and sex therapist, Virginia Johnson from Masters and Johnson.

In addition, students will learn about different careers in psychology through several forums highlighting specific specialties.

Each event will feature the current prospects and earnings, and other important information. Fortunately, this service will reduce the time students spend searching for this information.

For those students interested in gaining practical experience, the psychology club provides an array of opportunities.

For example, throughout the year, members will learn about and role-play rudimentary counseling techniques. Students can also get involved in research, and produce the club's second research project.

Volunteering provides yet another avenue to gain experience as the club will visit several community organizations and observe how they operate.

Finally, to accustom students to the writing skills virtually required in the field and to cultivate creativity, each member will have the opportunity to submit articles to The Knight on relevant psychological issues.

The Psychology club is also proud to announce that it will host two conferences during the year. At the end of each semester, any students can turn in papers and/or research to the Behavioral Sciences Department for registration.

Individuals will then present accepted material to other students and professors at a banquet via posters or oration.

When considering whether or not to join the Psychology Club, you should think about the cost versus the benefits. Basically, one hour, every other week is all the effort required. In return, you receive a bountiful supply of extracurricular knowledge and experience which will pay dividends whether applying to graduate school or simply learning more about life.

The Psychology Club personally hopes to see you at our meetings every other Wednesday at 4:30 p.m.

On September 27 in the Rosenthal Student Center, Dr. Malouff will give a workshop discussing techniques for admission to graduate psychology programs.

Students with any questions or suggestions can leave a memo in the envelope in the Behavioral Sciences Department or contact Evan Rosen, President at trosene@polaris.ncs.nova.edu and Wendy Sloan, vice-president at sloanw@polaris.ncs.nova.edu.
Insiders: Short comments on sports
by Gus Bravo

These are some of the reflections of a summer bum. Basically, these and other opinions do not necessarily reflect those of the staff or anybody else for that matter. They are merely the views of yet another Monday Morning Quarterback.

- Right now Jimmy Johnson is in a boat off the Florida Keys with a Margarita in one hand and Don Shula’s pink slip in the other.
- If only Gary Sheffield could have been injured prior to the season, we could have experienced a pennant race here in South Florida. (Just kidding, of course.) The Sheff is by far the best player the franchise has ever had and will have for a long time. It’s just very surprising to see how much better the once hapless Marlins are playing without him.
- Great news, Heat fans! Management’s solution to the team’s mediocre talent and lack of cohesiveness: Pat Riley. Hope this forty-something slickster can rebound and block shots too.
- Nothing like pigging out on junk food and watching ESPN’s Body Shaping.
- Let me see if I got this right. Bryan Harvey is the second highest paid player on the Marlins, but he’s got nothing to show for it. See SPORTS on 10.

Women’s soccer is revved up, ready to go
by Gus Bravo

Have you noticed those new faces vibrantly walking around campus? The ones belonging to a youthful, yet confident group of women.

Of course, all women at Nova are young and confident (Hey, I have to win my brownie points somehow).

Our organization is very community-oriented and even more dedicated to Nova Southeastern in making campus life better every year.

Last year, our volunteer projects included the Dan Marino Walk-A-Thon, Blockbuster Hole-In-One Tournament, and 24-Hour Softball (for kids with cancer).

We also sponsored the Love Jen Festival to aid children with cancer, and collected over 300 toys for a child enrichment center in South Florida.

This year we are planning the same activities as well as many more.

About every other month, usually on holidays, we throw off-campus parties for Christmas, St. Patrick’s Day, a costume party for Halloween, and many others.

But this particular group stands out from the rest. Those appealing smiles compose Nova Southeastern University’s first ever Women’s Soccer team, and this weekend they kicked off their inaugural season. Although the results were not favorable, on the scoreboard, the attractive numbers are.

We have been known to throw some of the best parties at N.S.U. Beta Theta Pi is a very dedicated organization. All members are expected to work hard to keep good grades and do what is needed to help the organization.

We expect nothing less than 100% from our members and give the same in return.

Lady Knights struggle to be V-ball champs in opening games

by Daniel Illman

Slump. Drought. Setback. Every team in the history of sport has gone through one of these dry spells at one time or another. After opening up the season with a lowly 0-4 record, questions have been raised about the strength of the grip of the Nova Southeastern Lady Knights Volleyball team’s empirical hold over their usually overmatched rivals.

Eye brows were raised after the annual Blue-Gold scrimmage when a player stated, “We stunk. We played like a junior high school team.” After dropping their first two matches without winning a game, the Lady Knights welcomed Rollins College in their home opener. Down two games to nothing, the ladies rallied behind Rashida Frazier’s strong serving to take the third.

Undaunted, Rollins rolled back to win the match by a final score of 15-13, 15-8, 4-15, 15-8. Vanessa Gutierrez led the squad in kills with 17, most coming from the left outside hitting position. Thelma White smashed ten winners, while Anni Palacio rained down nine kills.

This season Lady Knights off to a mysteriously slow start

Knight spark, it was the lack of fundamentals that hurt Nova Southeastern. Poor serving and other unforced errors led to the demise, while the Ladies were bumbling and stumbling over each other during rallies. Perhaps these are just signs of individuals learning to play as a team.

The problem with that argument is that only two starters graduated last year. These ladies should be able to read each other's minds on the court.

New head coach Joanna Sahm was hopeful, though, that the team would be able to come through against conference rival Palm Beach Atlantic, as the Sailfish usually bring out the best of all NSU teams.

The Lady Knight contingent once again started slowly, dropping the first service. Also, the cohesion of the team has to be questioned, especially during movement directly after the serve. Many times after a Palacio service, she would run directly into White on her way to her spot on the outside.

If the Lady Knights can curb these mental errors, they should be back in form in no time at all.

An 0-4 record in Ladies Volleyball is not like Notre Dame losing to Northwestern in football. No championships are completely forfeited. As Sahm and her corps grow together, the Lady Knights will not fall over and die.

Expect much more improvement in the future beginning with a home match up vs. Northwood University on the 22nd. All one needs to end a drought is a cup of water, or in this case, some Gatorade.

Sports Update: A look into recent basketball, soccer, and baseball

by Gus Bravo

Basketball team seeks new leader

Jim Michaels, head basketball coach, resigned from his duties citing commitments and teaching responsibilities as the main reasons. Michaels, who took over the helm from then-coach Sonny Hansley, was entering his ninth season at NSU before abruptly making his decision. A teacher at Hollywood Hills High School, Michaels felt "this was the appropriate time to resign." He was coming off his best-ever season here after taking the Knights to their first NAIA championship Tournament berth, where they finished with a #13 national ranking and a 22-12 overall record. A search for Michaels' successor will begin promptly, considering the Knights open their season November 4 at Edward Waters. Look for a full-time coach to be Michael's replacement, but almost certainly not someone from within the program.

Soccer team off to slow start

Unfortunately the Men's Soccer team has not fared as well as they had hoped in this early part of their season. With only one victory in five games, the Knight's innovative attack will take some time to get accustomed to. Both players and coaches hope to learn valuable lessons from these early losses as they gear themselves for their prime goal, a trip to the National Tournament. Although having a winning record early on is important, the team is well aware that the only victories that matter are those achieved in post-season play. Therefore, scheduling top ten opponents such as Florida Tech and Rollins College allows the team to evaluate themselves against the best with hopes of working out the glitches for tournament time. The Knight's next home game is September 26 against Barry University.

Baseball team continues its amazing success

While most of us were enjoying our summer days, the baseball team was completing yet another successful season. After defeating conference foes Flagler College, St. Thomas, and Embry-Riddle in post-season games, the men took on Georgia SW. With Mike Chismar leading the way and recording his twelfth victory against one defeat, the Knights easily conquered their opponent behind a balanced attack that recorded five runs on seven hits. Next up for the team was conference nemesis Embry-Riddle AU with whom the men had split the previous four games. It turned out to be a pitchers duel, with Paul DeLaosa eventually earning the loss by the score of 2-1. However, where the Knights really faltered was on defense, by committing three costly errors. The following day was the same story, as three errors benefited Auburn-Montgomery's victory. Overall, coach Sonny Hansley's squad once again gained national notoriety as they compiled a 40-15 record for the season.

Hot club for everyone in South Beach

by Michelle Melfi

Wow! What a great time. The place is huge. The main room has two long bars and a gigantic dance floor, with a large stage upon which the brave chickies dance. In here, they played mostly nostalgic disco and grooves. It's not too crowded a dance floor, but many people were dancing for hours.

Wait, there's more. There's another room that opens at 1:30am. This room is also very big. In here, they played hip-hop and some radio reggae. There were so many dancers in this crowded room, with so many different attires and "dancing" styles.

There is still one more room. Passing through a black curtain, one engages a little, teeny, weenie hallway where ten black bean-bag chairs and three small tables had ashtrays, candles and matches upon them. The pungent odor of this room was distinctive, overpowering, and so enticing. What is the room for? Socializing.

Check out Fat Blacks on Washington Avenue in South Beach. You'll dance, you'll party, then you'll dance some more until 5am if you like.

RAGE

by Candace Kehl

Rage against an emotion, one not yet felt.
Knowledge of its existence, aggravates me within.
I tremble....
in fear,
in lust,
in love.

Love for the emotion, brings me to tears.
Lust for the emotion, brings me to lie.
Fear for the emotion, brings me to death.

My Abyss

Unhappiness, no reassurance...
All support has been denied.
You strive to create, this world without hate.
Discontent has spread about,
as you drown in such an abyss of frustration.

Nothing

Darkness surrounds me
as shadows grasp my hands
like a knife it plunges, Fathomless and rooted.
My cynicism has finally overtaken.
As I begin to suffocate,
my soul’s anguish envelops my mind.
Slowly it abducts all thoughts.
I yearn to cry out,
as the loneliness raps me of life.

A cherished friendship remains.

BUT...unless you reach and strive..
You definitely WON'T.

I, Sparrow

by Nick Moore

You cannot appreciate being limited, being trapped from the potential you have. If it wasn't for this, I'd be a genius.

I live in a world where I may die if I knock back some Sex on the Beach or even a Bud. I will never be able to fully appreciate a Zinfandel or a Chablis.

You cannot appreciate being out of the norm, where the water will kill you. I can only look and wonder how wonderful it must be to not have gills and to walk on dry land.

Yes, sparrow, he thinks he knows.

But if we try, it is to deaf ears.
“Mortal Kombat” an adventure into videogame lore
by Christopher Kehl

“Mortal Kombat” is when I realize that all I want is Pac-man. The video-game portent was the biggest good points.

In this ongoing saga of video games’ transference to the silver screen, “Mortal Kombat” is only the next phase. Serious special effects, plot, and both adult and youthful humor are sprinkled together in this flick, like oregano in my Thanksgiving lasagna. The video-game to silver screen genre has taken a step up in this film.

It’s still a gratuitous martial arts “fight” film, but it has its underlying good points.

By far, it is the best flick out for those of you who have pumped half of your allowance into the video game since its creation, but if you have never played, I warn you now. Going to the movie with those who have shall lead to scary things.

For instance, seeing your friends mimic playing the game with imaginary joysticks and buttons during the fight scenes is rather frightening.
Another surprise might be the audience doing the wave when Sonya does her special attack, or even more interesting is your friends’ reaction to a large bad guy becoming a soprano thanks to Johnny Cage.

All in all, the movie was well worth the $4 of a midnight admission at Sawgrass Multiplex (which has intelligently come down from its greed-induced $6.75 to a mere $5 with Student ID and midnight shows being $4). Go see it, but beware the people who walk in with joysticks and quarters!

An execution
by Nathan Burgess

With that final thought, the sirens died and I fell into a deep sleep. A sleep, as deep as those of young children in the arms of their mothers. I woke the next morning with the blinding sun in my eyes. From the opening in my cell, the intensity of the sun was overwhelming as it glared into my pupils. I wondered what will happen to me when I see this glorious sight again—if I see this glorious sight again. I touched my forehead and felt the cold residue of droplets of sweat, perhaps from the sunlight, or a dream. The sunlight was so powerful that my head began to throb with the thoughts and memories of the past.
I heard a guard approach the door.

He looked in my direction and muttered, “How are you this fine morning?”

I cursed at him.

He muttered something that I couldn’t understand and walked away.

As the day drew on, I had many people visit me, whose purpose it was to bother me. Some asked me if I had any requests before my execution.
I didn’t reply. Some asked me if I wanted to see the priest. I simply laughed. I began thinking about all the people that I actually wanted to see. Mainly, I wanted to see Maman once before I joined her forever. I reconsidered some of my options and realized that the priest knew no more than I did. I enjoyed that feeling for in fact, I knew more than the priest. I knew the feeling of killing a man, the feeling of having a man want to kill me, and the feeling of knowing that I shall be killed. This knowledge was the deadliest knowldge of all, the knowledge of life and

Churn out the rumor mill

by Kim Fichera

"Did you hear about Julie and John? They broke up yesterday! And you know what? I saw her hanging out with some guy last night, (I won't mention any names) but apparently she was 'with' him. Can you believe her? Some nerve."

How many times a day do you hear words like these, (also known as rumors) and see people gasping and laughing at other's expense? Occurrences like this happen more frequently than most people realize. Rumors are everywhere and they are flying faster than ever. It seems as though the smaller the community, the more rumors generate, and the faster they spread, as I'm sure that most of us have discovered here at NSU.

Webster's New World Dictionary hit the nail right on the head by defining a rumor as: General talk not based on definite knowledge, mere gossip, hearsay, and a statement in general knowledge. What should be included in this definition are two more extras: One is the phrase, "Shh, here he/she comes." The second is that people form their own assumptions based on false information about that certain individual. Because of this false information, people are not given a fair chance in some situations.

You know what happens. Many times people see a certain individual and will say to the person they are with, "Did you hear about them?" That phrase then continues on into a long conversation.

Meanwhile, the individual listening to the story didn't have any idea see RUMOR on 16

Strange way to die

death on your own hands. It was no wonder that they executed such supposed criminals so quickly. They didn't want anyone else to know the immense feeling of freedom given by this deed, or the immense feeling of fear given from this knowledge. It was then that I began to fully realize how fragile life truly was. Fragile enough for a single shot to kill a man, fragile enough for the single action of dropping a blade to take away the last breath from my lips. I began to hear the crickets chirp in the quiet of the night. It was a serenity that wasn't there in the midday, when they were erecting my death sentence. The silence was deafening.

I stood up and walked around my cell. The cell was my world. I had nothing else, and I needed nothing else. I laid down again and waited. I must have fallen asleep, for when I woke up, bells were ringing in the distance, announcing my execution, my end. I heard the crowd start to build at my deathsite. At first, a small murmur was heard in the distance followed by a loud rumbling immediately outside of my cell. The guard came, opened the door, and escorted me out of the cell. The priest was chanting in Latin. Our eyes met, and we knew each other. He never changed his rhythm. We walked down the long hallway leading outside in single file, with the priest, followed by myself, and the guard. I could see the blinding rectangle outside. The priest disappeared into it as I entered it. The warmth from the sun was overwhelming. I was instantly blinded. The only thing I felt was the sun and the immense hatred from the crowd. I could see my executioner standing tall against the wind. The glare off the blade pierced my eyes and went to my soul. I heard the guard leave and walked towards the crowd, and my death, I could feel the stares of hate and disgust from the audience. When I was asked if I had any final wishes, I contemplated my options. Ironically I did. I wanted the execution to be quick, simple, and shocking for the viewers. It was then that the sun was blocked, and a chill fell over my body, and my soul.

I do not wish to say. Even though their science is great, their spirits have not changed. Indeed, They are worsened. They do not overcome their warring spite. They look for trifie over Which they fight. They distress me."

The window displayed two small Children in a sandbox. They were squabbling over a truck Carrying a cylinder. "It's mine, all mine," they shouted. The image of two museum Curators deciding which Way to hang a simple new Painting of black and white flashed. It had no signature, no Way to tell which uncolor Should be above the other. "One must be superior To the other," they agreed. Across the crystal pane a Third scene could be seen. A man Proceeds to rid himself of An ancient elm in his yard. "These branches have brushed across My windows for the last time! I won't have to pay the boy To sweep these leaves but once more." At that he spits into a Pool of stagnant water and Tosses his cigarette to Earth.

"They do distress me," He said. "Once they lived in peace, but then Even they did not listen To me. Always they pray for Relief from their own actions," He pulled down the shade, turned away. "I'll come back another day."

Building On Success

by Gus Bravo

On Saturday September 16, Corey Johnson, director of athletics, named Nova Southeastern University’s new Head Basketball Coach. Tony McAndrews, 52, comes to NSU as Jim Michaels’ replacement and the school’s first-ever full-time basketball coach. Johnson called McAndrews’ hiring “not only a great addition to our program, but also to our league.” Michaels, who worked as a part-time coach for nine years, announced his resignation September 5 citing a need to spend more time with his family and teaching responsibilities as prime reasons.

McAndrews’ previous employment was with the University of Arizona as the school’s assistant head basketball coach. During his seven-year stint (1987-1993), McAndrews helped guide the Men’s program to five PAC-10 championships (1988-1991 and 1993) as well as one NCAA Final Four appearance (1988). The Wildcats’ 1988 team also recorded an impressive 35-3 mark, which earned them the fourth most successful record in NCAA history.

In 1980, McAndrews directed his first Final Four team as an assistant with the University of Iowa. After spending five years in the Big Ten (1975-1980), he moved onto Colorado State University (1980-1987), where he built a reputable program as the Men’s head basketball coach.

With twenty-five years of coaching experience at the college level, McAndrews is “looking forward to the challenge” of directing the Knight Basketball team. The credentials he brings to Nova are outstanding. In see TONY on 20 about that one individual. Now because of the story, that individual possibly (I’m not going to say “will,” because I’m sure there are people who find good in all) has formulated his or her own opinion on the person based on what they just heard. Scary isn’t it?

Say you’re just living your life minding your own business and one night you decide to give a friend of the opposite sex a ride home. Someone sees you getting into the car with your friend and automatically assumes the worst. The next couple of days your friend seems distant to you. You wonder what’s going on. You ask that person what’s up and they just give you a cold stare.

After a couple of days of wondering, you finally confront the source. They tell you someone heard that you two were together. You wonder where did that come from? I just gave you a ride home! You tell him/her that you never said anything and the two of you work things out. Is that fair? Of course not. But that’s just one of the many problems that rumors cause, people forming false facts about certain individuals.

I asked some Nova students their opinions about rumors. Here is what several students had to say. One anonymous student said “Because Nova is such a small school, rumors spread like wildfire. No one can enter or leave the dorm without everyone knowing who was there and why. If something happens at a party on Friday night, by Sunday morning it seems like everyone has heard some version of the story.”

Mike Fischer said, “Many students blow rumors out of proportion. They could just hear one simple fact and it gets blown into something much larger.”

James Reinlieb, a senior at NSU, has seen through the years how rumors can develop and spread fast in such a small community. I asked him what he thought of individuals who spread rumors that are false. He replied, “Rumors that prove to be unfounded serve no purpose except to agitate people.”

What type of individual plans and devises rumors? People who need a life! Please, if you are one of those individuals, get some help! Remember, we are NOT IN HIGH SCHOOL ANYMORE! We are in college. We are supposed to act like MATURE ADULTS. Do these individuals feel that by creating or spreading rumors they will be more liked? Does it give them a feeling of power? That is pretty pathetic. If that is how you feel you will be liked and how you will get power, then go back to high school. Try being friendly to people and not fake. You’d be surprised at how well it works. Most individuals are turned off by people who sit around and gossip about others. Yes! It’s true! Should we all be afraid of actions we take or who we associate with? Is it going to get to that point? I hope not, or our world could get pretty monotonous. Imagine everyone doing the same thing the same way all the time. I hope many of you will continue living your life as you have been and remember that rumors are just that: RUMORS. Real friends will know the truth and so will you.

After all, isn’t that what’s important?

Some of us at The Knight decided to take a look at the past issues and see how Nova, you the student, and we the newspaper have changed over the years. We hope you find this flashback to Volume 4 Issue 2 enjoyable and interesting.

Can a New Coach Bring Nova a District Title?

In this article Jeff Sponder discusses whether or not a new coach can bring the Women's Volleyball team a District Title.

Interesting tidbits of the article include the team's "newcomers, two freshmen, and three college transfers. Susie Marti and Jennifer St. Thomas... Sophomore Rashida Frazier transferred from LaSalle University in Pennsylvania.

The two freshmen on the team include Mona Lai from Plantation, and Vanessa Guiterrez from Miami.

How some things have changed

- WNKR is now WNSU.
- Anthony Dominici is no longer the Business Manager. He moved next door as President of the NCSGA.
- The Registrar's Office has moved to the new Horvitz Administration Building.
- Pegie Moran is no longer with us (see story on this page).
- The school is now known as Nova Southeastern University.
- The Knight now only serves the undergraduate community.
- James Reinleib is now the Station Manager for WNSU.
- Cabaret has lost N.U.T.S. (Nova University Theatrical Society).
- The Poetry Circle has vanished.
- We now have a Psychology building under construction.
- An on campus pool is under construction.
- The Rosenthal Student Center is now home to video games.

Oh, how we have changed! Oh, how we have changed! Oh, how we have changed!
Tony McAndrews named new NSU new basketball coach

In addition to coaching two NCAA Final Four teams and five PAC-10 champions, McAndrews also achieved an eighty-eight percent graduation rate while head coaching Colorado State's basketball program.

Twelve of McAndrews' former players have extended their careers onto the NBA. Besides coaching in the collegiate ranks, the incoming full-time employee was selected as assistant coach of the World Game Trials in 1986. His coaching expertise has taken McAndrews to other continents as well. In 1989, he conducted summer basketball clinics in Venezuela for the USIS.

Following his initial meeting with Knight players on Friday before the official announcement was made, McAndrews came away impressed with his team. "We're going to have a very good basketball program and play exciting basketball, I guarantee it," the confident coach claimed. McAndrews, who is expected to arrive on campus full-time by next week, inherits an excellent team that has produced recent praiseworthy results.

We need off-campus site for get-togethers

by Beth Morrison

So, you're a freshman, and you expected to go to this big college party on the, the same day classes started, RIGHT? However, as the night wore on, you suddenly realized that a Nova College party is no different from what you experienced in High School. Lots of underage people along with a handful of legals hang out on the sidelines, while a few people grope and grind and the techno beat plays in the background.

Nevertheless, you continue to pride yourself on having a good time. You decide you need a break and it's time take a walk outside. However, you cannot sit down anywhere except on the grass or on the wall leading into the Rosenthal Student Center. You would like to sit in a chair, around a table and converse with fellow bored souls, however, the patio is blocked off and you have no choice where to sit. So, conversation is killed, and you have no other choice but to stand around (a decision made if you don't want to dance). Then you must stare at the sheet-laden walls, filled with the words in permanent marker, "Lick me and suck me." Oh joy, what bliss. PLEASE!

Nova should pride itself on having GREAT WELCOME BACK PARTIES LIKE THEY USED TO! The ones where at least twenty-five percent of the student population attends, and not just a select few.

Whatever happened to renting out Arrowhead Country Club? People who are at Nova day-in and day-out need a chance to get away from the atmosphere itself. Ask any resident who doesn't own a car. (Ever experience cabin fever?)

I understand that Nova wants to promote a communal atmosphere and the RSC seems to be the only place, however, NOT IN THE CAFETERIA! There needs to be a place off campus where all Nova affiliates can go.... instead of the cafeteria.

Dress it up all you want, it is still the cafeteria, or rather the Private Dining Room.

Maybe once a month we should rent out a place for the night? Why not ask all clubs to get together and have a party? There would probably be a greater sense of community and many more people would show up.

I don't understand why someone didn't think of this before. It couldn't be that expensive if every club put in a small amount. There are tons of places to go (after all we are in SOUTH FLORIDA)! Let's start having some real fun.

Teachers travel to points around the globe

The San Martin Zoo is now visited regularly by government officials, attendance from the residents of Ecuador has risen by about 50%, and tourist attendance has doubled.

NSU and the Dreyer Park Zoo in West Palm Beach are now working on projects relating to biogeography and biodiversity. Dr. Barker is looking for students to join him on his next trip to South America which shall be from January 2-9.

He can be reached at barkerb@polaris.ncs.nova.edu or his office in the Math, Science, and Technology Department.

Dr. Wolf's travels led her, among other places, to France, Belgium, and Normandy. The trip gave Dr. Wolf the chance to get some relaxation and introduce the various countries to her daughter.

Dr. Wolf was partially surprised by the high cost of everything. She recommends that students planning on going abroad get information from the French Tourist Office before visiting, to receive facts about the country.

Dr. Alford and Dr. Ferriss traveled to Europe this summer to present papers at the 12th International Conference on Literature and Psychology in Freiburg, Germany. The doctors traveled to St. Anton, Austria, and Luxembourg. Dr. Ferriss felt that, "Belgium and Luxembourg are excellent places to go to avoid running into American tourists." She also felt that some of the cuisine in Belgium is exquisite.

I thank all of the professors for this information, and encourage you to discuss with them any foreign countries you'd be interested in visiting.
