1-22-1997

The Knight Volume 7: Issue 15

Nova Southeastern University

Follow this and additional works at: https://nsuworks.nova.edu/nsudigital_newspaper

NSUWorks Citation
https://nsuworks.nova.edu/nsudigital_newspaper/148

This Newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the NSU Digital Collections at NSUWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Current by an authorized administrator of NSUWorks. For more information, please contact nsuworks@nova.edu.
Fardelmann: Student, Director, and Mayor

by Christie MacDonald
Associate Editor

Did you know that Nova South­eastern has a place that addresses the needs and concerns of women and those concerned with those needs? The Women's Resource Institute was founded and de­signed to educate, empower, and en­lighten women at our university and the surrounding community.

Although the in­stitute officially opened in March 1995, the seeds of its growth started in 1990 with Dr. Judith Schulimson and Dr. Kate Lamm. These women realized that our campus was missing a women's center that supports employees and students.

After organizing discussions with fac­ulty, students, and employees and brainstorming, they concluded that there indeed was a need for a women's center and there were many unmet con­cerns of women on campus. Dr. Schulimson and Dr. Lamm then be­gan the journey of forming commit­tees and trying to gain administra­tive support and approval. In the midst of the journey, Dr. Fund was used as seed money to gain institutional support. Because of Judith's honorable life and convic­tions, the institute's official name is the Judith Schulimson Women's Re­source Institute.

I recently had a chance to speak with the new coordinator of the Women's Resource Institute, Suellen H. Fardelmann. Similar to her colleagues in WRI, Mrs. Fardelmann is a woman of conviction and integ­rity.

Suellen Fardelmann was diagnosed with breast cancer. She fought for her life until she lost it in January 1993. Judith continued working for her cause in death by willing a sum of money to be used to help women. The Judith Schulimson Memorial Fund was used as seed money to gain institutional support. Because of Judith's honorable life and convictions, the institute's official name is the Judith Schulimson Women's Re­source Institute.

Suellen Fardelmann, Coordinator of the Women's Resource Institute. Photo Courtesy of WRI.

Suellen was born in Cincinnati, Ohio but primarily grew up in Baton Rouge, Louisiana and New Jersey. She came to Florida with her first husband. Unfortu­nately, after having two daughters, her husband, a police of­ficer, was killed in the line of duty in Holly­wood. She later re­married and moved to Cooper City, where she has been Mayor for thirteen years.

Mrs. Fardelmann decided to run for Mayor in 1984 when she was Police Com­missioner of the city. At that time she was working with various causes by participat­ing in boards to cre­ate parks in neighbor­hoods and to remove prisoners housed in mental hospitals. As Mayor, Suellen has the opportunity to help many causes and positively affect the daily lives of Cooper City residents. Although she is not heavily compensated for her work as AIDS and Literature: When Grades Don’t Matter

by Susan Juszkiewicz
Contributing Writer

"It is indecent to hand out grades to those on the edge of the grave," said writer Edmund White to an audience who gathered for the first conference ever to be devoted to AIDS literature.

Twenty-six of the finest writers, educators, medical doctors and those in the publishing industry came to Key West January 9-12 to discuss a "cure," debate, and "to flirt," as Tony Kushner put it.

In the elegant San Carlos Institute, a center for Cuban culture on Duval Street, Edmund White, the keynote speaker, opened the seminar. As tourists outside marched up and down the neon laden street with beers in hand, White spoke eloquently before 300 attendees about the urgency writers who are infected with AIDS feel and that it is like, "being pushed around by a big bully."

He summoned the names of the departed writers who lived on this "poetic island" like Elizabeth Bishop, Wallace Stevens and "our Prospero," James Merrill. Then he revealed that he himself has had HIV since 1985 and lost his lover to the epidemic in 1994. This was the start to a weekend full of remembrances past.

Friday's morning panel was devoted to whether literature in the age of AIDS is a new genre. It included the novelist Ann Beattie, poet Rachel Hadas, and Michael Denny, an editor at Crown publishers. After much discussion, most participants agreed that AIDS writing is not a new form of literature.

"Because poets write poetry," said Michael Denny. He added, "It is an attempt to respond to an event, bearing witness."

Rachel Hadas thinks of AIDS writing as, "New wine in old bottles." Denny has published many gay authors.

He said, "It's almost politically incorrect to have the AIDS novel be about surviving."

Denny contributed a publishing story about one writer who was under contract to write a trilogy. After publishing two of his three novels, the author dies of AIDS. His lover finds a page of notes on the third novel and completes the book himself, only to die the day after he sends in the completed manuscript. And all three books are comedic in their subject matter.

The story that rarely has a happy ending was discussed on the panel, "AIDS and the Novel" at the Waterfront Playhouse. On the edge of Mallory Square, the theater served as the second venue, giving the Key West Literary Seminar concurrent panels for the first time.

She would fear for her life if she wrote about lesbian life in Jamaica

Almost immediately, David Leavitt made the distinction that the topic should be addressed as, "The Novel and AIDS", not "AIDS and the Novel," because, "AIDS cares as much for the novel as it does a carrot."

He prefers the novel over the short story for his writing, disagreeing with one panelist who said the short story is the only medium for "intense, lyrical cries of anguish because the urgency works against the novel." Another panelist raised the question of aesthetics. He said that aesthetics are vulgar and unnecessary in AIDS writing.

Leavitt rebuked, "Literary standards allow effective communication and shaping into form."

A Jamaican writer, Patricia Powell, writes novels about the gay male experience, rather than her own lesbian experience. She explained that she would fear for her life if she wrote about lesbian life in Jamaica. David Leavitt closed the panel by reminding us of all the novels that have not been written because of AIDS. He said, "I imagine them to be in some ghost library."

The subject of AIDS in literature has called upon the greatest talents to produce a multitude of work in the theatre, and that has reached the greatest number of people. Two of the best, Tony Kushner and Larry Kramer sat with Frank Rich, an Op-Ed page columnist and former drama critic for The New York Times on Saturday morning's "AIDS and Contemporary Theatre" panel. Kushner's drama about AIDS, "Angels in America," was a success on Broadway. He read a prepared speech and in it, admitted the guilt he feels that he "benefited from an epidemic," and almost cancelled his trip to Key West.

Larry Kramer, held responsible by many for leading the gay community with his play, "A Normal Heart," that arrived at the beginning of the epidemic in 1981, comforted Kushner. He reminded him that he has an exquisite talent to do remarkable work, not to feel guilty. Mr. Kramer is H.I.V. positive.

On Saturday evening, writers Mark Doty, Jewelle Gomez, Patricia Powell and Benjamin Saenz read at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. An organ played faintly in the background and created an ethereal setting for Mark Doty as he read from his memoir, Heaven's Coast. This book, written with brilliant clarity, is about Mark's lover who passed away. Hearing him describe Wally with such careful, loving detail made me miss people in my life and realize that they are not yet gone.

More than once during the weekend, the AIDS crisis was paralleled to the Holocaust. Author David Leavitt addressed the topic by reminding the audience that the comparison is not accurate.

"It is an usual comparison for polemical reasons. But a virus has no morals. Act up. Do away with parallels."

These statements emphasized the importance in educating yourself, a see KEY on 7
CONTRIBUTE TO NOVA’S TIME CAPSULE
by Alison Barker
Faculty-Student Representative

Have you ever wanted to be a part of a time capsule? Now is your chance to enter something into the Nova Southeastern University time capsule. The time capsule is open to all faculty, staff, and students. The deadline for the time capsule is February 1, 1997.

If you are in an organization or in a club, please submit something that pertains to your organization. The time capsule will be placed in The Flight Deck in the shape of an airplane.

The case will be clear so that everyone will be able to see the things inside. Please make sure that everything that is brought in is very tasteful in manner. Thank you for adding your contributions to the future.

Suellen Fardelmann Speaks on WRI’s Purpose

Suellen Fardelmann, Mayor of the Women’s Resource Institute, believes greatly in its purpose. "I think everyone should do something in their lives that they truly believe in but don’t get paid for." Mayor position, WRI position, and her role as a senior student in Liberal Arts. Fortunately, she finds that the three roles complement each other. She has learned a lot from her position in WRI and as a student. She often brings those skills, like computer knowledge, to her position as Mayor. In addition, her skills of campaign fundraising and working for people's interests has considerably helped her in her position as coordinator. Because of her connections as Mayor, she has the opportunity to solicit help for many of the institute's projects. Suellen values Nova because it provides a haven for women's organizations, 4) offering space for women to study and network, 5) coordinating a consortium of area university and college Women's studies Programs and Women's Centers, 6) sponsoring events celebrating women's achievements.

Suellen is enjoying her new home at the WRI on the third floor of Parker in the "building that won't blow away." If you would like more information about the Women's Resource Institute, feel free to drop by the office or call them at (954) 476-1933.

Women’s Resource Institute's Upcoming Events

February 20:
Cook Out for National Girl’s and Women in Sports Day
A.D. Griffin Field
3 p.m. (between softball double-header)

March 7:
Brown Bag Luncheon/Speaker Series
Speaker: Dr. Laura Claridge
This professor at the Naval Academy will present:

"Challenges to the Neophyte Biographer:
Writing a Life of Tamara De Lempicka, Painter of Deco and Decadence."

Noon: In the Rosenthal Student Center

---

The image contains text about CONTRIBUTE TO NOVA'S TIME CAPSULE, a call for contributions to a time capsule, and a description of the Career Expo '97 event at Nova Southeastern University. There is also a mention of Suellen Fardelmann's role as Mayor of the Women's Resource Institute, and her desire to do something in her life that she truly believes in but doesn't get paid for. The text also lists upcoming events at the Women's Resource Institute, including a cookout for National Girl's and Women in Sports Day and a Brown Bag Luncheon/Speaker Series.
Jewish Holidays are Unappreciated

by Marta "Lani" Cohen
Contributing Writer

The complaint that Jewish holidays are not widely publicized is often heard. Even Hannukah, an eight-day celebration, is often no more than one row of greeting cards in a Hallmark section overflowing with Christmas cheer.

Unfortunately, the school curriculum also revolves around Christian holidays like Christmas and Easter. Midterms and finals always seem to fall around the inconvenient, obscure Jewish holidays. This last summer I had a class where midterms were on the afternoon of Yom Kippur (the holiest day of the year). Why does this happen on this campus? This occurs because of apathy on the part of the Jewish students.

This year, Hillel will endeavor to promote the interests of its members. However, we will need the support of our members.

Everyone takes time off for Christmas, yet for Hannukah, an equally important holiday, only a handful of students attended the menorah lighting held specifically in Goodwin Residential Hall for the convenience of students studying for finals.

The time to get involved is now. College should not be just a place for learning. If students could look into their future, they would most likely find themselves reflecting on the past and the fun they had in college. They would look back to the “good old days” when relationships and lasting friendships were formed.

Club identity and involvement should be at its peak now, because outside these gates is the real world of responsibility with little time for frivolous activities. I have visited many campuses throughout the U.S. and am truly surprised at the club-member apathy prevalent at Nova Southeastern. Student life should be thriving. I urge you to be proud of who you are and the clubs that you represent.

In 1997, Hillel will offer an array of activities and will be open for any and all suggestions. Drop us a note. Our mailbox is located outside the Student Life office in the Rosenthal building. We look forward to hearing from you.

Hillel would like to thank the students who made the effort to join us for our menorah lighting, especially Dr. Nicola Schutte and her lovely daughter Christina. We sincerely hope this is the first of many events and celebrations on and off campus.

The day started the same as it had for months. My arrival at the office was 8:25 A.M. (twenty-five minutes late) to begin another session as a paper pushing, invoice shuffling, coffee drinking functionary. None of the morning’s events could have foretold the news. The usual unnecessary, yet not, salutations, greetings and other cliche’s of uncaring, unwanton but having to say and ask “Good Morning, how are you?” when it should have been, “I don’t know, you have a couple of hours to listen?” took place.

The seclusion of some offices is from within as well as from without; desolation, isolation, making a tedious task even more so. The need for the unnecessary (a referral to the salutations etc.) becomes apparent. Then, while eating my fifteen-minute lunch at my desk to save time during the crunch, a receptionist who

Club identity and involvement should be at its peak

A Tragedy Remembered, A Farce Continued

by Seth Bernstein
Contributing Writer

On January 28, 1986, the Challenger space craft exploded moments after takeoff. On December 17, 1996, two large sections of its wing washed up onto the shores of Cocoa Beach. The following is an essay written at the time of the explosion.

It was written as an assignment, discussing Martin Heidgger’s “Being in Time” and more specifically the chapter “Idle Talk.” Although written about the events and aftermath of the Challenger accident, this piece could have been written about events which have occurred during the past year, namely, the Oklahoma City bombing, the crash of TWA flight 800, or the Olympic park bombing and others.

The day started the same as it had for months. My arrival at the office was 8:25 A.M. (twenty-five minutes
Student Tests Nova Students for Research

by Christie MacDonald
Associate Editor

One of the requirements to attain a Bachelor of Science in Psychology is to do a practicum. Students can choose either a community practicum (by working in a community agency) or a research practicum (carrying out a research study). Last semester, I performed my own research study under the supervision of Dr. Nicola Schutte. The experience taught me how to gather background data, find appropriate testing instruments, and analyze data using statistics. The practicum class was more like a board of colleagues than a class. Every week we met and discussed each other’s projects. Feedback from my fellow students and Dr. Schutte helped me to perform well on my study.

Since I used undergraduate Nova students, I will share my results. I decided to do a study on the relationship between religion and well-being (in terms of depression and self-esteem).

To study this relationship, I passed out a 56-question survey to 73 undergraduate students. I handed out the survey in general requirement classes like College Writing and Journey, so I would gain a variety of majors in my sample. The questionnaire consisted of demographics, the Allport-Ross I/E Religious Orientation Scale, the Rosenberg Self-esteem Scale, and the Zung Self-rating Depression Scale.

Out of the 73 students, 56 students were able to be analyzed. In other words, 56 students completed the questionnaire in full.

I hypothesized that students who scored high on a religious scale would also score low on the depression scale and high on the self-esteem scale. Hence, I expected a positive correlation between my variables.

Unfortunately, my results did not fulfill my hypothesis. After analyzing my data, I found no significant relationship between commitment to religion and well-being.

The results of the study were not surprising considering that different researchers have received varying results regarding religion and well-being. There are several reasons why there was no significant relationship between the variables. Perhaps the sample of students was too limited because I recruited only students from Nova. Also, my questionnaires may not have been appropriate. Self-evaluation of depression may not be the best ways to measure depression. Thirdly, maybe there is a third factor that affects religion and well-being. Perhaps a sense of purpose in life contributes to well-being rather than commitment to religion.

Regardless of my results, the research practicum proved a valuable learning experience. If you would like more information on the research practicum, feel free to contact Dr. Nicola Schutte at 475-7518.

NSU AIDS Quilt Helping to Spread Awareness

by Sandi Kell
Wellness Center Administrative Assistant

The Nova Southeastern AIDS Quilt has been a part of the Nova community for three years. This quilt, organized by the Wellness Center and the Student Health Advocates for Peer Education, consists of various patches which have been made by student organizations.

The quilt promotes education, compassion, and helps to illustrate the overwhelming need for education about this pandemic.

These patches are filled with messages of hope and AIDS awareness. Various themes are suggested for use, but participants are not limited to them. The ideas are as follows: support for people living with AIDS, remembrance of people who have died of AIDS, support for families and friends of people with AIDS, and the hope for a cure.

During the week of December 1-6, the NSU AIDS Quilt was on display inside of the Rosenthal Student Center. Each quilt was hung separately to reflect that year’s patches. As the years go by, the quilts become more and more creative.

To bolster creativity and participation, the Wellness Center gave $20 or $25 to each organization for materials. The winner for the best quilt received four tickets for the Student Life Holiday Cruise.

Each patch needed to measure 3 by 3 inches. If you would like more information on this project, contact Sandi Kell at 475-7518.

Rosenthal Rocks

by Christina Gay
Campus Life Editor

On Tuesday, December 3, 1996, the Commuter Involvement Association (CIA) hosted a small party for its members and invited guests at the Flight Deck, Rosenthal Student Center’s new second floor entertainment area.

The get-together was organized by Mari Chamberlain, the Student Life Graduate Assistant for Student Services. It lasted from 7:00 p.m. until about 9:30 p.m.

Like many holiday parties in our new age of togetherness, it catered to both Christians and Jews. There were little cookies shaped like dreidels and Hebrew letters and little bags filled with Christmas Hershey’s Kisses©.

Plates of finger foods like sandwiches and chicken fingers, cans of soda, and bottles of water loaded down tables in the room just off the bar.

A Christmas tree stood in the corner and partygoers were encouraged to decorate ornaments with their names in glitter. The bar was open to those of age and wine and beer flowed freely. Literally: it was free.

If you haven’t heard of the Commuter Involvement Association, don’t worry. They’re new on campus as a part of the University’s continuing efforts to reach out to commuter students.

The CIA will focus on commuter-oriented programming, such as discounted tickets to football and hockey games, commuter lunches in front of the Parker Building, and ensuring that every commuter receives a copy of the Heatwave, the Student Life monthly publication.

Since commuters represent a significant part of the undergraduate population, one-half of Professional Studies day students, their voice can be very strong, but their participation is minimal. One student who lives 45 minutes away complained that activities just aren’t catered to commuters.

“They schedule things at such inconvenient times. I want to stay and do things, but I have a long way to go home and it’s not worth it.”

Ms. Chamberlain is very excited about where the CIA can go and hopes that it encourages more commuters to get involved on campus.

If you want to become involved in the CIA, contact Ms. Chamberlain at (954) 475-4174 or stop by the Graduate Assistants’ office, located on the second floor of the Rosenthal Student Center.
NSU Community Mental Health Center to Offer Free Treatment for Shy Children

Press Release

Many parents have shy children. However, few many realize that shyness can be debilitating for social growth. Shy children may be at a disadvantage by not acquiring necessary social skills to cope in life. The Anxiety Treatment Center of Nova Southeastern University's Community Mental Health Center will offer free group therapy to socially anxious and shy elementary school children. The eight week program will focus on teaching children social skills, which will help them feel more comfortable interacting with other children. The program will be held at NSU's Community Mental Health Center, located at 3301 College Avenue, in Davie.

"Extremely shy children miss out on important developmental experiences that should take place early on," said Dr. Cynthia Last, director of NSU's Anxiety Treatment Center. "Group treatment is an extremely effective way of providing these children with the extra assistance they need."

To schedule an appointment or for more information, contact Kim Sterner, program coordinator, at NSU, at (954) 236-5825.

The Community Mental Health Center of the Center for Psychological Studies at Nova Southeastern University is operated by Nova Southeastern University as a University-based non-profit community mental health facility supported by the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, Broward County, and United Way.

Its current mission and future growth involve the provision of a wide range of quality community mental health services throughout the county. The staff includes qualified psychologists, psychiatrists, social workers, clinicians, and case managers. Licensed professionals and University staff provide consultation and supervision.
Key West AIDS Literary Conference Prompts Thought

theme that repeated over the three days. One writer makes references to safe sex in his work—he describes the sound of a condom wrapper being torn open.

It was obvious that a large percentage of the seminar registrants were university faculty. A professor at the University of Miami contributed that he teaches a class that resembles the content and name of the seminar. Literature in the Age of AIDS. A scholarship from The John Hersey Memorial Scholarship Fund provided financial assistance for those unable to afford the seminar and the writers' workshops that are held a week prior to the conference.
I wondered why Nova Southeastern University was not represented at such an educationally valuable seminar. Many questions haunted me over these three days and this was one of them.

(Mark Doty will return to South Florida on March 8, 1997 for the Day of Literary Lectures at Broward County Main Library. Call (954) 357-7401 for details.)

Susan Juszkieiwicz is a graduate of the Master of Arts program at Nova Southeastern University. She works at the Florida Center for the Book.

Nature Club Wins Best Patch in AIDS Quilt

feet by 3 feet and be made of a sturdy fabric to ensure that it would last through the years and be permanent attachments to other quilts.

This contest was open to any student organization or student who wanted to make a patch. We would like to thank all of the organizations for their time and effort. The organizations that participated this year were Good Residence Hall 1st floor,
2nd floor, 3rd floor,
4th floor, Vettel Hall
1st floor, Delta Phi Epsilon, the Knight Newspaper, Johnny Blaze
Co., Nature Club, the Wellness Center, and Student Government Association.

There was extremely stiff competition this year, but the winner was the Nature Club. This club’s patch was extraordinarily creative, they attached silver satin to the 3 foot by 3 foot piece of felt. Then they made a unicorn head and they put the phrase “Hope Through The Darkness” on it.

Delta Phi Epsilon incorporated the idea that no one religion is im-une to AIDS by placing a Star of David and a cross on their patch.
Dan Black and Marne Graden created a patch that showed two teddy bears, a boy angel, a girl angel, and the slogan “A Time to Remember!” These are just a few of the entries. After careful consideration a winner was chosen. The voting was based on originality, creativity, and effort.

While we are still such a small university compared to other schools, we need to remember that every little bit of education helps.
Hopefully next year more than 11 organizations will make a patch, but even if we have the same turn out we will still be helping our Nova community. If you would like more information on the NSU AIDS Quilt, please call the Wellness center at
(954) 452-6401 or stop by Goodwin
Residence Hall Room #144.

101 Reasons to Give Blood!
Saving Lives is #1

Blood Drive

Date: TUESDAY, FEBRUARY, 10th
Time: 12:30pm - 5:30pm
Place: STUDENT LIFE
Contact: CHRIS WILEY #493-4564
Community Blood Centers of South Florida
A Non Profit Organization

No one religion is immune to AIDS

NATURE Club at SeaWorld. Photo courtesy of Chris Wiley.
Challenger: An American Tragedy

from page 4

had been down to the other "real world" for lunch rushed in to ask if I had heard the news.  "Dja heah?"
"Hear what?"

The shuttle had blown up on take off. Oh. Suddenly, the day which had started the same as it had for months, with only another shuttle mission (big deal) was now decidedly different.

A quieting, comfortable feeling fell upon me, numbness, like a warm body on cold sheets in winter, the initial shudders and the warm blanket which follows. At such a time as this one must reflect on one's own mortality. I know it sounds trite, but it is true. A solitary tear fell. I did not know, nor do I know now, why, but I shed a tear. For whom? For those who died? For the families?

For the country? For myself? Or perhaps for what I envisioned would and DID happen during the accident's aftermath.

I sat at my desk to wonder and write what I thought would occur: "News" shows dedicated to the incident, Donahue, and "NightLine" with Ted Koppel interviewing Carl Sagan and Isaac Asimov as to the "whys," and "where does the space program go from here?" The evening news played the footage continuously and we the viewers, all of us stared into the screen as one, rubbernecks at the morbid, blood riddened scene of a pile up at an intersection.

The local news ran a segment on some local hero (providing the area was lucky enough to have had a victim). The major newspapers and magazines printed spreads devoted to the shuttle, page upon page. Interviews with family members, friends and others affected. Speeches made by everyone from the President, "...we mourn seven heroes..." on down, and all the talk, chatter.

A senator from a depressed farming state said the money spent for space could be better spent here on earth to relieve his constituency, and in retort, another senator talked about our needing space to protect our vital interests. We remembered the first "ordinary" American's attempt to enter space and her name, perhaps the only one known a week after the explosion—Krista McAuliffe. A documentary on the history of space flight, a commission to investigate; a formal report; etc., ad nauseam... Oh, by the way, the others besides McAuliffe were Onizuka, Jarvis, Resnik, McNair, Smith and Scobee, as if it mattered, as if you care, as if I care, I don't.

A valid question at this point could be: "What does the above have to do with 'Idle Talk'?" Isn't it obvious? Everything!

"Idle Talk" signifies "a positive phenomenon which constitutes the kind of being of everyday Dasein's understanding and interpreting." This is all well and good, but when idle talk only strives for an average intelligibility by merely taking what is at hand and "...communicates rather by following the route of gos-sipping and passing the word along..." idle talk becomes useless non-information.

Donahue, Ted Koppel and others provide "news" with a slant (all "news" has a slant, but these were cited). For example, how can a discussion about the shuttle accident give an accurate prognosis as to the "why," only two days after the fact, when none of the data, that is when none or very little of the wreckage had been found. It couldn't possibly.

Walter Cronkite was described in one poll, as the most trusted man in America. Dan Rather is said to be more believable when wearing a sweater. I believe because of the packaging, the intermediaries and their playing on the public's ego whom Heidegger believes has "...an average understanding...never being able to decide, nor wanting distinction, nor needing it because it understands everything, such talk takes on an authoritative character, and because it does this, discourse an essential state of Dasein's Being...has the possibility of becoming idle talk", the talk destroys the intelligibility and credibility of the story.

One would hope that the people who report the news would be a little bit more intelligent than their viewers, not for "the sake of passing off something for something else" but for exposing the topic of the report without taking that story for their own, nor taking themselves so seriously.

The very nature of idle talk, is the closing off of inquiry. In a world with seven minute climaxes, cut, commercial, repeat, idle talk and the abuse of non-information becomes a liability, usurping the public and the public's right to know.

I do not call the shuttle coverage yellow journalism. I'd call it standard operating procedures given from on high, to an apathetic and ignorant populace. I could have used any one of a dozen examples from the past two years: Hijacking; the marine barracks bombing; Bernard Goetz or others. I chose this one to illustrate that we are only getting what we want, or maybe what we deserve.
A Walk in the Park
by Christina Gay
Campus Life Editor

Ever wonder what's out there in the wilds of Florida? Well, Dr. Feingold knows, and now, since taking his Journey II: The Capstone Experience class, I know, too.

As part of the experiential nature of the course, we were required to participate in a few activities, among them, seeing Rick Bauer play at The Elbo Room, going on a 15-mile bike ride at Shark Valley, watching a film at IMAX and taking this nature walk.

We arrived, not all together, at Tree Tops Park, just a few miles from campus around 2:30 in the afternoon. The day was cloudy, with a fine mist of rain sprinkling down and further dampening our enthusiasm for the expedition.

Dr. Feingold was in fine spirits, however, eager to bestow knowledge of hardwood trees upon us. We reluctantly marched forth, ten little Indians all dragging their feet over pine needles and dead leaves. We stopped first at a hammock, an elevated area whose vegetation differs from the surrounding brush because of the height.

We looked up and down some live oak, almost got poison ivy, and sauntered along the Pine Ridge Trail to some resurrection fern and air plants. Tree Tops Park is one of the few remaining hardwood preserves in Florida. This is one of the reasons visitors are not allowed to take anything, not even a pinecone or flower, out of the park.

Spiders scurried at our approach and little inchworms strung themselves from the trees on thin strands of silk to catch in our hair and on our clothing.

A housing development was coming up on the edge of the park and we all wondered about its impact on the Park. Will the people moving in to their side of the fence, or will they throw their garbage over into the park? Will they deface the trees, remove flowers and pinecones to their own yards and hurt the animal life?

Dr. Feingold assured us that...
Rap Does More Than Bump and Grind

by Kelvin Vidale
Entertainment Editor

Public Enemy's lead voice, Chuck D, has a musical project that elevates rap to a higher purpose than accumulating Greenbacks.

Autobiography of Mistachuck: Report from the Commissioner provides social commentary and musical creativity with twelve original rap tunes. Although the album mostly addresses the Black American experience, it also shows how politics plus lyrical improvisation make for an awakening experience.

Chuck D packs the Autobiography of Mistachuck with works that challenge the status quo and even himself, yet still remain entertaining. The title track, Mistachuck, maintains Chuck D's important role in the rap world. It opens with a frank discussion that challenges his solo effort. He silences the hype through a pounding, cosmic musical arrangement that features the Joker's infamous chuckle. Unsatisfied with this defense, Chuck D reminds the critics, "rhymes can hurt as well as do work," reaffirming that his musical style stays shocking and productive.

Chuck D then presents what could be the most fierce track on Autobiography, Niggativity. Do I Dare Disturb the Universe? A piercing organ chills the tune, its bass produces a shaking boom, and the humming female tenors create a haunting feel against Chuck D's coarse vocals. When he sings, "I ain't playin / this mainstay stayin rooted instead of be'in pimped & then prostituted," he articulates his refusal to let the music industry exploit his talents. Clearly, Chuck D strives to fan away the musical pollution that fills the radio airways and wants the same result with talk show "brain wash."

Talk Show Created the Fool bashes talk shows from Geraldo to Ricki Lake and laments the embarrassment talk show guests bring themselves. This track also features lyrical improvisation from Chuck D and his fellow rappers. His mature voice starts the tune, then Abnormal's dramatic style and C. Brewer's youthful sexiness heighten this tune's appeal.

Track number nine, But Can You Kill the Nigger in You, has a shocking tone that Isaac Hayes, with his deep voice, contrasts by urging literacy and self-understanding among Black men. The Pride's reminiscent feel pays tribute to some of history's most brave Black heroes. The Autobiography of Mistachuck showcases rap music in a reflective vein. Chuck D invests his entire self in this album. He connects himself to a historical foundation while keeping the music flavorful. Its slamming percussion, lively sound-effects, and racy lyrics make The Autobiography of Mistachuck: Report from the Commissioner a musical project worth listening to.
Whitney Houston Gets in Touch with Her Roots

by Kelvin Vidale
Constituting Writer

When superdiva Whitney Houston makes a musical display of her faith, fans carefully have to try on that new style. Houston has an album that accompanies her starring role in the film that carries the same name, The Preacher's Wife. This original sound track marks the first time she explores her gospel roots professionally. In it, Miss Houston collaborates with some of the most talented people in both the gospel and pop arenas to produce a final product that takes her voice and career to higher heights.

This album's most outstanding quality must be the way it reaches out to three kinds of music lovers. Pop music fans, gospel listeners, and people who enjoy both types should find something worthwhile in Houston's newest musical project. I Believe in You and Me highlights Houston's intense vocal prowess. Her voice floats above the dreamy music and occasionally soars with her characteristic belts.

Fortunately, Houston never becomes overbearing. She finishes this song with a tender recapitulation of her unending confidence in love: "I was lost / Now I'm free / 'Cause I believe in you and me."

The album switches pace on the second track written by former Eurythmics lead-singer, Annie Lennox. Rather than present a consecutive ballad, Houston gets funky and leaves some practical advice in the fast-paced Step by Step. This song shows how well both singers' voices blend. It even gives Lennox a chance to blow her own pipes while Houston proclaims, "I know you're blue / I know you're hurting / But don't let the bad things get to you." Besides delivering good advice, Houston creates an excellent aerobic workout tune.

My Heart Is Calling presents a lovesick Whitney Houston. This year's most Grammy-nominated artist (Babyface) wrote this song and lets Houston connect with her vulnerable side. Background vocals by Babyface, Shanna, and Shanie Wilson create a seductive texture for a song that details Houston's "sweet temptation."

Gospel lovers will enjoy listening to Houston and The Georgia Mass Choir. When they sing Joy, a song written by the popular Kirk Franklin, they soar with the message of a love that erases all pain. Then they "take us to church" with He's All Over Me. In this song Shirley Caesar's booming voice commands the choir and both hers and Houston's voice turn into a display of vocal athleticism. Its upbeat tempo makes for superior rejoicing.

When the microphone goes to Cissy Houston and The Hezekiah Walker Choir, listeners must ready themselves for a heavenly experience. Their moving musical rendition of The Lord Is My Shepherd gives the listener a sense of gospel music's eminence. Cissy Houston's vintage sound flows well against a choir of sopranos and when it concludes the song with "Amen," her almost weeping graceful could bring anyone to tears.

The Preacher's Wife soundtrack album showcases a dynamic and versatile Whitney Houston. She performs vocal acrobatics in tribute to the gospel tradition, yet shows control in some of the album's most serious moments. This album has superb vocal arrangements and refreshing lyrics. It also has remixes of two tracks, one of which Teddy Riley helped produce. This musical production emphasizes a different sound for Miss Houston and, thankfully, it fits well for those who like pop, gospel, or both.

Soothing Instrumentals for the Weary Heart

by Kelvin Vidale
Entertainment Editor

The most celebrated American holiday passed, but the spirit that defines it never dies. Cyrus Chestnut's album, Blessed Quietness, captures that enduring spirituality and uses his talents to make the piano a voice for that idea. His broad range of hymns, spirituals, and carols starts from a traditional base but the unconventional edge Chestnut brings to those songs renews their importance.

Several songs display Chestnut's virtuoso talents as a solo pianist. Over My Head begins with a simple pattern that escalates into lush musical arrangement. His rendition of this spiritual tune sounds supremely sublime. It contrasts Walk With Me Jesus, a track he transforms into a serious piece as it has a driving background pattern set in a lower register.

He then follows this urgent number with a popular carol, Silent Night.

If you haven't told your family you're an organ and tissue donor, you're not.

To be an organ and tissue donor, even if you've signed something, you must tell your family now so they can carry out your decision later. For a free brochure on how to talk to your family, call 1-800-355-SHARE.

It can kill you if you don't recognize it.

Depression strikes millions indiscriminately. Depression is MOST dangerous when it goes unrecognized. Always be aware of this threat, and don't always believe everything you feel.

Public Service message from SAVE (Suicide Awareness/Voices of Education) http://www.save.org
Write your comments about “I” to Nick Moore at mooreni@polaris.acast.nova.edu. He wants to hear from YOU!
Knights On Improve More Cheese Please

by Dan Illman
Sports Editor

After two tough conference losses at the George M. Mayer Gymnasium, the Nova Southeastern University Knights basketball squad looks to rebound in its constant quest for credibility in the Florida Sun Conference. Coached by Tony McAndrews, the Knights currently own a record of 8-11, (0-2 FSC) erasing harsh memories of last season's woeful court performances. Unlike the Pioneers of last year, NSU can compete with anyone that is thrown against them.

They also can dominate. Against Florida Christian College on November 15, the team ran up 93-42 tour de force, leaving the befuddled visitors in the wake of their brilliance. The following evening, the quality of tenacity, so often lacking last year, became evident in the 88-78 victory over Christian Faith. Sophomore Sherard Hernandez continued to impress opposing teams, hitting on 14 of 22 attempts to finish the evening with a whopping 32 points. Nova blitzkrieged FCC 88-35.

Santa Claus brought McAndrews' troops a four game winning streak to ring in the New Year and they entered their FSC opener against Webber College on a high. Nova fell short in a classic confrontation by the score of 82-81. Ellision gave the Knights a two point lead with six seconds left to play, but Webber's Antonio Williams was fouled by Robert Robinson as his slam dunk tied the score. With no time on the clock, Williams coolly sank his free throw to give the visiting Warriors the victory. Hernandez led the Knights with 22 points and 11 rebounds. Nova also hung tough against Warner Southern. The Knights led for awhile in the second half before falling to the tough Royals (10-3). Hernandez again starred with 26 points.

Coach McAndrews has five guys who can give quality minutes every evening. Led by Hernandez, Ellision, Maison, and Robinson, the Knights should be giving their opponents fits and starts for the rest of the season.

England Patriots into battle against the mighty Green Bay Packers. The Pats (13-5) look to continue to ride the defensive wave that crashed the Steel Curtain of Pittsburgh and ended the expansion of Jacksonville.

But they must deal with a physical Packers team. Coached by the walrus-like Mike Holmgren and led by league MVP Brett Favre, Green Bay (15-3) enters the Big Dance after upending the San Francisco 49ers and the Carolina Panthers. Favre has been brilliant in the playoffs, tossing for three touchdowns and 371 yards. Edgar Bennett and Dorsey Levens have given Holmgren a potent one-two punch out of the backfield, combining for over 450 yards of total offense in the playoffs. Levens has caught 7 passes for 133 yards in his two games of post-season play.
CT One, 1988
by Seth Bernstein
Contributing Writer

I saw the monument
in the city of monuments
I saw the names
I knew none
I cried.
There were so many.

“Ambition is a poor excuse for not having sense enough to be lazy.”
— Charlie McCarthy

Poems to feel

by Roy J. Smith IV
Contributing Writer

jacob watches the filaments of clouds float from their sphere to the muddy earth their sails
backed by his breath which feels warm in his lungs his insides pound out hellos to every previous nobody that happens to pass
every tired eye seems pale yet so much more existing than say yesterday life rubbed off somehow the encounter
the meeting of mention the enchantment of a too real wood nymph
when night falls
and the tapestry moon cools the clouds
he will hear her song again music fills his ears his nose, his eyes, his sex the clothes on his skin actually register so electrically high the haze of a city gone bad evaporates her sobriety is too intoxicating he breathes her air
and waits for the next thing she says:
just to watch the movement of her mouth with reassurance that she is there.

by Clarissa Scott Martin
Contributing Writer

I want to flutter, fly free soaring with the wind roaring
in my ears.
Hearing the wingbeats of angels,
their softest
carries a study in love.
My heart leaps with flower-like innocent ecstasy.
Honey is bitter
compared to the eye of God.

Night Wings
by Clarissa Scott Martin
Contributing Writer

I shudder at the splendor of the night.
Dark arms of twilight embrace
My soul’s yearning for bitter almonds.
Shoots of inky murk grow in my heart like ivy
Climbing the walls of my resistance.
A cry is sawallowed before it has begun.
The crickets’ song rises to a crescendo
In a mournful wail of lost souls.
Silence creeps across the land,
Coating it in offal.

Classifieds

Now Hiring!!

Greek Life Editor:
Requires good writing skills, ability to communicate well in writing as well as face to face, and basic knowledge of Greek
Life at NSU.
For information stop by Rosenthal
Room 208 or call 370-5670

To place a Classified Ad in
The Knight:
Send an ad (no larger than this box) along with a check for $17.00 (made out to Nova Southeastern University) to:
The Knight Newspaper
3301 College Avenue
Ft. Lauderdale, Fl 33314 or Stop by the Rosenthal Building Room 208.

Hot Information for Women at Nova!

by Mari Chamberlain Graduate Assistant
for Student Services

Sorority Rush is just around the corner! If you are thinking of joining a sorority or just want some information about them, RUSH PARTIES will be held January 28 through 31.
For further information, please contact Margie Showalter from Phi Sigma Sigma at 452-6338 or Ella Basic from Delta Phi Epsilon at 475-9762.
There are looking forward to hearing from you and seeing you at their events. This is a GREAT opportunity to meet new people.
Men shouldn’t feel left out. There are three Fraternities as well including Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Alpha Mu, and Theta Delta Chi.
Look For Pats to Go Packing son work. Favre also has several other options. The resurgent Keith Jackson surprised all who thought that his best years were behind him with 10 touchdown catches during the regular season. His ally at tight end, the ever-steady Mark Chmura, provides Favre with another big target for valuable short-yardage gains.

After Robert Brooks went down with an injury, Holmgren immediately went out and found Andre Rison to complement Antonio Freeman and Don Beebe. Rison has found his niche in the playoffs, hauling in five Favre passes for 66 yards and a touchdown. Freeman and Beebe (a former four-time Super Bowl loser with Buffalo) have combined for 13 TD receptions on the season.

New England's slashing defense, a bastion of strength in the postseason, has the daunting task of stopping all of Holmgren's weapons. Led by Willie McGinest and Chris Slade, the Pats 'D' needs to shut down Bennett early so as not to be prone to Favre's play-action trickery.

Parcells' troops will be marshaled onto the field by Drew Bledsoe. Bledsoe's numbers were weakened by injury last season, but he returned in fine style, flipping for over 4000 yards. As is the case with Favre, Bledsoe is joined by a dangerous backfield. Curtis Martin impressed all with a thousand yard rushing season and is averaging almost six yards a carry in the playoffs. Fullbacks Sam Gash and former Dolphin Keith Byars have reliable hands as does David Meggett.

Bledsoe's receiving corps is headed by Terry Glenn (another member of the 1000 yard club) and Shawn Jefferson. Both have been stellar in the post-season, with a combined 15 catches for 311 yards. Parcells loves to utilize his tight ends, so expect Ber Coates to set plenty of action Coates scored nine touchdowns in '96.

The Pack's giant defensive line is stalemated by the venerable Reggie White. In his quest for his first World Championship, White, who garnered 8.5 sacks and 3 fumble recoveries, is joined by the hard-hitting duo of Santana Dotson and Sean Jones. New England must also be wary of Packer safety LeRoy Butler, who snuck into the backfield 6.5 times to hammer opposing quarterbacks.

On paper, New England looks to be competitive against the heavily favored Packers. Yet even with Parcells barking directions on the sidelines, it is hard to fathom the Patriots bucking the trend of NFC dominance. Watch for New England to stay close early and be a factor throughout, but to eventually fall to the Packers by the score of 21-10. As the stock market soars to new heights in 97, so too will the dreams of AFC fans as they “wait till next year.”

"An American is a man with two arms and four wheels.”
— A Chinese child
only conscientious people would be allowed to live in these houses, but I still worried about the innocent little birds. Housing developments are one of the biggest dangers to hardwood forests. They encroach on the land, cut down trees and destroy habitats for animals and kill species that have yet to be catalogued.

We saw Schauss swallowtail zebra butterflies, strangler figs and Florida slash pines. I went into this experience expecting to be educated, but, looking back, I’m glad I had the opportunity to experience plant and animal life that may not exist in twenty years and I know I’ll remember it for the rest of my life.

Just in case you decide to buy the books this semester.

Cyrus Chestnut Offers a Musical Balm in Blessed Quietness

Chestnut makes the season’s purpose appear as an everyday experience.

The genius himself believes that “this music offers encouragement when one is low in spirit. It can also soothe you when you are troubled. Most importantly, it offers praise to the most high.”

His summation best describes how a well-produced album of meaningful instrumentals brings peace to any listener.