About the Authors

Zvi Bekerman, lectures in the School of Education, and is a researcher at the Truman Institute for Advancement of Peace, Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He can be contacted at mszviman@mscc.huji.ac.il.

Sean Byrne is professor and director of the doctoral program in peace and conflict studies, and director of the Arthur V. Mauro Centre for Peace and Justice at St. Paul’s College at the University of Manitoba. With Cynthia Irvin, he co-edited Reconcilable Differences: Turning Points in Ethnopolitical Conflicts (2000). He can be contacted at byrnejj@ms.umanitoba.ca.

Peter T. Coleman, PhD is Associate Professor of Psychology and Education at Teachers College, Columbia University and Director of the International Center for Cooperation and Conflict Resolution. He was the first recipient of the Early Career Award from the American Psychological Association, Division 48: Society for the Study of Peace, Conflict, and Violence. He co-edited The Handbook of Conflict Resolution: Theory and Practice (2000; 2006), and has authored over forty journal articles and chapters.

Chris Cunningham is an M.A. student in Irish Politics in the Department of Politics, Queen’s University of Belfast.

Eyob Fissuh recently completed his PhD comprehensive exam in the Department of Economics, University of Manitoba.

Jennifer S. Goldman is a PhD candidate in Social-Organizational Psychology at Teachers College, Columbia University and a Graduate Fellow with the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. Her research focuses on the role that humiliation plays in perpetuating intractable conflict. Prior to her doctoral work, Ms. Goldman served as the Director of Negotiation Programs at Mediation Works Incorporated, a dispute resolution organization based in Boston. She holds a B.A. with honors from Tufts University and an M.A. in Social-Organizational Psychology from Teachers College, Columbia University. She can be contacted at jsg2019@columbia.edu.

Cynthia Irvin is a senior social science scholar with the Research Triangle Institute International where she works on projects in the areas if human rights, post-conflict reconstruction and peacebuilding. She is currently serving as a member of an international mediation group engaged in multiparty talks in the Basque country. She is author of Militant Nationalism: Between Movement and Party in Northern Ireland and the Basque Country (1999).

J. P. Linstroth obtained his D.Phil. in Social Anthropology from the University of Oxford, United Kingdom. He is presently Assistant Professor of Conflict Resolution and Anthropology at Nova Southeastern University, and a co-recipient of the President’s Faculty Research and Development Grant at NSU and an Alexander von Humboldt Foundation Grant for a collaborative study on ethnicity and identity among migrant groups in conjunction with the Georg-August University of Goettingen, Germany. Much of his work has concentrated on understanding gender, history, nationalism, and violent struggle in the Spanish-Basque region. In 2005 he was invited by Basque Peace Foundation, “Gernika Remembered” (Gernika Gogoratu), to present a paper on the Basque conflict. His trip to Gernika, Spain was also co-sponsored by the Basque Government. He has been recently invited and sponsored by the Department of Justice of the Basque Government to give a talk in November, 2006 at the “2nd International Conference of Human Rights” in Bilbao, Spain. He can be contacted at linstrot@nova.edu.

Notes: A misspelling occurred in the Spring 2006 issue of the PCS Journal. The title of Alvin Wolfe’s paper is Supranational Networks: States and Firms.

PCS transitioned from its style guide to the Chicago Manual of Style in 2005, with input from the readers, contributors, and editorial team.
THE ROLE OF ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE IN CONFLICT RESOLUTION IN NORTHERN IRELAND

Sean Byrne, Cynthia Irvin, Eyob Fissuh, and Chris Cunningham

Abstract

External economic assistance from the International Fund for Ireland and the European Union Special Support Program for Peace and Reconciliation assisted in setting the context of the Northern Ireland peace agenda, and holds out the promise of a new civic culture. This article explores people’s perceptions of economic assistance of conflict amelioration in Northern Ireland. Some of the findings, in respect of inter-community differences in perceptions of the utility of external economic assistance in building the peace dividend, are discussed in the paper.
HOW DO WE EDUCATE FOR PEACE?
STUDY OF NARRATIVES OF JEWISH AND PALESTINIAN PEACE ACTIVISTS

Zvi Bekerman, Ifat Maoz, Mara Sheftel

Abstract
The present analysis focuses on the personal narratives of peace activists, the facilitators of reconciliation-aimed dialogues between two ethno-national groups in a situation of asymmetrical conflict: Jews and Palestinians. It puts forward the idea that these peace activists bring a wealth of knowledge from their personal and professional narratives to bear on their strategies and practices of social transformation. We posit that foregrounding this knowledge through the analysis of these narratives not only affords a better understanding of their theoretical perspectives, their practices, aims and goals of social change but also can greatly contribute to our better understanding of peace education processes in general and in particular to a consideration of the ways peace activists experience and creatively deal with the dilemmas and challenges they confront in their transformational work.
WHAT WE DON'T KNOW CAN HELP US:
ELICITING OUT-OF-DISCIPLINE KNOWLEDGE FOR WORK WITH INTRACTABLE CONFLICTS

Jennifer Goldman and Peter Coleman

Abstract

In this article, the authors present the results of a study in which a diverse variety of experts in fields outside the traditional conflict domain were interviewed about their ideas regarding intractable conflicts. The purpose of this study was to gather frame-breaking insights and practical approaches that could shed new light on complex, persistent conflict that has been particularly resistant to resolution. The authors argue that outsiders to the field are more likely to provide fresh perspective and radical approaches to the conflict field’s most intransigent problems because they are not constrained by the field’s pre-existing normative frames. This article examines some of their findings—from ideas on how globalization has exacerbated intractable conflicts, to ways that Biblical metaphors can be used to promote reconciliation, to an analysis of how philosophical concepts such as morality and impartiality can be used to produce fair outcomes, to ideas on the creation of an independent, international regional facilitation corps. In addition to a summary of content findings, methodological recommendations for future similar studies are offered.
