NSU's Newest Piece of Art

By Tanya Parnes
Staff Writer

The H. Wayne Huizenga School of Business & Entrepreneurship has just received a new edition to its Dr. William S. Spears Courtyard Atrium: a bronze Native American statue named "Amaguk: Protector of Wisdom." The statue was a gift donated by Dr. Paul and Suzanne Hershey and their colleagues Dr. Ronald and Dorothy Campbell.

Dr. Hershey has donated many different pieces of artwork to charitable organizations across the country. He has also been a visiting professor at NSU for several years. He teaches the students for free, Jade Chen, the Director of Development at the Business School, said that Dr. Hershey comes to the university on a regular basis and holds several meetings on situational leadership. "He's very fond of these bronze sculptures and statues," said Chen of Hershey's charitable donation. She said that he has a Center for Leadership Studies in Escondido, Calif., in which he features this artist's work.

The statue was created by Marie Barbera, an experienced sculptor of Native Americans, whose works are widely displayed throughout the United States. The statue features a Native American man wearing a "robe of the wolf." Native Americans used the wolf as a symbol because it was known as a brave and caring leader amongst those cultures who lived in peace. The belief was that a person could only wear this robe if he had demonstrated the "wisdom of the elders." A person had to acquire knowledge and teach others what he had learned in order to earn their respect. They believed that people lived on through teachings and therefore it was a great honor to receive this robe. The Hagihana, Bella Coola, Pawnee, Hidatsa, Lakota and Ahtena Native Americans all shared their beliefs of the wolf robe.

Several students at the university stopped to admire the statue and comment on its significance to the university. Isaac Valdivieso said, "I think it shows a form of knowledge. It's very, very interesting." "I think it's good that they're trying to depict Native Americans in a positive way," said Simone Stewart. She said that she liked the fact that the statue was facing the doors that his arms were slightly extended because it was a very welcoming gesture towards anyone entering the building.

Other students were confused about the meaning of this statue however. "At first glance I don't understand what it symbolizes," said Sean McDonald. Dwayne Gordon agreed and said the statue "is in the wrong location."

"The statue stands at the far end of the atrium where it can easily be seen by anyone entering or exiting the building. There is a limestone plaque on the base of the statue which describes it in detail. Barbera had the plaque especially made for her piece of art. However, the text was not approved by NSU before it was printed on the plaque. Chen said that she would have liked to change a few words around on the plaque because she was not very comfortable with Barbera's usage of the word Seminole. Barbera described the artwork as a member of the Seminole tribe demonstrating his wisdom to the elders. NSU has not verified that as fact and was therefore not pleased about the plaque going to print without their prior approval. Nonetheless, the university appreciates Dr. Hershey's gift and welcomes it as a new edition to the business building."
The Current is looking for talented, enthusiastic individuals to be part of a growing news team.

Positions include staff writers

Drop by ASA 105 for an application or contact Alisha VanHoose for details at (954) 262-8455 or nsunews@nova.edu

NSUCURRENT.COM
Take the Current with you.
Are E-Voting Machines Ready for Midterm Elections?

By Greg Kyriakakis
Nation & World Editor

Voters already have serious issues to consider when going to the polls on election day. With the emergence of electronic voting machines, they may also need to question whether their vote will be accurately recorded.

Concerns have been raised recently, since current Florida law does not require background checks for employees of voting machine manufacturers. The St. Petersburg Times found that anyone, including felons, "can own, sell, program and fix the machines that non-felons use to vote -- unless counties prohibit that in their individual contracts."

Tampering with voting equipment concerns watchdog groups, including the Voting Integrity Alliance of Tampa Bay. "We've been concerned about this for a long time," Pamela Haengel, head of the alliance, told The Times.

Part of the concern is that Smartmatic, a Boca Raton company whose voting machines will be used in 30 states for the midterm elections, is owned by three Venezuelan nationals who have done work for the Venezuelan government, which lately has been at odds... with the Bush Administration," reported the E-Commerce Times.

The report stated that there are split opinions over whether foreign ownership could interfere with U.S. votes. Though Paul S. Herron, the director of the Center for American Politics and Citizenship at the University of Maryland dismissed concerns over the issue by placing trust in the competency of foreign workers, the problem is not solved so easily. Machines simply may not be secure enough.

"We are using machines that are easily rigged," Avi Rubin, a professor at John Hopkins said. "The real problem is that there is no way to audit these machines, so we will not know if the result is correct." Occurrences such as software bugs and tampering could alter results without anyone knowing.

Herron contends that such errors and malfeasance could just as easily happen with traditional paper ballots.

According to the New York Times, the Committee on Foreign Investment is investigating Smartmatic's Venezuelan ownership in hopes of determining "whether the government in Caracas has any control or influence over the firm's operations."

A Venezuelan official contended that "the government of Venezuela doesn't have anything to do with the company aside from contracting it for our electoral process."

In addition to the Smartmatic controversy, ABC News stated that Diebold machines which account for 40 percent of the market have the potential for tampering. Princeton computer scientists were able to break into the company's AccuVote-TS touch-screen machine and introduce a virus that changed the count count."

The company holds that the machines underwent heavy testing by numerous groups, including the federal government.

Eighty percent of voters will use electronic machines in the coming election, with one-third of precincts using them for the first time.

EARTH TALK

Dear EarthTalk: I recently heard the term "carbon sequestration" in relation to climate change. What is it and how can it help stave off global warming? — Bob Whelan, Pawtucket, RI

Carbon sequestration is simply the intake and storage of the element carbon. The most common example in nature is during the photosynthesis process of trees and plants, which store carbon as they absorb carbon dioxide (CO2) during growth. Because they suck up the carbon that would otherwise rise up and trap heat in the atmosphere, trees and plants are important players in efforts to stave off global warming.

Environmentalists cite this natural form of carbon sequestration as a key reason to preserve the world's forests and other undeveloped lands where vegetation is abundant. And forests don't just absorb and store large quantities of carbon: they also produce large quantities of oxygen as a by-product, leading people to refer to them as the "lungs of the earth."

According to the Western Canada Wilderness Committee, the billions of trees in the boreal forest of the northern hemisphere that stretches from Russian Siberia across Canada and into Scandinavia absorb vast amounts of carbon as they grow. Likewise, the world's tropical forests play an important role in naturally sequestrating carbon. However, environmentalists see preserving and adding to the world's forest canopy as the best natural means for minimizing the impact of global warming caused by the 5.5 billion tons of carbon dioxide generated by factories and automobiles each year.

On the technological front, engineers are hard at work developing man-made ways to capture the carbon spewing from coal-fired power plants and industrial smokestacks and sequester it by burying it deep within the Earth or the oceans. The Bush administration has embraced carbon sequestration as a means to mitigate U.S. carbon dioxide emissions and is spending upwards of $49 billion annually on research and development, hoping that the technology might play an important part in keeping greenhouse gas emissions out of the atmosphere. The U.S. is also funding related research in China in hopes of stemming the tide of Chinese CO2 emissions that are increasing quickly as that nation develops rapidly (China has already surpassed the U.S. as the largest coal consumer).

The Bush administration refused to sign onto the Kyoto Protocol, an international agreement adopted in Japan in 1997 calling on countries to limit their emissions of greenhouse gases. Instead, many environmentalists feel, they are pursuing carbon sequestration technology as a quick fix or "Band-Aid" approach that enables them to preserve the existing fossil fuel infrastructure instead of replacing it with clean renewable energy sources or efficiency gains. Eventually the technology involves disposing of carbon dioxide after it is produced, rather than trying to hold down its production in the first place. United Nations' studies suggest, however, that it might play a bigger role in fighting global warming this century than any other measure.

GOT AN ENVIRONMENTAL QUESTION? Send it to: EarthTalk, c/o E/The Environmental Magazine, P.O. Box 5098, Westport, CT 06881; submit it at: www.emagazine.com/earthtalk/thisweek/, or e-mail: earthtalk@emagazine.com. Read past columns at: www.emagazine.com/earthtalk/archives.php.
Bizarre Briefs

Compiled by Greg Kyriakakis

Teen Steals Bus, Drives Well

Though passengers say he did a fine job piloting a public bus in Orange County, Fl., Ritchie Davis was only 15 years old and had stolen the vehicle. ABC News reported that suspicious passengers noticed that the boy looked much too young to be driving and lacked a uniform. He did know the route and, according to one passenger was “driving pretty good.” Police pulled over the bus and later discovered that the boy is on probation for another incident of stealing a bus and ferrying its passengers around. His father explained that “this happened like three times, so I guess he really does like driving buses.”

Woman Picks Grave, Dies Upon It

A Dutch woman fixated with planning for her body’s future once she died wound up taking her last breath next to her gravesite. Reuters reported that the unnamed woman, a 65 year-old widow, started planning her own burial after the recent death of her husband. She picked out a spot at the family grave site and even went as far as to have her name inscribed on the tombstone, while leaving the space for the date empty. Oddly enough, in a bag she carried was her will and funeral details, including her music preference.

The Bill Clinton Bill

A counterfeit $100 bill with no president pictured and President Bill Clinton’s name written on it probably won’t fool store clerks. According to the Associated Press, an unidentified Arkansas man tried to pass off the bill as legit while purchasing cigarettes at a gas station. An intrepid police officer spotted the forgery, however, when he noticed that “the ink was running… the president’s face was missing and … it had the name Clinton on it.” Lieutenant Brenda Birtle said that “of all the cases I’ve worked with phony money, this is the sorriest bill I’ve ever seen.”

Student Finds Syringe, Introduces to Friends

Looking for new ways of bullying, a high school student from Vermont thought it would be fun to jab classmates with a syringe he found on the side of the road. The 16 year-old Bellows Free Academy student stabbed eight students over a two day period, reported the Associated Press. One student said that the boy walked up to her, “stabbéd me with a needle and said, ‘You now have hepatitis.’” Police found on the side of the road. The 16 year-old Bellows Free Academy student stabbed eight students over a two day period, reported the Associated Press. One student said that the boy walked up to her, “stabbed me with a needle and said, ‘You now have hepatitis.’” Police could not find the needle after the boy discarded it and are urging those injured to get tested for various diseases including hepatitis B and HIV. The student faces eight counts of assault charges and disciplinary action from the school.

Middle East

Militants kill 63, including children, in Darfur

According to a report by Reuters, “attacks in West Darfur have killed at least 63 people, half of them children, as rebels on Friday, Nov. 3 accused Khartoum of remobilizing Arab militia after suffering two military defeats on the Sudan-Chad border.” Leader of the National Redemption Front, Bârêh Idris Abu García, told reporters that the Khartoum government has been mobilizing its forces in an attempt to clear West Darfur of rebels and “move north along the border” and engage additional rebel forces. The NRF claims that of the 63 people killed in Jebel Moun, 33 were children, but the United Nations’ reports count 27 casualties as being children under the age of 12. The UN has nevertheless “urged the government to protect civilians.” The UN also outlined the events leading to the death of the civilians: a report states that the first attacks occurred in eight other villages, forcing Darfuri to flee and seek shelter in Chad and Jebel Moun, where the worst attack took place. It was also reported that a group of 10 refugees fled from the area while about “300 to 500 Arab militiamen on horseback” attacked the villages. The Sudanese army said “the strike was in retaliation for a rebel assault in a month earlier.”

Asian

North Korea plans to resume nuclear talks

In a report by Reuters, officials in the North Korean capital of Pyongyang were quoted as saying they were willing to return to six-party talks three weeks after its nuclear test “because Washington had agreed to discuss financial sanctions” that apparently pushed the North Koreans from the talks. Bush recently told reporters that he was planning to send two senior State Department officials, Nicholas Burns and Robert Joseph, “to the region to discuss strategy for getting the talks under way.” A Foreign Ministry spokesman said “North Korea” decided to return to the six-party talks on the premise that the issue of lifting financial sanctions will be discussed and settled. “The first set of talks between the Koreas, China, Japan, Russia, and the U.S. went on hiatus after Washington squeezed Pyongyang’s access to the world financial system to punish it for illicit activities such as printing fake banknotes.”

North America

Gay sex scandal forces top evangelist to resign

A report by the Associated Press stated that “the Republican party was assessing the potential political fallout from a sex scandal that has forced one of America’s most influential evangelical Christians to resign.” Rev. Ted Haggard resigned as head of the National Association of Evangelicals and as senior pastor of the New Life church in Colorado Springs, Colo. after he was accused of paying a male escort for sex. The New Life church is part of the 30 million-member NAE. Though Haggard has denied all of the accusations made against him, he said in a statement on the New Life church that he cannot be part of the church under “the cloud created by the accusations.” Political experts said that Haggard’s resignation is “at the very least an unwelcome distraction” during the struggles to keep control of Congress. The accusations arose after Mike Jones, 49, confessed to a Denver radio station that Haggard paid him over a period of three years for sex.

For more information, visit www.reuters.com.
Let The Rumors Cease, It's Still All-You-Can-Eat

By Shenita Ann McLean
Staff Writer

There has been a rumor circulating the campus concerning the menu of the Rosenthal Cafeteria. Many students heard that the cafeteria would be changing their menu from the buffet style, which many students prefer, to a less popular pay-per-plate style. When students first heard about the chance of the Rosenthal's menu alteration they were concerned.

"That's going to be a big problem if they change the menu," said NSU freshman David Perrin. "It's fine the way it is."

Students were already upset about the cafeteria's hours changing. Many students do not get out of class until the Rosenthal closes or after it has already closed, making it more difficult to get a meal.

"Well our hours changed because we students do work here," said Alice Ragin, manager at the Rosenthal Cafeteria. "They have to go to class after it has closed."

Aside from that, students were still concerned about the thought of changing the menu style.

"That's not fair to students," commented NSU freshman Carlos Zamora. When approached concerning the menu changes at the Cafeteria, Ragin dismissed the rumor. "No, we don't plan on changing the menu and we never will," said Ragin. "It will always be all-you-can-eat."

No portion of the menu is slated for change at the Rosenthal Cafeteria. Students can be assured that the all-you-can-eat program will continue to serve the NSU community.

With the All-You-Can-Eat option still in full force, NSU student Karim Foster (c) makes a purchase at the Rosenthal Student Cafeteria. Photo by Mike Palazzola

The cost of school can really stack up. Do you have all the money you need to pay for your school-related expenses?

Spring semester is just around the corner, and there are many more things to pay for—books, lab and activity fees, room and board, a new laptop. If you have already explored the federal student loan options available to you but are still in need, consider a GMAC Bank Education Loan.

With a GMAC Bank Education Loan you can get up to $40,000* to help fill any gaps in your school financing. You have the option to make no payments while you're in school, and you can have a check mailed to you in about a week.

Visit us online at www.GMACBankLoans.com or call 1-800-641-9146 today to apply for your GMAC Bank Education Loan.

GMAC Bank

Wells
continued from page 6

"bringing together the ultimate marriage of his two passions, biology and history..."

helped me connect everything together," said Michelle Kim, a student from the Honors English Seminar. In this honors course, Kim and other students read and discussed Wells' book and came up with questions to ask him for when he personally came to NSU. "It was too short, actually, I had more questions but we ran out of time. I'm glad, however, that I got to meet the author and participate in a smaller group, question and answer based, compared to the night lecture in a packed theatre," said Kim.

Even though the Minskiy was filled, with some stragglers standing on the sides, students enjoyed it equally. "It was interesting to learn about where we came from, our origin and all," freshman Randy Denen said with a smile. "The PowerPoint really helped me understand...it was all awesome. He's a really smart man!"

Sponsor Wells' determination and optimism left a resonating impact upon both the 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. groups. "He's so incredibly passionate about what he does, it was like 'wow,'" said Kim in awe. Wells concluded with his perspective, sharing his philosophy that "we are genetically 99% the same; it's the 1% that makes us different. We are all members of the same family."
On October 29, members from various clubs and organizations met outside the library quad for the annual block painting event. This event provides clubs with an excellent opportunity to market their mission and purpose.
NOVEMBER 6, 2006

RIGHT: OASIS

BELOW: NSU Conservatives

ABOVE: Omicron Delta Kappa

RIGHT: Savvy Scrapbookers

ABOVE: Leadership Roundtable

LEFT: NSU Cheer Squad

RIGHT: The Current

RIGHT: Emerging Leader Program

LEFT: SCUBA Club

All Photos by MIKE PALOZZOLA
New donors earn $75* this week!
Qualified Specialty Plasma Donors can earn up to $300* a month!

*Payment amounts depending upon donation frequency & program

Must have valid ID along with proof of SS# and local residency.
Walk-ins welcome. No appointment necessary.

2301 N. University Dr, Suite #103
Pembroke Pines 954-987-6240

Finance$ not adding up?

500 plasma donors needed now!

empowerment

At the Huizenga School of Business & Entrepreneurship, you’ll learn to differentiate yourself within the world of real business. Through our formula of engaged learning, you will develop the skills and entrepreneurial spirit necessary to distinguish yourself from the competition. We offer several programs to make acquiring your MBA a reality. “Working Track” is an 18-month alternate weekend program for working professionals, our one-year MBA Program is ideal for full-time students and professionals retraining for a career change, and our online program can suit any schedule. Enhance your career and future at the Huizenga School, the number one choice for MBAs in Florida. Apply today.

MBA Day
Thursday, December 7, anytime between 8 am - 8 pm
Carl DeSantis Building
RSVP: 954-262-5026 or openhouse@huizenga.nova.edu
Visit us online at www.huizenga.nova.edu

GRADUATE DEGREE PROGRAMS
Accounting • Entrepreneurship • Finance • Health Services Administration • Human Resource Management • Leadership • MBA
MBA • Public Administration • Taxation • Real Estate Development • Doctor of Public Administration • Doctor of Business Administration

FORT LAUDERDALE | MIAMI | PALM BEACH
Movie Review

Saw III Doesn’t Live Up to the Hype

By Stephani Rubino
A & E Editor

In light of recent horror films that are all gore and no thrills (Hostel, Cabin Fever, etc.), when I first watched the first two movies of the Saw trilogy (or series) I was very surprised. They are probably the most intelligent, and interesting, horror films made in the last seven or eight years. However, I can’t say the same for the third installment, appropriately titled Saw III.

Jigsaw’s (Tobin Bell) apprentice Amanda (Shawnee Smith) mostly takes the reins in this one, as most of the “games” are planned and created by her. Maybe the story seems watered down now, as most trilogies turn out to be; but there is definitely something missing in this film that the other two had.

It almost seems as if the producers were trying to make Jigsaw and Amanda seem more human (the whole “tortured souls, emotional problems, and dead bodies” thing) than serial killers, which is what they are. By doing that, they created a lot of scenes that were completely unnecessary and, at times, very confusing. For instance, at one point Amanda gets so mad that she cuts herself; but it’s very random and misplaced. After all, people went to see the movie to watch other people get tortured and killed, not to watch the killers cry about their problems.

Other than that, the acting was more-or-less believable, but still very typical for a 21st century horror film, as most of the characters kept making bad decisions that didn’t put them anywhere but in the worst position possible. I have to say though, Tobin Bell is a fantastic actor and, honestly, I had no idea who he was before Saw came out. The audience obviously knows he’s a very dangerous man, but he’s so articulate and gentle at times that you don’t know whether to hate him or love him. Not to mention, the fact that he does a very good job of portraying a man who is pretty much about to die throughout the whole film.

Unfortunately, the best parts of the film were the gore and the interesting way in which they killed people off in this installment. There was just the right amount of bloodshed and lots of moments that would make you cry about their problems.

Play Review

Two Rooms: A Creation

By Jany Cabezua
Staff Writer

Within the indie-esque Promethean Theatre, Two Rooms, a play by Lee Blessing, was performed. With the main plot wrapped in the acidic topic of terrorism, as an American professor is taken hostage by a militant faction (this represents one room) in the other room, his wife Lane’s coping with the situation. The topic of this play is different and hard to project on its own. But to have it performed? Only slightly more awkward.

The main problem with Two Rooms was its lack of connection with the audience. Since not many can relate to the feelings of a hostage in Lebanon, not many can interact with the deeper conflicts. Speaking of which, the deeper conflict was rather weak. There is no defined conflict with Two Rooms, the obvious of which is of course trying to save the main character’s life, but besides that, the drama swings like a pendulum. And like a pendulum, becomes boring over time.

The drama was excellent, the acting was decent, both Jeffrey T. Bower and Nicole Mitchell had complete mastery of their expressions. Especially since Wells was blindfolded, he had to heavily rely on language for means on expression. The character of Walker, by Ken Clement, was unique and completely entertaining. He appeared real and not just a role on stage, but a person you’d encounter
Movie Review

Running With Scissors

Stephani Rubino
A & E Editor

After reading the book several months ago, I was hoping somebody would take Running with Scissors on as a film. Well, my dream came true as the movie was released everywhere last week. It seems producers and screenwriters are wising up and turning some of the best books into easily accessible films for all to see. Running with Scissors is the perfect candidate as the story is very obscure, very true, and still very, very funny.

Augusten Burroughs penned the memoir about his experiences with his almost psychotic, manic depressive mother (and absent father) who decided that in order to reach her "creative unconscious" (she was a poet) she must turn the custody of the young boy over to her shrink, Dr. Finch. Joseph Cross (Desperate Measures, Flags of Our Fathers) plays teenage Augusten and does a great job portraying the author's experiences at the crazy Finch house and with his crazy mother. Cross seems fragile and soft-spoken and is extremely emotional when he needs to be. He is a very convincing actor and I hope to see more of him in future films.

Even though Augusten is represented very well in the film, Annette Bening (American Beauty), playing the part of Augusten's mother Deirdre, really steals the show in the film, much like she did in American Beauty. The best thing about her is her amazing versatility and the way she can change her moods from one to another with a snap of the fingers. Much like in American Beauty, she is depressed, manic, and utterly detached but is so witty and emotional at the same time. She did such a good job in this film; I wouldn't be surprised if she won an Oscar for her performance.

Other surprising performances came from Brian Cox (The Bourne films, X-Men 2), who played Deirdre's psychiatrist who is trying to keep himself and his whole family from going completely insane, and Gwyneth Paltrow (Proof, The Royal Tenenbaums), who played Dr. Finch's daughter Hope who was pretty much on the brink of lunacy the whole time. Cox was perfect as Dr. Finch, as his eccentric attitude and Scottish accent made him seem more out of his mind than some of his patients. Paltrow was the perfect fit as Hope, and as we know from her performance in The Royal Tenenbaums, she has the great ability to play unique, obscure characters without seeming too bubbly or cheerful (as most of her roles require her to be so).

However, the most surprising thing to me was the fact that Ryan Murphy (creator of "Nip/Tuck") was directing the film. I love his show, but before I saw the film I wasn't too sure about his capabilities of taking on a story like this. I was wrong, Murphy is more than capable and he proved that within the first 10 minutes of the movie. His ability to take such dark subject matter and give it that little bit of wit it needs to be dark comedy is incredible and is something he has certainly perfected in Running with Scissors.

All-in-all the film is beautifully realized, wonderfully directed, and perfectly written (thanks to Augusten) and has proved that sometimes, the movie can really be as good as the book. I would recommend it to anyone who's read the book and even people who haven't. The story is funny, interesting, sad, and very accessible and the movie just made it even more so.
Jany Cabezas
Staff Writer

Music to my ears...quite literally! The Ars Flores Symphony Orchestra swept through the Miniaci, leaving everyone clapping and demanding encores. I couldn't help but do the same. Well, maybe I spared my voice wanting more.

But before looking at the ending, let's rewind. The Ars Flores Symphony Orchestra will leave you in awe. Schlaffer played the harp. Schlaffer was introduced itself with a Concerto in B-flat minor in which Yumiko Endo took the lead with two different major rhythms of sound, unfortunately her intended musical adornments could have been confused for errors, "stuttering" per se, and thus seemed faulty in this area. The Noon Witch will get him, and she does—only resulting in the death of the child. The bass viols were exemplary providing a chilling effect of the child. The bassoons chanted in, and the cellos (along with percussion) enhanced the dramatic narration of the story told. Left for last and certainly with good reason, Mei-Ting Sun truly stood their ground as the bassoons chanted in; and the cellos along with percussion. The Noon Witch, based on a Bohemian fable tale that is directly sung to the listener by the instruments; a mother threatens her child that the song has its individual power, albeit for all else in her three performances she was a truly masterful, technical and graceful. The Noon Witch will get him, and she does—only resulting in the death of the child. The bass viols were exemplary providing a chilling effect of the child. The bassoons chanted in, and the cellos (along with percussion) enhanced the dramatic narration of the story told. Left for last and certainly with good reason, Mei-Ting Sun truly stood their ground as the bassoons chanted in; and the cellos along with percussion. The Noon Witch, based on a Bohemian fable tale that is directly sung to the listener by the instruments; a mother threatens her child that the Noon Witch will get him, and she does—only resulting in the death of the child. The bass viols were exemplary providing a chilling effect of the child. The bassoons chanted in, and the cellos (along with percussion) enhanced the dramatic narration of the story told. Left for last and certainly with good reason, Mei-Ting Sun truly stood their ground as the bassoons chanted in; and the cellos along with percussion.
NSU Women's Soccer Completes Best Season

By Nelly Mesa
Staff Writer

NSU women's soccer team (12-3-2; 4-2-2; SSC) took on Lynn University's Fighting Knights in the quarterfinal game of the Sunshine State Conference tournament where the Sharks came out on top, 2-1.

After suffering a 1-0 deficit for the first half hour of the game, sophomore Carolynn Del Moral was able to score for the Sharks, making the score an even 1-1. NSU's offense pressured the Fighting Knights defense throughout the entire game. The winning goal was registered by freshman, Kelly Diershow. Diershow's shot was deflected off a Fighting Knight defender and into Lynn's own net, making the score a final 2-1. "We are going to continue to practice hard and keep our heads focused over these next few weeks," said freshman Monica Tobin confidently. "We want this real bad!"

Upon this exciting win, the Sharks were able to advance to the final game in Tampa where they took on Saint Leo University. In spite of their strong performance on the field, the Sharks fell, 1-0. This 2006 season was one of the most successful in all of NSU women's soccer history. The Sharks finished strong at third place in the Sunshine State Conference. Despite their loss to St. Leo University, the Sharks were able to clinch a NCAA tournament bid for the very first time in NSU women's soccer history. The number four seeded Sharks will be headed to Tampa where they will take on the number one seeded Spartans the first weekend of November for their first of their first match of the tournament.

"Our adrenaline is pumping full throttle," said Tobin. "Tampa doesn't have a chance!"

Men's Golf Team Wins Rollins College Invitational, Ranks #1 in the Country

By Alicia Winslett
Sports Editor

On Oct. 31, the NSU men's golf team won the Rollins College Invitational at Forest Lake Golf Club in Ocoee, Fla. Every team played 54 holes in this event. On the first day every team played 36 holes and the Sharks were ahead by fifteen strokes. The closest competitor, Columbus State, finished with a three-round total of 868 (289-288-291). Florida Southern finished third with a total of 871, and Florida Gulf Coast finished fourth shooting 875. Florida Southern had four players in the top ten. Michael Martin, had an outstanding game as he registered a double-double, with 18 points and 14 assists. Five more Sharks dominated the court, proving that scoring was going to be in plenty this season. Junior center, Kevin Chester had 15 points, as well as sophomore guard Tim Coenraad and junior Oresti Nitsios contributing 14 points a piece. Senior Donovan Reddin registered 10 points, along with Sophomore Dave Naylor with 11 points of his own.

Unfortunately for the Sharks, sophomore key player Josh Wood, had a fall and came out early in the game. NSU's trident body as well as the Athletic Department wishes Wood the best in a speedy recovery as they anxiously await the beloved player's come-back.

Catch the Craze

"November is Gym-CRAZY-um Month at the RecPlex!"

The RecPlex is making November Gym-CRAZY-um month! Beginning weekdays November 1 - November 30, 6 p.m. - 10 p.m. the NSU community is invited to participate in exciting open recreational sports opportunities. The games are fun, informal competitions to encourage students, faculty, staff and alumni to "Just Get in the Gym!" Participants can come alone, with friends or with an entire team. There are no brackets, no standings, no playoffs, no champion, just fun! Sports offerings will include: Dodgeball, Arena football, kickball, ultimate Frisbee, wiffleball, floor hockey and more!

The complete schedule of games can be found online at www.recnova.edu and on the second floor of the RecPlex near the rock wall. For more information, call (954) 262-7305.

Men's Basketball Team Takes Down BCC in Exhibition Game

By Nelly Mesa
Staff Writer

NSU men's basketball team has been selected second in the Sunshine State Conference pre-season poll for the 2006-07 season, just behind Rollins College.

The Sharks took on Broward Community College's Seahawks, and took the win 98-87 on Nov. 1 in their first of two pre-season exhibition games.

NSU got off to a strong start, dominating the Seahawks in the first 10 minutes of the game, however, they fell behind going into the second half. The Sharks were able to regain composure coming into the remaining half of the game, and with the help of the Finatics roaring in the stands, the Sharks pulled it together for the win. Sophomore point Guard, Rhys Martin, had an outstanding game as he registered a double-double, with 18 points and 14 assists. Five more Sharks dominated the court, proving that scoring was going to be in plenty this season. Junior center, Kevin Chester had 15 points, as well as sophomore guard Tim Coenraad and junior Oresti Nitsios contributing 14 points a piece. Senior Donovan Reddin registered 10 points, along with Sophomore Dave Naylor with 11 points of his own.

Unfortunately for the Sharks, sophomore key player Josh Wood, had a fall and came out early in the game. NSU's trident body as well as the Athletic Department wishes Wood the best in a speedy recovery as they anxiously await the beloved player's come-back.
Dear NSU Community,

For the past week, I've been working with the NSU Theatre department on A Midsummer Night's Dream. Only in a small way, mind you, applying makeup to maybe half the cast each night, but it's been enough to remind me how much fun I used to have doing theatre in high school.

My high school theatre career ended about eight years ago, and I've only missed it off and on since then. I most certainly have been missing it when I volunteered to do makeup, because I had obviously forgotten how much time it required to do anything having to do with the theatre.

In just one week, I've lost sleep, missed class time, and not gotten a lot of my usual evening work done, so I certainly can't imagine what the rest of the cast and crew, who have been working since the beginning of the semester, have had to put into it. I really have to take my hat off to those who can devote that much time to something. Hopefully a lot of people on campus managed to make it to the show and see the fruit of all their hard work.

The cast and crew of A Midsummer Night's Dream has brought that kind of devotion to mind, but I know the theatre program is not the only one who exhibits it. NSU's athletes, student governments, and many of the members of clubs and organizations (and I can't forget my newspaper staff, several of whom practically live in the office with me) really put a lot of effort into making the campus an interesting place.

Sincerely,

Alisha VanHoose

A Fly on the Wall: No Excitement

By Paul Sanaux
Managing Editor

It seems that the NSUSGA has fallen on some slow times, and luckily not so tough times, as of late. The last two meetings have seen a minimal amount of legislation from the clubs and organizations, and so the SGA has been at a loss of topics to discuss for the most part. Where are you, clubs and orgs? Why are you not trying to suck the SGA's funds dry? While I doubt the student body has gone quietly into the night, it appears that it is a slow season for events. But of course when there is a down there must be an up--I just fear the uprising, when the clubs return with a ravenous vengeance. The clubs sometimes displays a mob mentality: when a bunch of clubs start holding events the others follow. Naturally, panic grips me when I think of it. I can't forget my newspaper staff, and many of the members of clubs and organizations. Where are you, clubs and orgs?

The first of the only two pieces of legislation presented was a Pre-Dental Society bill for a wax carving workshop. And what a bill it was! In the future when I am grey, bearded, and riddled with arthritis I will speak to my grandchildren about one of the most disorganized bills ever written and I will speak, with trembling, ancient lips, about the Pre-Dental Society bill. And the young 'uns will be aghast. Here's why: the bill was requesting funds for the purchase of wax and carving tool kits, but the club representative was not informed as to the actual number of kits required.

Treasurer Alex Mitrami made an excellent point and posed an equally excellent question: the SGA funded a similar workshop last year, so were the tools being reapplied this year? To this, the representative answered affirmatively, but also admitted he was unsure of how many were still in possession of the club. The higher-ups of the Pre-Dental Society assumed that since the organizations membership was larger that more kits would be needed. But, as SGA Advisor Gary Gershman put it, the club did not know whether they needed five kits or thirty. Close to that moment, I almost swooned from shock when Residential Senator Ezra Mills, apparently in a non-sense mood, moved to pass the bill in full. Luckily the motion failed and was tabled until after the next bill when rep could find more info about the kits. The bill returned later in the meeting, during which the rep informed the Senate that the president said the kits were in possession and they would not require new ones. The bill then passed unanimously. Hip-hip hooray!

Now, when I tell my young 'uns of the wonderful bills that graced the SGA, I will be sure to mention the Alpha Phi Omega National Conference Bill. Wait... I'll just mention that organization in general because they seem to always do their homework when it comes to bill writing. While other organizations' bills for conferences usually stumble due to some unforeseen discrepancy, APO's flew magnificently. As Commie Senator Robert Keever pointed out, APO invested money that they were asking for because of their successful fundraising events. That is definitely a one-up in the SGA world, and in the real world, the amount of funds requested should generally not exceed the amount

Please See FLY
Page 18

"To Feel Appreciated"

Some of them signed up. Some had no choice. Some of them saw their friends die. Some thought they would die of boredom. But when I asked one yesterday what he would want this Saturday, he said, "To feel appreciated."

What's this Saturday? In the United States, it's Veterans Day. A veteran is defined as a person who has served in the armed forces. It could be man or woman, in combat or not, during time of war or peace. The main thing is veterans spent a period of their lives in the role of protector and defender of the nation. And they just want to feel appreciated.

Imagine being in a situation where you don't have control over where you are, what you do, or when you do it. Imagine being separated from your family and friends and not being free to pick up and visit them when you feel lonely or homesick. And those are the costliest aspects of your job! There may be times when you are exhausted, despairing, disgusted, or terrified. I can't even imagine. It must be a time that is spiritually challenging—testing, strengthening, or transforming your faith.

I know many of us have strong feelings against warfare, and fierce opinions about the war in Iraq or even the Vietnam War. That's good. It's important that we think deeply about these issues related to our nation's choices and actions in the world. But are we willing to put our lives on the line for our nation? Some people are, whatever the various factors that may have led them into the armed forces. And they just want to feel appreciated.

So how do we show appreciation to our veterans, not just on Veterans Day but any day? I don't think I have a good answer for this. What do you think? I heard recently that for months now at the Dallas airport, volunteers from all different backgrounds and religious and political affiliations meet every single plane coming in with servicemen and women in order to embrace them and thank them. That's powerful. For me, I try to remember to say, "Thank you for your service" when I learn someone is a veteran. We honor those who lost their lives in the service on Memorial Day. I'm glad there's a day to honor those we still have with us, so we can let them know they are appreciated.

Robin Cooper
G.A. for Multicultural and Special Affairs
robin cooper@nsu.nova.edu
954-262-7253
John Kerry: The Anti-American
By Tanya Parnes
Staff Writer

During a recent speech delivered to students at Pasadena City College in California, Senator John F. Kerry, D-Ma., uttered a line that has sparked anger throughout the country.

"We're here to talk about education but I want to say something," the senator began. "If you make the most of it and you study hard and you do your homework and you make an effort to be smart, you can do well. And if you don't, you get stuck in Iraq."

When questioned about his comment, Kerry said that it was a "botched joke" aimed at criticizing President Bush and his administration's policies on Iraq and not an insult directed towards the military.

According to a report by the Associated Press, Kerry's immediate response was, "I apologize to no one for my criticism of the president and his broken policy." Kerry initially refused to apologize to the troops and said that it was ridiculous to believe that he would criticize over 140,000 soldiers when he is a veteran himself.

Many across the country were outraged over the Senator's comments. Senator Kerry's remarks were spiteful, malicious and absolutely unjustified. He implied that the members of the U.S. military were uneducated, ignorant, and forced to fight in this war because their low IQ's would not allow them to find work elsewhere.

These hateful comments are reminiscent of some other choice words Kerry used to describe his fellow comrades during his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in 1971 after returning from Vietnam.

During this unforgettable speech Kerry testified that he had heard stories about how veterans had raped and brutalized civilians, as well as "generally ravaged the countryside of South Vietnam." The situation today is much different from the Vietnam era but Kerry's criticism of the U.S. military remains the same.

Kerry's comments were tasteless even if they were meant in jest. Apparently the senator is the only person who seemed to understand the punch line.

He has been criticized by members from both political parties. Tennessee Representative Harold Ford Jr., a democrat, was the first to come forward. "Whatever the intent, Senator Kerry was wrong to say what he said. He needs to apologize to our troops." White House Press Secretary Tony Snow joked with the media at a press conference following the incident, when he said, "we're throwing you a lifetime, buddy; just say you're sorry. It's not hard."

The Department of Defense reacted by releasing troop education statistics. They reported that 97.5 percent of the commissioned officers graduated college, 28.6 percent of the warrant officers graduated college and 82.9 percent of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps completed some college. Their statistics also showed that 99 percent of those enlisted in the military graduated from high school.

These students had other options, but chose to join the army instead. They chose to defend this country and to stand up to the terrorists abroad.

Kerry finally did offer an apology days later. "As a combat veteran I want to make it clear to anyone in uniform... my poorly stated joke at a rally was not about, and never intended to refer to any troop. I sincerely regret that my words were misinterpreted...and I personally apologize to any service member, family member, or American who was offended."

The senator stood by his criticism of the president and insisted that his "joke" was geared towards Bush alone. He feels that the Republicans have blown the issue out of proportion and have used it as a means to detract Americans from the truth about the war in Iraq. Kerry has cancelled his political trips to Pennsylvania and Minnesota and has decided to go back to D.C. because he does not want to be a distraction in this election.

"It didn't sound like a joke to me...more important it didn't sound like a joke to the troops," President Bush told the Associated Press. I don't think that I could have said it better myself. There was nothing even remotely funny about what Senator Kerry said to those students in California. The only laughable thing is his so-called apology, which was at best a poor attempt to soothe the minds and hearts of the American people.

Regardless of what Kerry meant to say, the underlying meaning was loud and clear. Kerry is against the war in Iraq and therefore against everyone who supports that war, including the U.S. soldiers who risk their lives every day defending this nation from the evils abroad. Kerry is an absolute disgrace to his state, to his fellow veterans, and to this country.
"Who would you like to see at the next Life 101: Question and Answer session?"

Christopher Barrett
Business Administration
Sophomore
Ft. Lauderdale

Alonzo Mourning; the center for the Miami Heat. This man has been through a lot in his career. He overcame a kidney ailment and he also has charities that give back to the community across southern Florida.

Yullyza Bouza
Biology Sophomore
Miami

Oprah because she is very successful and motivating.

Matthew Flack
Business Administration Sophomore
Boynton Beach

I would like to see Kat Williams, AKA Money Mike because he's hilarious and at the same time he's real.

Andres Rodriguez
Business Administration Senior
Cumana, Venezuela

Steven Spielberg, Quentin Tarantino, Bill Gates

Melissa Tovar
Psychology/Legal Studies Freshman
Miami

Angelina Jolie.

Jacqueline Carrion
Biology Freshman
South Jersey

My Chemical Romance Their music is an inspiration to me at the moment and it helps me with college life.

Derek Sham
Biology Pre-Med Junior
Ottawa, Canada

I would like to see Stan Lee because of his influence on the movie industry by allowing "MARVEL" production to happen, such as X-Men and Fantastic Four.

Jennifer Lash
Biology Sophomore

Sylvia A. Earl, 'cause she wrote The Oceans.
The Eye Institute
NSU College of Optometry

Trust Your Eye Care To The Team That Teaches It

- Eye Examinations
- Contact Lenses
- Emergency Eye Care
- Large Selection of Designer Frames
- Prescription Sunglasses
- Protective Sports Eyewear

NSU NOVA SOUTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY
Beyond the Classroom

Davie
Ziff Health Care Center
3200 S. University Drive
(954) 262-4200

Ft. Lauderdale
NBHD Specialty Care
1111 W. Broward Blvd.
(954) 525-1351

North Miami Beach
NSU Health Care Center
1750 N.E. 167th Street
(954) 262-4200

Student Discount
25% OFF
All Frames and Lenses
10% OFF
All Contact Lenses
(Must present valid Student I.D. Card)
Not Valid with other discounts or Value Line

20% OFF
Prescription Lenses & Frame Purchase
(Value Line Excluded)
Offer Expires 12/30/06

20% OFF
ALL Designer Sunglasses
With this coupon
Offer Expires 12/30/06