1999 Starts off Strong at The Flight Deck

by Frank Majerich
Assistant Director for the Student Union

January is gone, but The Deck is still celebrating the New Year. Our first TGIF on the 8th was slow and uneventful as we were all recovering from the holidays. The following week we kicked off Buck Bingo and started the weekend with “Flight”ionary, The Deck’s version of Pictionary. Over 100 students enjoyed the drawing antics of teams consisting of employees, graduate students and undergraduates.

The team of Mike Gabel, Valerie Swanson, Chad, and Megan Connelly took first place with 54 points in a complicated point system. It came down to the final round and they needed two of the three words relating to NSU. Alyson Dion and her brilliant team of Jennifer Whitesel, Angel Sanchez, and Tamer Hanina (the 1998 Orientation Squad) tended. The older generation sang “Got You Babe.” Karaoke Nights have become a regular in our monthly activities that is well attended.

The following week turned The Deck into a shadowy, dark lit room for the Poetry Readings of Campbell McGrath, hosted by Writer’s Bloc. This new addition to our regular programs creates close and personal interactions with poets as well as experiencing their work as it was meant to be heard. McGrath’s works included subject matter about Jimmy Buffett and Cabbage Key, nightlife in South Beach, and betting on horses at the track. Over 40 people attended. Some even traveled from the University of Miami and Florida International University.

The week concluded with Karaoke Night. Over 100 students gave it their best shot singing such favorites as “I’m Too Sexy,” “November Rain,” “Supernova,” and “I Got You Babe.” Karaoke Nights have become a regular in our monthly activities that is well attended. The older generation sang The Doors, while the younger generations sang Pearl Jam. There were solos, duets, and event group songs. You could see people singing with their friends from the tables. Meanwhile, other students watched the words as they ran across the television.

Distinguished Lawyer Visits Nova

by Kyle B. Washburn
Associate Editor

On Friday, January 29, I had the privilege of meeting Charles B. Rosenberg. He is a shareholder in the law firm of Heller, Ehrman, White, & McAuliffe. The focus of his practice is complex business litigation. This includes media and entertainment law. He served as legal consultant to the law firm of Heller, Ehrman, White, & McAuliffe. The focus of his practice is complex business litigation. This includes media and entertainment law. He served as legal consultant to The Paper Chase and LA Law. He was the legal consultant to LA Law during its entire eight year run. During the O.J. Simpson trial, he served as an on-air commentator for E! Entertainment Television and for CBS Radio News.

The focus of his speech was the effects of media on law and the immediate effect media has on the public. He stated that in the future all trials would be broadcast on television. He thought it was a good idea. Mr. Rosenberg felt the public should be made aware of the proceedings of a court. He even suggested that some even find court drama entertaining. Initially I thought court should be made public, but then I thought of the people involved in the trials. Having their affairs made public in front of millions could wreck ones career and family life. This would have a dramatic effect on the public’s opinion of the law practice.

Mr. Rosenberg was an excellent speaker who captured the audience’s attention. He made some interesting points although I disagreed with many of them. Everyone had their own opinions to discuss at the end of the speech. Mr. Petrich, a professor of communications here at Nova and advisor to the radio station, had opposing ideas on the effects of the media on the public. He along with others expressed the ideas of Dr. Gerbner. Dr. Gerbner’s research proved the effects of television on people. This open forum at the end of Mr. Rosenberg’s speech proved to be the most interesting portion of the presentation.
Take Me Out To The Ball Game

by Jason M. Gavril

Last Wednesday, as I was scanning City Link, as is my Wednesday custom, I came across an announcement that changed my life forever. Thanks to the Superbowl and the celebrities that planned to attend it, there was going to be a benefit softball game at the Old Yankee Stadium in Ft. Lauderdale. The softball game pitted film and television celebrities, the Hollywood All-Star Team, against Football players, the Football All-Star Team. Why they decided to have Football players match softball skills against celebrities is far past my understanding. It was only $10.00 dollars a ticket on the day of the game and the celebrities would sign autographs, so I decided to go. The big day, the Saturday before the Superbowl, finally arrived and I was pumped. I had a pen and paper to get all the autographs I could. I was also somewhat excited to see the softball game. So, we (Allyson Dion, Scott and Maureen Helfrich, and myself) arrived at the stadium and had to pay $3.00 dollars to park. While I was somewhat annoyed at having to pay for parking, which I should have seen coming, I realized that it all went to charity. We got a decent parking space and off we went to buy tickets. After a minor miscommunication with volunteers as to where the ticket booth was located, we got our tickets and spent five additional minutes trying to figure out how to enter the stadium.

We finally made it into the stadium and bought programs, which to my surprise only cost a dollar and had pictures of all the participants. This, as it turned out, was perfect for autographs. We found our seats with no problem and without the help of a volunteer. Our seats were located only 5-rows back from the Hollywood All-Stars' dugout. I was in heaven. So, we sat down and watched the Hollywood team warm-up. Then, out of the corner of my eye I saw someone signing autographs. I quickly grabbed my pen and program and darted. It was Jonathan Silverman ("Single Guy" and "Weekend at Bernie's").

Bingo Mania

by Frank Majnerich
Assistant Director for the Student Union

The Flight Deck held their first Bingo Night on Wednesday, January 13, with mixed reviews. There was the usual bickering amongst the players, as you would find in any bingo parlor. Everyone was there for one thing: Nova Bucks! Accusations of cheating were slung between players and Christa Shea Witter, the best bingo caller in Davie. Games began promptly at 6:05 p.m. with controversy already brewing. Christa, the caller, invited her roommate to play, who is also named Krista Kepple, but with a “K.” Believe me, I am already confused. This seemed suspicious to all of us. Then, to make matters worse, another roommate team (Andrew Sacher and Jared Arbour) joined the battle. Then, two other Flight Deck employees decided to play, but they never had a chance of winning. Better luck next time, Francisco Gonzalez and Amy Turner. When I saw what was happening, I would not wait to get in the middle of the mess. The fix was in.

Krista won the first two games. Surprised?? You should not be; the fix was in. Jared won the third game, a lucky snap. Krista was not pleased. The rest of us were trying to keep our eyes on Krista with a “K” while Jared won the game. So, the fourth game was about to start and the game was changed. The fix was in. Everyone protested, but Christa with a “C” put our screaming to an end with a decision that would have made Judge Judy proud. I don’t know who won the fourth game; everyone was too afraid to yell BINGO. The final game was the one where you have to cover the entire card. There I sat with every space filled except one. I said out loud, “All I need is O-65.” Would you believe that the next number called was “O-65”?? The fix was in.

The moral of the story is that Krista with a “K” is going to Key West, Jared will give his roommate his winnings to salvage their friendship, my wife received an NSU sweatshirt from the Nova Bucks Store, and the fix is in at Bingo Nights at The Flight Deck.

Bingo Nights are held every Wednesday night at 6:00 p.m. For one dollar, you can purchase four Bingo cards for five games of Bingo, a soda, and a candy bar. The Flight Deck awards over $500 in Nova Bucks each night, which can be used to purchase NSU paraphernalia in the Student Life Office, attend conferences, join trips, take singing or guitar lessons, or purchase food at The Flight Deck. Come out and join us every Wednesday and watch the fix in action.

He looked a bit scruffy, but he still joked with the crowd and seemed to be having a good time. I got his autograph and some good pictures of him. Next Tom Arnold appeared. He was quite jovial and not only signed my program, but posed for a picture as well. Soon TV’s Benjamin Bratt (“Law & Order”) emerged. He also joked with the crowd and seemed to be enjoying himself. Jim Breuer soon followed (“Saturday Night Live” and “Half Baked”) and I kind of felt sorry for him. He was in a good mood, joking with the crowd, signing autographs, but about every three minutes someone would do a “goat-boy” impersonation. He remained cheerful, but you could tell it was getting to him. You could see in his eyes, he knew this character would follow him forever. No matter where he went, including when the media interviewed him, people mewed at him like a goat. Daniel Baldwin came forward and I forgot all about Jim Breuer and goat-boy. Daniel was by far the friendliest of all the celebrities. He stayed in one place to talk with the crowd and this made getting to him difficult. However, it was well worth it. He took pictures and joked with every fan as well as answered questions about upcoming projects and the whereabouts of his family. He seemed to have a great time. I think only one of the football players signed autographs, but it did not really matter to me. I was there for the Hollywood celebrities.

The game started eventually. With some weird turn of events, including an extra inning “just for the fun of it,” the Hollywood All-Stars wallop their opponents. The Football players had no field skills and their hitting was below par. By the time they finally started to show some ability in the sixth inning, the game was already lost. The Hollywood All-Stars won the game with a score of 14-to-4. It was a real blow out, but exciting nonetheless. I got to meet celebrities face-to-face and get their autographs; it was definitely worth the $10 donation.
Love Jen Festival

by Angel E. Sanchez
Editor in Chief

On Saturday February 6, the Family and School Center of Nova Southeastern University held its eight annual Love Jen Festival. This festival benefits the Di'maggio's Children Hospital. This year the festival had a great turn out of parents and their kids. Kids had a chance to ride ponies, a little train, see bird wildlife, paint their faces, make dye shirts, play numerous games, see different performers on stage, eat great food, and overall have a great time. This festival allows for families to spend some quality time together and reestablish their family ties with one another. The weather was great, the sky was clear, the sun was shining beautifully, and it made this event very pleasant one. It was very encouraging to see the different clubs and organizations from the NSU family participating and volunteering for this great event. This shows us that we can work together as one to promote NSU to the rest of the world. Moreover, many other volunteers from the tri-county area helped make this a great success. This event was established in Memory of Jennifer Masi in August of 1991. Jennifer was a student from University School at Nova Southeastern University who lost an 11-year battle with cancer.

Greek Relations

by Joe Virginio
IFC President

To my understanding, in recent competitive games, the fraternities on campus have not seen eye to eye. In the past there have been mixed feelings of hostility and competition between Theta Chi, Beta Theta Pi, and Sigma Alpha Mu. While talking to alumni, they were interested in creating a sense of unity among the fraternities and minimizing the problems of the past.

I am happy to report that I have witnessed a great improvement in the unification of the fraternities; however, there is still healthy competition among the fraternities. For example, when Theta played Beta in intramural volleyball the amount of support from both fraternities, Delta Pi Epsilon and non-greeks even showed their support. It was a competitive game, but in the end we all shook hands and had a couple of laughs.

Another improvement is the support for each other. I have noticed that this year when a fraternity plans a function, a good amount of Greek members show up and back the event. A perfect example was the Beta Halloween Party.

I am very excited to see the improvement in the relationships between all of the fraternities. I am looking forward to seeing how the rest of the year goes especially with Greek Week right around the corner. On a final note, I would like to welcome Sigma Alpha Epsilon to our community.

FACTS refute AIDS lecturers’ HYPE

by Dr. Todd Miller
Contributing Writer

To Whom It May Concern,

The “AIDS educators” featured in your program, “Friendship in the Age of AIDS,” were amusing, but it was too bad they presented misinformation and wrong information, in addition to omitting several key pieces of information.

The misinformation had to do with the continual reporting of AIDS cases as cumulative cases, which now amount to over 500,000 in the USA since 1981 when the condition was first recognized. This cumulative number allowed the comparison to be made to deaths from several wars the USA has been involved in. No other medical conditions are reported as cumulative cases. This method of reporting creates the illusion that the epidemic is worsening, since the cumulative numbers will always increase.

In fact, the number of annual new AIDS cases has been decreasing in the USA over the last several years (see CDCs HIV Surveillance Report at http://www.cdc.gov). Part of this has to do with a change in the definition of “AIDS” that went into effect on January 1, 1993, when thousands of people literally got “AIDS” overnight (since the new definition called for people with CD4 T cells less than 200 being diagnosed as “AIDS” cases, even if they had no other symptoms). But the decreasing number of new cases is now probably reflecting a genuine slowing of the epidemic in the USA (oddly enough, while other sexually transmitted diseases are increasing).

More misinformation comes from references made to global statistics on the epidemic. Statistics based on data from third world countries (where most of “AIDS” is supposed to exist) are subject to skepticism for several reasons:

First, the criteria used to diagnose “AIDS” in third world countries, developed by the World Health Organization (WHO), are very different from the criteria used in more developed countries. The symptoms used to diagnose “AIDS” are not unique from symptoms seen in many other diseases endemic to Africans, and due to the costs of the antibody tests for HIV, these are seldom performed. Thus, “AIDS” in third world countries is not uniquely distinct from other diseases that have long been rampant in many of the countries (e.g., cholera, malaria and tuberculosis).

Second, even if the estimates are accurate (that is, there are millions of infections allegedly transmitted sexually), does this necessarily translate to something that people in more developed countries should worry about? People in third world countries have many health problems, due largely to their living conditions, that those in wealthier countries do not need to be personally concerned about.

Third, despite the estimates that say HIV is spread predominantly heterosexually in third world countries, there is really no evidence that this is the case in the USA (see the CDCs Surveillance report). This suggests that the estimate of heterosexual transmission in third world countries is either wrong, or that there are other factors present in these countries that allow transmission to occur this way. In either case, basing public health policy on what is allegedly occurring in third world countries, while ignoring over a decade of statistics from our own country, is questionable. Two examples of wrong information from the “AIDS educators”:

1. An estimate of 1 million was used for the number of HIV positive Americans.

2. An estimate of 1 million was used for the number of cases.

We are truly disappointed in Candi for using her sexual orientation as a mask for what really happened. As soon as she brought up the issue of her sexual orientation we were judged guilty by the college.

The three of us support the rights of gays, lesbians, and minorities. In fact Stephanie shared a bed with Candi on an October 31 trip to Disney, full knowing Candi’s sexual preference. We are truly disappointed in Candi for using her sexual orientation as a mask for what really happened. As soon as she brought up the issue of her sexual orientation we were judged guilty by the college.

More Parking!!

by Angel E. Sanchez
Editor in Chief

The Nova Southeastern Administration and Public Safety Department has heard all students in regards to parking problems throughout the University. Solution? In the next couple of weeks, the Parker Building parking lot will have more parking added to it. Each parking space will be decreased by 2 feet. originsally each space is 9 feet wide; thus, it will be reduced to 7 feet. This will allow for more parking spaces to be added and more vehicles will be able to park in this lot. This same procedure was done in the Health Professions Division Parking lot recently and has relieved the parking struggle in this area of NSU Main Campus.

Furthermore, have you seen the Cherry Trucks working around light poles around campus? Well, to provide safety in the university, NSU will be installing cameras in all major walkways and parking lots throughout the university. Public Safety Department will use this cameras to monitor all areas in the university 24 hours a day. This is a great asset to our campus and will make NSU a safer place to go to school soon. Coming in one of the future issues of The Knight there will be an article on how the cameras work and the places where they will be located. It is a great feeling to know that the university is listening to students and is trying to make our college experience at NSU a pleasant one.

People should be aware that there is a fine line between education and alarmism.

AIDS Facts Refuted

tives in the USA. This number has been used for almost 10 years, remaining constant. Two published studies would suggest that this is an overestimate. A study from the National Center for Health Statistics (Journal of AIDS 7(11): 1195, 1994) estimated that there were about 550,000 HIV+ people in the USA “household population”. A study from a CDC scientist published in 1996 (American Journal of Public Health 86(5): 642, 1996) estimated that there were 700,000 HIV+ people in the USA. Even NBC Nightly News reported on March 10, 1995, that the government had overestimated this number and that the new estimate was between 600,000 and 1 million (rather than 800,000 to 1.2 million). The estimate of 1 million is probably too high; 750,000 would be more accurate.

2. Reference was made to the transmission of HIV from mother to child, and the figure of 40% was given for the odds of this happening in an infected mother. This figure is at the high end of the range that is usually reported (between 15% and 40%). In the study to determine if AZT decreased the transmission from mother to child, the mothers who DID NOT receive AZT transmitted HIV only 25% of the time (while those receiving the drug only transmitted 8% of the time). Studies showing higher rates of transmission are often from third world countries, where other factors, once again, may be more impor-

Finally, we were led to believe that Joel got his HIV+ status by having unprotected (heterosexual?) sex while he was drunk. If indeed he was infected from a woman, he would represent a group of AIDS cases (heterosexual female to male transmission) that make up less than 3% of the total AIDS cases.

For comparison, less than 3% of breast cancer occurs in men. Should we have a public policy encouraging men to be screened for breast cancer, and should we have men get up and give seminars about how all men should be concerned about breast cancer? Alternatively, as we do for breast cancer, should we direct our education campaigns towards those most at risk (i.e., homosexual men, drug users and sex partners of drug users)? These are several examples of inaccurate information and misinformation that often come from "AIDS educators". People should be aware that there is a fine line between education and alarmism. For the information omitted by the educators, I would strongly urge interested people to visit any of the following web sites on the Internet: http://www.virusmyth.com, http://www.duesberg.com, or www.livelinks.com/sumeria/aids/ html.

Yours,

Todd Miller, Ph.D.
Biochemistry and Molecular Biology

PS - Note I am not saying safe sex is bad, only that there are plenty of other reasons to practice it, primarily pregnancy and the more common sexually transmitted diseases (that account for over 99% of all cases of sexually transmitted diseases (that account for over 99% of all cases of STDs).

Rent It! “Slums of Beverly Hills”: Rich in Talent

by Deana Daneau
Entertainment Editor

It is 1976; a high school freshman regretfully experiences the hyper-development of her body as her financially challenged family moves, like nomads, to another low-rent apartment complex on the hem of Beverly Hills. While father Murray, with children in tow, is in search of happiness and good schools, young Vivian Abramowitz learns about her burgeoning sexuality and the value of her family along the way.

_Slums of Beverly Hills_ is a witty and precocious film from first time writer/director Tamara Jenkins (Robert Redford took on the executive producer role), and consists of an incredibly talented cast. Natasha Lyonne plays the lead, Vivian, whose fully developed breasts represent everything that seems to be dysfunctional in her life (i.e., they resemble those of her absent mother; a neighbor suggests that big breasts make one look cheap).

Lyonne’s portrayal of Vivian is fresh, sensitive, and enjoyable. Joining her are: Marisa Tomei as the pregnant, drug addicted cousin (Rita) who comes to stay with the family and teaches Vivian a thing or two about womanhood; Alan Arkin as the down-on-his-luck father (Murray) who is supported by his brother; David Krumholtz as the very funny pot-smoking, actor and older brother (Ben); and Vivian’s Charles Manson obsessed love interest (Eliot), played by Kevin Corrigan. Carl Reiner, Rita Moreno, and Jessica Walter also make appearances in the film.

Although the cast seems to hold their own, Jenkins’ script and direction evoke the vulnerabilities of her characters with realism and ease (Not a surprise when it’s been said that Slums is somewhat autobiographical for Jenkins). As for direction of photography, many well framed shots—specifically those symbolizing Vivian’s insignificance and inability to commit to anything—adds to the overall feeling of the film. Stylistically, some noticeable match on action cuts are utilized and done well (two important scenes are joined together effectively with this technique).

In the end, Murray’s oft-sputtered motto: “Furniture is temporary, but education is forever,” resounds with a deeper truth for Vivian than her father could have ever wanted. For in the summer of 1976, Vivian learns that what she has—an atypical family, big breasts, and all—helps make her who she is and who she wants to be. Though the money might be tight, her C-cup still runneth over. _Slums of Beverly Hills_ is funny, touching, and at times, familiar to us all.

Cain’s Goal: To Be Successful In All Her Endeavors

by Salina Vavia
Sports Editor

Shannon Cain is announced as the Assistant Athletic Director/Compliance/Senior Women’s Administrator for Nova Southeastern University.

Cain is now the educator and enforcer of all NCAA Division II rules and regulations, NAIA rules and regulations, departmental rules and regulations, and Student Athlete Advisory Committee. Cain also responsible for Title IX issues, for student athletes and academics, and for all female athletic teams.

Besides her administrative position, she is the Cheerleading coach for NSU. “I do look forward to continue my workings with the (NSU) cheerleaders and developing them into a respectable university co-ed squad,” says Cain.

Cain has been successful throughout her career. There is a force that allows her to triumph through. “The main driving force for me as an individual is giving 120 percent and performing at the highest level possible,” states Cain.

Her experience is deep. Cain is involved on committees within the university that addresses students’ needs and improving the campus community. She was the Assistant Director of Student Life for Campus Sports and Recreation and intern for Nova. The Atlanta Committee employed Cain for the Olympic Games at the Georgia Tech Aquatic Center.

Whether it is through coaching or working in the Athletic Department, Cain uses one philosophy, “When I am able to have someone come to me and tell me that I have helped them in some way or made their involvement or participation enjoyable, then I am rewarded for my efforts,” believes Cain.

Inspirational Corner

by Salina Vavia
Sports Editor

With seasons just beginning and other seasons going into post-season play, there is plenty of inspiration around. Still, if you find yourself needing some more positive insight or maybe just a pep talk, here are a few more sayings from the experts who know how to stay focused, strong, and be successful.

"My attitude has always been...if it's worth playing, it's worth paying the price to win,"
- Paul "Bear" Bryant- Football

"You're the only one who can make the difference. Whatever your dream is, go for it!",
- Ervin "Magic" Johnson- Basketball

"Serenity is knowing that your worst shot is still going to be pretty good."
- Johnny Miller- Golf

"Very simple. Nothing will work unless you do."
- John Wooden- Basketball

"Slumps are like a soft bed. They're easier to get into and hard to get out there,"
- Johnny Bench- Baseball

"It's only a game when you win. When you lose, it's hell,"
- Hank Stram- Football
...before all the world, we SAE, have taken your boy and now we give you back - A Man."

-William C. Levere

NOT Guilty Side Speaks Out

started by Candi as an inexcusable hate crime. They refused to hear the side of the story, perhaps because they feared publicity from gay activist groups. We were surprised and disappointed at Nova's reaction to this incident. At NSU, it appears that one is found guilty of crimes even though no court of law would have done so based on the evidence. Knowing this: do you feel some students have more rights than others? What are your rights as a student here at Nova, and do you feel safe?

We are truly disappointed in the fact that a guilty person has gotten off scott-free and is attempting to leave Nova as a martyr, when in fact she is guilty as sin. Stephanie, a victim of the attack, has been banned from the Goodwin Residence Hall and the property directly adjacent to it. Cristen and Ellen, two innocent by standers, have been placed on probation until December 1999. These punishments are a result of Nova's failure to get the facts straight. Is Nova Southeastern a fine University or a trip through the Twilight Zone?

In a society where student riots were silenced by gunshots, like Kent State, Ohio (1971) and Tienam Square, we fully understand why it is difficult for our fellow students to rise on our behalf. However, what will be the price of indifference? Will you be the next one falsely accused and judged at NSU? Is Nova a fine University or a sovereign nation unto itself? You be the judge.
