Love Jen: Good Fun and Great Cause

by Vu Quoc Huynh

Kids, parents and volunteers were smiling; that's all we wanted to see at the fifth annual Love Jen Festival, which took place on Saturday, February 3, 1996 right here on the NSU campus.

For those who don't know what this festival is about, let me enlighten. It is held yearly for the Love Jen Children's Cancer Fund which develops and supports programs and services that enhance the lives of families coping with cancer.

All contributions and gains from the festival are used to provide care and services for families and children being treated by Joe DiMaggio Children's Hospital. Among the sponsors for the festival this year are Target, Memorial Health Care System, the Miami Herald, Y-100, Novakbooks and DAKA. It is also supported by many families of “Hearts of Gold, Royal Hearts and Caring Hearts” and of course, all the volunteers.

The participation was encouraging. At 10:30 a.m., the parking lots were filled with cars from all parts of South Florida. The program kicked off with the main attraction: the clowns.

Golf Team Prepares for Second Run

by Gus Bravo

This Spring, Nova's most successful team prepares to make a championship run once again this season. The Men's Golf team, led by All-American Kit Larson, will attempt to surpass last year's sixth place finish in the NAIA tournament.

With a nucleus that includes four returning starters, Larson being one of them, and a solid class of four incoming recruits, the Knights hope to continue their winning ways.

Head coach Hal Henderson's squad represents perhaps Nova's best chance at national stardom. If their Fall season results are any indication of how well they will perform this year, Knight fans could be in for a treat in the upcoming months.

Thanks to Larson's outstanding overall score of 135 (69 and 66 in two rounds), Nova earned the South Florida District Tournament championship. Nevertheless other Knight teams:
by Karina LeDezma

After reading an article about the court's secular dependability in the Corruption Whirlpool, I took some time to go over Nova's Legal Assistant Studies courses to find the course that would apply to such naivete.

Needless to say, I didn't find the course description that mentioned the reliability of swearing on the Bible. In fact, I did not find any mention of any religious participation in these course descriptions.

As if this had not been made obvious during trials such as the Menendez trial, or even through Oliver North's questioning, lying on the stand is not only practiced, but as of Florida's Levin, Middlebrooks v. US Fire Insurance Company, it is also legal.

The Florida Supreme Court ruled that this case had absolute immunity from civil prosecution for perjury, slander, libel, defamation, fraud or other tortious behavior by judge, witnesses, lawyers, and parties. If there is little respect for the intangibility of a never before seen holy figure as God?

To make a murderer take the stand and swear on the Holy Bible that he/she is telling "the truth and nothing but the truth so help me God," is somehow what of an oxymoron. Especially considering that the wrath of God had little effect on his/her consciousness to commit the act.

There is a fine line between the mention of God in the courts and what Colin Powell mentions to be God's legislative agenda. If government and religion were meant to be practiced as pseudo-patriots than perhaps Aristarchus Copernicus would have suffered less under the church's wrath of his heliocentric theory publication.

But it is obvious that the two can not participate with equal power in a society without hindering the other. So the accountability of its mention in our court, not only archaic but far from applicable to the needs of all that are judged therein. Exactly what relevance does the Bible bear on Buddhists, Muslims, Jews, and atheists?

If the concern is religious approval, then perhaps Christians should recognize that it was their Messiah that said "give on to Caesar what is Caesar's and give on to God what is God's". It is rather hypocritical that the same Congress that saw it fit to take into account God's active role in government should begin placing the phrase "In God we trust" in 1957, on such trivial matters as U.S. currency.

This "In God we trust" movement has not hindered the counterfeiting business nor has it slowed down all the clandestine, immoral dealings that some pursue to multiply their collections of these green missiles.

If the Vatican divides its power accordingly to either political or religious fields of relevance, why then would a government see it fit to entrust their judicial law and religious units to God?

Furthermore, public schools are prohibited from offering religious education yet their students are still bound by secular laws. If their education is not based on the decisions to make God a political activist, then what should they make respect the blasphemous laws that are dealt in his/her name?

Proof of man's inability to practice government is seen in its corruption, egocentrism, religion, and internal contradictions. Polemics' geocentric earth might have been accepted today as true if divine power had not lost its strong hold on society.

To make divine government our focus again would be to retract our progress. In some Arab countries, as Lebanon, citizens are currently judged in courts in accordance to their religious beliefs. The courts practice whatever judicial law and religious relevance applies to the case.

Do you ever get the feeling that the internet has invaded every part of our lives? The web has affected our shopping, studying, and socializing habits. What next, will we use computers at a coffeeshop? Well...um, er...yes. Believe, or not, coffeeshops that offer internet access are the newest craze to hit the real world!

I recently took the opportunity to plant my feet in one of these "coffeeshops." I chose Cybernation on 2635 East Oakland Park Boulevard. Not knowing what to expect, I hesitantly walked into this cybercoffee place. The shop's small interior looked similar to any other java joint expect for the brightly lit computer terminals that replaced the usual cafe tables that occupy a coffeeshop.

The dim lighting, beige-colored walls, potted green plants and black covered bar stools provided a cozy atmosphere.

I noticed two computer terminals near the window with stools for users to place their bottoms. A few feet in front of the window terminals was the java bar and its panorama of odorous delights. The menu offered drinks ranging from the reboot (cuban coffee), mega-byte (expresso), to the cybereccino (cappacino) at prices from $1.75 to $3.00 per drink. They also had a few desserts to satisfy the sweet tooth.

Further in the shop, they have five more terminals and one computer that offers virtual reality. My roommate, who accompanied me on this adventure, enjoyed playing starwars equipped with the sophisticated helmet and joystick.

The back corner of the shop poses as a computer store/warehouse that offers software at discounted prices.

I then looked at their prices. It's $5 an hour for students and members, $7 an hour for non-members, $10 for every half-hour of virtual reality, and $7.95 a month for an e-mail box. They also offer memberships for $20 a year. The time of hour includes full internet access, Windows '95, and numerous other programs to choose from. The selection is wide and the prices are reasonable.

But the entire time I explored Cybernation, a question kept lingering in my mind. Why would someone go to a shop to sit alone at a computer? Isn't the purpose of a coffeeshop to go somewhere and talk?

Christie MacDonald

The nice, young owner Glenn Bocchino helped me understand. He explained that they have a regular crowd in their java joint. At Cybernation, people who don't normally have internet access, have the opportunity to explore, do research, or play games. Glenn also explained that people are also attracted to the special nights they offer.

For example, every Thursday Cybernation has Doom Tournaments. For those who don't know, Doom is a bloody, violent, yet entertaining strategy game on CD Rom. Also, they often give away free movie tickets if you preview a movie from Sony Entertainment on the net.

After spending a little time at Cybernation, a question kept lingering in my mind. Why would someone give away free movie tickets if you preview a movie from Sony Entertainment on the net?
Pre-Med Society Hosts Mock Debate

by Jennifer Choinski

On Wednesday, January 24th, at 6pm in the Rosenthal Private Dining Hall, the Pre-Med Society hosted their first mock-debate. The topic was abortion. Each member of the panel was given a copy of a particular scenario, and from that they formed an argument. In this scenario, a perfectly healthy woman sought an abortion because the fetus was female. We, as members of the panel, had to decide if the woman should be permitted to have the abortion. There were six members on the panel: Jennifer Choinski and Louisa Velez representing the Student Government, Paul Wagner representing the Pre-Med Society, Debbie Brown representing Phi Alpha Delta, Jaqui Isaza representing the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship, and Ginnette Roman representing Catholic Campus Ministries. Our moderator was Arthur Berger J.D.

The event was a success. There was a high level of involvement from the audience who were eager to share their opinions on the topic as well. After the debate was over, we discussed it further over refreshments. The next debate will be in about a month from now, on the topic of drug legalization. If you would like to participate on the panel, or just come and spectate, keep your eyes open for flyers or contact the Pre-Med Society.

NCSSGA Seeks Election Candidates

Dear fellow students,

With Student Government elections rapidly approaching us, now is the time students who feel they can make a difference should take a stand. The best way to influence change for the better is to run for a position on the Student Government.

Some people ask me, “What does it take to be successful in S.G.A.? I think one of the most important aspects of being a success at anything is having a plan outlining what you want to accomplish.

Formulating a plan will serve as a guide to your success. Your plan needs to take into account where you are coming from and where you would like to be. That means actualizing where your starting point and your finish line is.

When I came into office almost a year ago, I saw many areas I felt S.G.A. should have greater strength in. I devised a plan of action that meet the goals I set and put the wheels in motion to get it done. It is important to have goals that you can reach so you know when you have reached them. You can study to get good grades, but unless you get the test back, you’ll never know if your studying paid off.

Another important aspect of being successful is determination. You have to believe what you want is what you want. If you just like the idea of something but do not embrace it, you can not be very determined to succeed. It is similar to saying you are part of a cause but only because it is the popular thing to do.

I see many people join organizations not because they are genuinely interested in the mission, but so that they can say “Yes, I belong.” That is fine to an extent. The problem becomes worse when these people become the leaders in organizations they really do not know or care much about. This is when the organization and its members suffer as a whole.

If you decide to run for a position on Student Government, do it because you want to, not because it would be nice to put on a job application. I know there are many people out there with great ideas and strong leadership qualities that are just looking for an organization that can sharpen your hidden abilities.

Student Government is a success in itself. The power to be heard and see things get done is a privilege student governments before this one worked very hard to achieve. Give

by Karen Jeffers

Sistah to Sistah, this movie was alright! It is time that women realize that they are not alone in regards to the issue of "men."

Some of us got it going on and for others, the struggle is going on and on and on and on.

Waiting to Exhale depicts everyday life in many Black women's households. These households consist of one or more children with a mother and no father and are wrecked by divorce. These are houses where there is no home because love doesn't live there anymore.

I really enjoyed the way the story unfolded and then climaxed with the underlying message that it's nice to have someone else to love, but a woman can be happy just loving herself.

Every day, thousands of kids bring guns to school. Find out how to help get guns out of the hands of children.

Nova Students Get a Natural High

by Jennifer Choinski

On January 25th and 26th, the National Collegiate Health and Fitness Tour visited Nova-Southeastern University. Along with students from Broward Community College and Florida Atlantic University, Nova students had the opportunity to test their skills at rock-climbing, gladiator jousting, boxing, bungee racing, ladder climbing, and much more.

There were free giveaways from Hawaiian Tropics, Lipton, and other nationally known corporations. The event was very popular and many students participated.
The Festival to Fundraise and Frolic entrance. This is the first time attended this festival. It was fun hosting one of the games for kids. The children enjoyed the many games offered by the various booths. For instance, kids loved to play "Tip the Cat", which was sponsored by the Pre-Med society, because it was so easy to knock all four cats down from two feet away and get five yellow tickets. The tickets could be exchanged for candy and toys. The games of "Tic-Tac-Toe" and "Minigolf" did not attract much attention from them. However, the array of activities including a slide, merry-go-round, animal exhibits, and traveling clowns, left few disappointed.

At noon, Pocahontas performed by Superstar Productions, drew an audience toward the stage. The show was quite colorful and exciting with a real, blond-haired, blue-eyed John Smith and a shiny, long, black-haired Pocahontas in Indian costume.

Fortunately, it was much shorter and had fewer songs than the Disney picture. The Lion King was also performed, but I didn't have time to see it.

There was a psychic, too. Some NSU students visited her to get predictions and advice about their futures. I hope what she said will come true!!

Swing for the Championship

from the cover

golfers turned in winning efforts at the Golf Club of Miami this past October. Junior David Cooke's total score of 145 aided NSU's first place finish while Larson's countrymen Mikael Berglund, also from Sweden, added two sub 80 rounds for a final point total of 157.

However, the men's preseason tear did not end there. Two second place finishes at both the Broward Community College Invitational and the Palm Coast Invitational reaffirmed the Knight's status as the team to beat in this region.

Although the newcomers such as Chris Lavorro have achieved consistent outings during the fall months, the team's success will fall on the shoulders of its two prominent upperclassmen. Last season Larson, a 22-year-old junior from Ucklevalla, Sweden, earned a 14th place finish in the national tournament. Throughout the Knight's 1994-1995 campaign, Larson's 77.35 average per round was second only to Cooke's 77.02 score.

Cooke, a third-year starter from Brockville, Canada, has continuously challenged Larson among the leaders in all four of NSU's preseason tournaments.

The incoming players will have to fill the vacant spots left by the departure of three lettermen. Nevertheless, the Knights should once again compete as one of the nation's strongest sides. In their eyes, this could be a year to solidify their national status.
WRI Appreciates Women Athletes

by Cynthia Griffith

To celebrate National Girls and Women in Sports Day, which has been held on February 1 for the past ten years, the Women’s Resource Institute sponsored a barbecue to kick off the NSU Women’s Softball season.

The Lady Knights split the opening double header with rival Goldey Beacom College of Delaware. The Lady Knights won the first game while Goldey Beacom won the second game.

Throughout the afternoon and evening, NSU athletes, coaches, students, and staff, along with area high school athletes, watched the games and ate hamburgers and hot dogs. WNSU played music before and between games.

Kate Lamm, Director of the Women’s Resource Institute presented a proclamation from the Broward County Board of Designating February 1 as National Girls and Women in Sports Day in Broward County.

National Girls and Women in Sports Day celebrates girls’ and women’s participation in amateur and professional sports, participation which is often overlooked and devalued by sports fans, the media, college athletic programs, and professional athletics.

The Women’s Resource Institute urges the NSU community to attend and support NSU women athletes and teams. Catch the NSU spirit!

The event was brought on campus by The Wellness Center and was totally free to all participants. The tour is the most requested event on college campuses throughout the East Coast. Students who participated in the various events had the opportunity to win a Jeep, Eagle Talon, or a Dodge Neon, as a first prize in a national drawing between all of the schools the tour has visited. Other prizes include a 7-day cruise.

“The event went really well, but it would have been better if more people showed up,” concluded Justine Steiner of Student Health Advocates for Peer Education. Now that the word is out about how cool this fair was, we do hope to see more familiar faces in the crowd next year!!

Letters of Recommendation—How To Get Them
by Dr. John Malouf

Whether you are a graduate student or an undergrad, someday you will likely ask a professor to write you a letter of recommendation. You may need the letter to gain admission to a graduate program or to help you get a job.

What will the professor write that will help you? Students who think about that well before they need the letter end up with far better recommendations.

As someone who has both asked professors for letters and written letters for many students, I suggest you set a goal early in your education at NSU to obtain outstanding letters of recommendation.

How? By creating the behavioral basis for such positive recommendations.

You can get ideas about how to do that from the comments I have made over the years in writing letters of recommendation. He (or she) (1) earned the highest overall score of all students in the class, (2) did well on tests, (3) wrote excellent papers, (4) wrote a paper that was so good I used it as a model for other students, (5) gave an excellent oral presentation, (6) participated actively in class discussions, (7) often perfectly answered questions I posed to the entire class, (8) brought useful information to class from outside reading or experiences, (9) never missed a class meeting, (10) was always on time, (11) volunteered to assist in my research, (12) provided such valuable research assistance as to merit co-authorship of a paper we put together, (13) agreed to help me with a special project of mine, (14) went out of the way to help other students, (15) participated actively in some relevant volunteer organization, (16) wrote an article for our departmental bulletin [or the student newspaper] about some relevant in-field topic, (17) worked as a volunteer to further some important social cause, (18) obtained excellent work experience, (19) speaks Spanish, (20) is always pleasant, (21) smiles often, (22) laughs and jokes at appropriate times, (23) is well liked by other professors, and (24) is well liked by other students.

Students who behave in ways that make many of these statements apply to them are likely to receive powerful recommendations.

Fortunately, most of these behaviors require goal-directed effort more than superior ability, so virtually every student has the potential to earn very positive letters of recommendation.

Another Tough Loss
by Gus Bravo

Down by three, clock winding down, NSU's Chad Bobik, the team's best three point shooter, receives the in-bound pass. After few side winding dribbles to avoid a couple of defenders, Bobik finally heaves a desperation shot from mid court.

Unfortunately, like many of the Knight's final attempts at victory this season, this one falls just shy. Another close game, another opponent, but nevertheless, the same result.

Despite battling back from a half time deficit, thanks to an aggressive second half spurt, the Knights came up short against nationally ranked Flagler College on Saturday, February 10 at the George M. Mayer Gymnasium.

Throughout the contest, the men displayed much resiliency and fire against the visitors from St. Augustine. Ignited by Coach Tony McAndrew's half time speech, the men applied their amoeba-like defense on their opponent early in the second half.

A plethora of thundering dunks by Nova's James Johnson's electrified the crowd and brought the team back into the game. Nonetheless, Johnson's outstanding inside performance was overshadowed by his team's inability to win a close game.

Having battled back to tie the score with just one minute remaining, the Knights once again faltered. A couple of ill-advised NSU turnovers and some clutch free-throws by the visitors summarized the final seconds.

Prior to Saturday's loss, the Knights also fell to Embry-Riddle a day earlier. Unlike Flagler's game when the team awoke after the half time intermission, Friday, February 9th's encounter against the Eagles from Daytona depicted a different story.

This time, after an exciting first half that saw several lead changes, the Knights struggled and eventually stumbled in the second period losing 82-71.
Honor Court Verdict Report

by Dr. Suzanne Ferriss

Nova Southeastern University expects its students to manifest a commitment to academic integrity through rigid observance of standards for academic honesty. In the Farquhar Center for Undergraduate Studies, we have created an Honor Court to uphold the standards outlined in the Student Code of Conduct and Disciplinary Procedures.

Originally formed at the request of the Student Government Association, the Honor Court is a body of faculty, students and administrators that is responsible for hearing cases through an educational peer review process which determines student accountability for alleged violations of the code of conduct and issues appropriate sanctions. The Court is composed of two faculty members (one serves as chair), two students, one administrator and a non-voting Records Coordinator. Each position also has an alternate member.

We consider that the Honor Court does not simply issue sanctions but educate students participants about the academic tradition. As such, we attempt to create a forum for people to discuss differences and to insure that the community is not damaged by unacceptable behavior.

As part of its educational mission, the Honor Court would like to inform the NSU community about its work to date. We do so in an effort to raise awareness about the consequences of violating the Code of Student Conduct and to ensure that as an academic community we join together in upholding acceptable standards of behavior.

Honor Court Hears Record Number of Cases

In the fall semester, the Court heard a record 10 cases. The table below lists the charges and our decisions for each case. Please note that each case is considered individually. These results are in no way meant to suggest that the sanction applied in one case will be automatically applied in subsequent cases of a similar nature. Also note that the specific details of each case, including the names of the students, remain confidential.

For further information about the Honor Court, please contact any of the members: Suzanne Ferriss, Chair; Ben Mulvey, Faculty Representative; Richard Mordi, Alternate Faculty Representative; James Reinleib, Student Representative; Heather Gates, Student Representative; Kim Brubeck, Alternate Student Representative; Madeline Penna, Administrative Representative; Debbie Nellis, Alternate Administrative Representative; Rick Mayfield, Records Coordinator.

Creative Chalkers Wanted

Press Release

The Fort Lauderdale Parks and Recreation Department, along with the Broward Center for the Performing Arts, are seeking creative artists to design sidewalk masterpieces for this year's "Chalkwalk Sidewalk Art Contest" on Saturday, March 23 with registration beginning at 9:15 a.m.

The Chalkwalk contest is just one of the many events scheduled during the annual Fort Lauderdale Festival of the Arts.

The festival kicks off on Friday, March 22 with Gordon Lightfoot at the Broward Center and runs through Sunday, March 24.

The sidewalk near Esplande Park is designed to be imaginative within the bounds of good taste for a family event.

This year's theme for the Chalkwalk contest is "If You Could Read My Mind" and entrants are encouraged to be imaginative within the bounds of good taste for a family event.

The sidewalk near Esplande Park across from the Broward Center for the Performing Arts and the Museum of Discovery & Science will serve as the giant "canvas" for the artists.

There will be five artist categories: professional artist, amateur adult artist (18 and older), teen artist (ages 13-17), junior artist (ages 9-12) and youth artist (ages 5-8).

Teams of 2 to 4 people can also enter the contest.

Cash prizes will be awarded for first place in the professional ($1000), amateur ($150), and teen ($100) categories.

Judging will be based on three criteria: creativity (40 percent), art ability (40 percent) and dedication to theme (20 percent).

Registration will begin at 9:15 a.m. in Esplande Park. The contest will run from 10 a.m. to noon with the winners announced at 1 p.m.

For an application to enter the "Chalkwalk Sidewalk Art Contest" call Marie Rock at (954) 761-5360 or Susan Begiahn at (954) 463-1618.

For further information on the festival please call the festival of the Arts Hotline at (954) 761-5388.

Presenting sponsors for the Fort Lauderdale Festival of the Arts include the Broward Cultural Affairs Council, Sun-Sentinel along with WSVN Channel 7, Comcast Cable, Paxton Communications stations, WLVE, WINZ, WZTA, WACC and WFTL.

The Broward Center for the Performing Arts is located at 201 S.W. Fifth Avenue in Fort Lauderdale.

Both of these conference outings pretty much solidified NSU's second to last seeding in the upcoming FSC tournament.

The conference tournament, which begins February 23rd and is hosted by Embry-Riddle, will offer Nova its last opportunity to salvage an otherwise disappointing season.

Having matched up equally against two of the conference's top teams (Flagler and Embry-Riddle), a few favorable bounces here and there might be all that it takes for Nova to make a serious post-season run.

This squad, which may lack depth but not resiliency, could surprise a few teams lacking respect for a Nova team that is far better than its record.
