Drag Queens and Fairies, a Halloween Tale...

By Caroline Cullen

On the eve of October 29, NSU’s Gay Straight Student Alliance (GSSA), along with the National Pan Hellenic Council (NPC), hosted a Halloween bash.

Radio X DJ Esther Fortune kept the music pumping while costumed students and faculty got their grooves on. There were nuns, fairies, hula girls, and more. Spooky Halloween decorations dressed the room while the movie Nosferatu was projected on a wall, adding to the ambiance. The hosts also provided complimentary goodies and refreshments for their guests.

The entertainment began with Resident Advisor Erin Cropper performing a number from the hit musical Chicago. The highlight of the evening was a first for NSU. Two renowned South Florida drag queens, Justice Royal and Savanna Deville, made a guest appearance at the party and graced attendees with a dazzling performance. “It is great to open people up to drag shows,” said Senator of Athletics Danielle Garcia. Royal and Deville had some competition with “Dr. Williamina Hammack,” who was decked out as an alluring blond graduate. “I am quite excited that these young people have managed to pull it off so well. Jason Peebles is doing a fabulous job and he makes an adorable nun,” said Hammack.

There were some definite gender benders in the group. Kappa Sigma President Yanick Kleyman, along with SGA Co-Senator Liz Harbaugh, dressed as “Gay Pride Fairies,” complete with tights, wings, and glitter. They won the “Best Couple” award in the costume contest. “We feel fabulous!” exclaimed Harbaugh. Secretary of the Nature Club Michael Marrow won the title “Best Gender Bender” of the evening. “This is a great Halloween event and it’s fun to dress up like a girl,” said Marrow. The “Most Original” recipient was the “evil gay geisha,” Senior Ken Kronstadt. Kronstadt joked, “I was here to get revenge for Hiroshima.”

The judges of the costume contest included Dr. Bob Seltzer, Dr. Kate Waites, Dr. William Hammack, and GSSA President Marie Cuneo, who also helped organize the event. “We are having a great time. It’s nice to be in a position where you can witness all of this creativity,” said GSSA Advisor Dr. Seltzer.

Students, faculty, and NSU organizations came out to show support and join in on the fun. “It is important to have an alliance with all of the organizations on campus,” said Vice President of the Nature Club Lauren Adamczyk.

The GSSA has more upcoming events in store for NSU, so check your Student Activities Calendar at www.sald.nova.edu and visit the GSSA website at www.nova.edu/gssa/

Dear NSU community,

As I walk up and down the stairs in the Parker Building on my way to and from class, my eyes often wander to the walls crowded with signs advertising events that are happening on campus. Some of these are fundraisers, while others are just fun events to let students socialize and/or try something new. Most of them, however, have one thing in common: free food.

I'm not complaining. Really. Free food is a good thing, as any college student in their right mind would agree. But is that what it takes to get students to attend events around here?

Apparently so.

Over the course of the past few semesters, I've had the opportunity to observe a number of events and gatherings. One thing I've noticed is that unless there's food involved, most of the people attending are a part of the club or organization that is sponsoring the event (and who knows? Maybe they have to be there). Even University or College sponsored events, like teach-ins, panels, and guest speakers, are often neglected — unless the speaker is as famous as Michael Phelps, James Earl Jones, or the Dalai Lama.

I realize that, being college students, we're all busy. College life can be hectic, after all. But these kinds of events are an integral part of the college experience, and your tuition is helping to pay for them. We may as well attend these events so that we can learn from them, be enlightened to something new, contribute to some good cause, or even just have a little fun.

Whether or not there's food.

Sincerely,

President George W. Bush defeated Senator John Kerry in a close Electoral College battle. CNN.com reported that Bush won 274 electoral votes to Kerry's 252, with two states, Iowa and New Mexico, still uncalled. Bush received 51 percent of the popular vote, with Kerry earning 48 percent. Two hundred and seventy electoral votes are needed to win the presidency.

The turning point in the election results came when Bush won Florida, which, in combination with other battleground states, was key to winning the Electoral College. Toward the early hours of November 3, an Ohio victory for either candidate would have won the presidency.

The Bush campaign declared victory in Ohio, but the Kerry campaign did not accept their claim since they believed another 250,000 provisional ballots may have tilted the approximately 100,000 vote margin in Kerry's favor. At about 11 a.m. on November 3, Kerry decided that he could not overcome the gap, and conceded to Bush.

Kerry's call to the president emphasized a need for unity in a heavily divided America, which he spoke of during his concession speech. "We talked about the danger of division in our country and the need -- the desperate need -- for unity, for finding the common ground, coming together. Today, I hope that we can begin the healing," The senator also took time to thank his supporters. "It was a privilege and a gift to spend two years traveling this country, coming to know so many of you," he said, adding, "I thank you from the bottom of my heart."

Bush later gave his acceptance speech, in which he thanked, supported, and echoed the senator's call for national unity. "Today I want to speak to every person who voted for my opponent: To make this nation stronger and better I will need your support, and I will work to earn it. I will do all I can to deserve your trust."

Bush's victory marks the end of one of the most negative election campaigns in recent years. It also closes an election with many surprises, such as Kerry's comeback from a large gap in the polls following the three debates, to the appearance of a new tape from Osama Bin Laden days before ballots were cast.

NSU Students Appalled by Local Weatherman’s Arrest

Channel 7's Bill Kamal caught in child sex sting

By Greg Kyriakakis
Staff Writer

Channel 7 meteorologist Bill Kamal was arrested in Fort Pierce on October 24 after setting up a meeting for sex with who he thought to be a fourteen year old boy over the Internet, according to Local10.com. The television personality arranged for the meeting to occur at a Fort Pierce convenience store, where he was taken into custody by police. Kamal later admitted to possessing child pornography, and police seized two of his computers during a search of his homes. He has been charged with a third-degree felony, which could amount to three years in jail.

Kamal has been a staple of television newscasts for nearly ten years, and his arrest comes as a shock to many community members, including those at NSU. “I think it’s disgusting,” said Sophomore Farheen Parvez. D.A., a junior, was “at a loss for words” over the news, but added that what Kamal did was “an atrocity.”

Other students, like freshman Jonathan Tyler, think that the three year jail time is not sufficient. “I think he should get more than three years,” he said, adding that authorities need to "get him some therapy."

Local10.com also reported that Kamal was immediately fired from his position at Channel 7 following his arrest. An NSU student agreed that this was the proper decision, given the nature of the crime. “There are many other great meteorologists who can replace him,” Parvez said.

Kamal was especially visible during the recent string of hurricanes that battered Florida, which makes his arrest even more shocking. The high profile arrest of Kamal also makes students like NSU Junior "Q" reflect on the unfortunate state of society. “The sad thing is, there are probably so many pedophiles out there."

Kamal is no stranger to run-ins with the law. The Miami Herald’s website, Herald.com reported. He was arrested in Fort Lauderdale last November for driving under the influence of alcohol. In 2000, he faced charges after crashing his car on Interstate 595; they were eventually reduced to reckless driving.

Effects of the Hurricane Season

While some people were worried about themselves and their belongings as South Florida experienced the threat of four hurricanes, Dr. Marcia Silver was worried about her students. She said that while driving to work one day, “I felt I was not in control of my classes, and I will work to earn it. I will do all I can to deserve your trust.”

Mastering Time

I recently graduated from high school, and college seemed to me like a whole new world. I expected my first semester at NSU to live up to what my “experienced” college friends had enlightened me to: “Rafia, college is so much fun! You don’t get any homework, you get to choose your classes, and the parties don’t stop!”

During my first semester, as I progressed through four challenging courses and tried to juggle two jobs, college life was not living up to my expectations. In my psychology class, daily readings were assigned. In math class, every other day a hundred problems were bestowed upon the class; of course, you didn’t have to turn them in, but if you wanted to pass the class it was wise to do them.

Two weeks into college, my life had turned into a living nightmare. Partying or classes in which there was no homework seemed unrealistic. As I thought about the three more years that awaited me, and the fact that classes would get more and more challenging, I began to think seriously. Soon, as I became more and more adjusted to college life, I began to view my classes with a new perspective. College could be fun, interesting, and loaded with parties only if you could make it that way. I posed the question to myself: How could I make it fun and exciting?

After two seconds, the thought of procrastination hit my mind. Maybe, if I could just manage my time better, my life would no longer be bitter. Maybe I needed to be the master of my time.

As first semester neared an end, so does my complaining and the complicated perspective I have about college. College is what you perceive it to be. It can be fun, challenging, and motivational—or totally the opposite.

In my case, learning time management made all the difference. I learned to appreciate college instead of regretting it.

Superior Medical Facility to be Built at NSU Main Campus
Promising joint venture with the North Broward Hospital District

By Nicolle Garber
Staff Writer

Men and women wearing suits and white lab coats gathered around a podium while a professional photographer took his time to achieve a perfect shot.

On October 27, at a press conference located in the Terry Building of NSU’s Health Professions Division (HPD), Ray Ferrero Jr., President of Nova Southeastern University, announced that NSU and the North Broward Hospital District (NBHD) will unite to construct a state-of-the-art “medical village” in the heart of NSU’s Main Campus. Among the well distinguished speakers were President Ferrero; Wil Trower, President and CEO of the North Hospital Broward District; Dr. Fred Lippman, Chancellor of the Hospital Professions Division and NSU; and J. Luis Rodriguez, NBHD Board of Commissioners.

This “evolution” in health care was born from a “dynamic and successful relationship” between NSU and the NBHD, said Trower. Ferrero acknowledged how the hospital will be “directly connected to the residents of Broward,” and also how this medical village will be “unmatched anywhere.” Described as “the next step” by Ferrero, as a “one of a kind opportunity” by Trower, and a “smart hospital” (technology-wise) by Dr. Lippman, the medical village will far surpass the medical facilities present now. It is projected to be finished around 2008.

Essentially, the medical village, which will be located within NSU’s forthcoming Academical Village, will be a place where students and faculty can interact frequently to enhance their medical studies in an atmosphere of opportunity and high-quality technology. The facility is expected to include renowned medical experts and will be a general hospital available to residents of Broward County, as well as an exceptional environment for NSU students to work and study.

However, not all are thrilled about the prospect of building a new medical facility. It is unknown whether there will be competition between rivaling hospitals, since all are within a few miles of each other. A few people at the conference were opposed to such a project. “How will other hospitals be affected? Do you think there will be competition?” one reporter asked. It seems that there is perhaps more concern over the construction of such a facility than joy over its possibilities and future accomplishments.

Nevertheless, there is great potential for helping more residents in the Broward County region, and helping people is the main idea in this situation.

Fifth Annual Humanitarian of the Year Award Honors Linda A. Gill
NSU Board of Trustees member, distinguished for her service and dedication to South Florida’s community

By Jennifer Nelson
Visual Design Assistant

Each year, the Center for Psychological Studies at NSU hosts a prestigious award ceremony known as the Humanitarian of the Year Award. This award is presented to those who have provided exemplary service and dedication to areas including education, healthcare, welfare, and public safety. On October 27, the ceremony, which was held at the Fort Lauderdale Marriott Harbor Beach Resort & Spa, honored Linda Gill, a member of NSU’s Board of Trustees.

Gill, president and CEO of Gill Hotel Company, has been involved with various charities and organizations, including the Boys and Girls Club. She is a successful and well-respected businessperson who had a room full of friends and colleagues, including NSU president Ray Ferrero, Jr., gathered to support and congratulate her.

President Ferrero described her as a philanthropic person who is dedicated to serving the community. Doreen Groenwold, an Interior Designer from one of Gill’s hotels, the Sheraton Yankee Clipper, said, “She’s a good business person, and a truly great person to work with.” Chris Pollack, President of the Greater Fort Lauderdale Chamber of Commerce, described her as a person with a good heart.

The evidence of the construction of the new University Center is clear around campus. Roads and walkways are fenced off, trees are cut down, and vital parking spaces are now the grounds of unauthorized territory full of debris, bulldozers, and trailers.

What does this mean for the drivers here at NSU? A significant number of parking spots are unavailable due to this construction, creating an undeniable shortage of spaces on campus to park. This means the parking spaces left that surround the residence halls, the Athletics and Student Affairs (ASA) Building, and the Rosenthal Building are now battlefields full of drivers toiling to park their cars. Since the Rosenthal parking lot is now off limits, the ASA lot is the primary parking area for popular Rosenthal destinations, such as the bookstore, the cafeteria, and the Flight Deck.

Naomi Rodriguez, who works in Student Affairs in the Rosenthal Building said, “I’ll walk into work 10 minutes late in the morning, because I would have to sit in my car and wait for someone to leave so I can get their spot. I hate when that happens.”

Since a small lot now serves as parking for these two busy buildings, it is a chore to find a space. In their frustration, many students create their own parking spots. For instance, at the ASA Building, cars are often parked on the grass or in the pedestrian walkway. This parking area serves as the main place for students and employees going to ASA and Rosenthal.

Students who work in any part of Rosenthal or ASA are lucky to find a spot nearby. They oftentimes have no choice but to park by the Mailman Building and walk. GC Espinoza, who works in the Flight Deck, looks to the future and thinks positively: “Ever since they started the construction, parking has been an inconvenience, but if you think about it, we’ll have the new building. Maybe when we’re alumni we would be able to use it.”

Students who live in the Founders, Vettel, and Farquhar residence halls are also at war to park. At least 16 spots are now the site of construction workers’ trailers. At night, the cars of residents of these three buildings spill over into CLC’s parking lot. Annoyed resident Nicola Turner said, “It is annoying late in the night when you have to park all the way on the other side, especially if you have groceries…. By the time you take your groceries up to your room, the empty spots are gone.”

Administration asks for “patience and tolerance during construction,” as written in a memo to students faculty and staff. However, many drivers’ patience is running short as the campus becomes a chaotic battlefield for parking spots.

Silly Ashley: The Joke is on You

The latest celebrity sibling to capitalize off of her famous familial tie is none other than brassy Ashley Simpson. With the first season of her reality show wrapped and a mildly entertaining record out, Simpson should be on top of the world. However, Simpson learned on Saturday Night Live that the world is a scary place when the sound crew exposes your flaws and Daddy cannot fix it.

Simpson’s first single, “Pieces of Me,” was the first track performed in the NBC studio and was executed seemingly flawlessly. This song always irritates me, because in it Simpson asks: “Am I that obvious, or is it written on my face?” I’d love to break the news to her. Yes doll, you are just that obvious.

Flash forward to dreamy Jude Law introducing Simpson for her second performance. The house lights go down, and the stage lights go up. As the band begins to play the first notes, a recording of the echoing and empty Simpson can be heard over the band. The two problems with this: she just sang the very same song, and the words were not coming out of her mouth.

In a panic, Simpson begins to look around for some direction. With her father nowhere in sight, and the band playing on, Simpson thinks fast. She decides to start skipping around the stage with a flighty look of wonderment. Within a few measures, Simpson skips off of the stage like a true pixie punk.

Here is where it really begins to get ugly. SNL’s standard goodbye to the crowd included Law and Simpson explaining the erratic nature of live television. At the end of this explanation, Simpson blames the musical mix-up on her band playing the wrong song. The show is left with a shrug of the shoulders and a stupefied look on Simpson’s face.

Now, I understand that Simpson is not the next Diana Ross, or even close to being a Supreme, although I think I might be expecting too much sophistication from a teenager whose role model is Courtney Love. Maybe NBC can do an “Apprentice”-like show, where Simpson follows Love around to courthouses all over the continental US.

The point is that Simpson does not have the ability to survive Hollywood without the name recognition of her sister and the management skills of her father. Simpson never sounds good unless she has thousands of dollars worth of recording equipment to accompany her. Sometimes even this fails her.

Simpson has a problem taking responsibility for her actions and is incapable of spontaneous decision. She spends all of her time and energy creating a “harder than most” persona. Simpson realizes on SNL that her tough image is comprised of nothing more than some well-mixed brunette hair dye, tattered jeans, and everything else her paid entourage has given her.

October is recognized nation-ally as Domestic Violence Awareness month, and NSU has promoted prevention of this social travesty in a variety of expressive ways. The second annual “From the Dark and Quiet Places,” an evening of poetry, music, and spoken word, was hosted at the Flight Deck on October 26. Slam poetry competitors Anthony F. Pepe and D. Tobi Morgenstein illustrated that domestic violence has more than just a female face.

“It is about any crime against innocence,” Pepe shared solemnly with the crowd. “It is taking the trust of someone that doesn't deserve to be hurt.”

The evening’s main performers were a spectrum away from the stereotypical image of domestic violence victims. With tattoos, body piercing, and intense rage, these skilled speakers offered a glimpse into the sense of helplessness that the violated often experienced. This skilled speakers shared pieces from their upcoming book of prose and poetry: That Defines the Light.

“THIS is not a problem for one person or one gender,” Bryant Smalley, ASAP Chair and founder said. “IT is a problem that affects us all.”

Proceeds from the event, which included donations at the door and raffle ticket sales, are being used to directly benefit local victims of these terrible crimes. Last year, “From the Dark and Quiet Places” raised over $800 dollars for this noble cause. This October’s performance allowed attendees to experience this indescribable pain to find an outlet for connection and to know that they are not alone.

“This is an ‘in your face’ event,” Tanner House, Advocacy Chair for ASAP said. “The goal is to raise awareness to the campus community.

The night was hosted by The Domestic Violence Institute, Feminist Alliance for Networking and Support (FANS), Social Action Social Awareness (SASA), Student Counseling Services, and the Advocates for Sexual Assault Prevention (ASAP).

Virgins: pure, naive, untainted little delicacies, and every boy’s dream.

Some peoples’ choice to preserve their virtue is motivated by religion, while for others it is a personal set of moral values to which they choose to adhere. Regardless of one’s personal convictions, it seems to be unclear what exactly qualifies as a virgin. For example, my grandmother raised me to believe that my vagina was a “sacred temple” and it was my duty to protect this “temple” from any invasions, thus maintaining my virgin-hood.

According to the Merriam-Webster’s Dictionary, the definition of a virgin is “one who has not had sexual intercourse.” Now, what is considered sexual intercourse? Webster’s says that intercourse is “heterosexual intercourse involving penetration of the vagina by the penis, (coitus) and intercourse involving genital contact between individuals other than penetration of the vagina from the penis.” What exactly qualifies as “genital contact”? Does it mean that the genitals must touch each other or that the genitals need only touch the individual? The answer to this question makes all the difference.

The Society for Human Sexuality states that in sexual intercourse, “the connection is usually defined as being between two people. It is erroneously restricted to putting the penis into the vagina (or anus) or the vagina (or anus) onto the penis (penovaginal or penoanal intercourse, respectively).” These definitions of sexual intercourse lead me to believe that a penis penetrating either a vagina and/or an anus will result in the loss of one’s virginity. So it looks to me that a variety of naughty little sex acts will not affect one’s claim to virgin-hood.

With the technical definitions out of the way, let’s turn to the moral aspect of virginity. I respect that an individual creates his or her own set of morals to live by, and through observing conversations on the subject it is obvious that opinions vary drastically. Some believe that a girl is a virgin until her hymen is broken. That means that a bona-fide virgin can participate in all kinds of sexual acts as long as she protects her hymen. What if you indulge in penetration and the hymen stays intact? Then is she still a virgin? I’m not buying that theory. Now, the definitions above claim genitalia penetrating in one’s “front or back” is considered sexual intercourse. Does that mean that if a woman has only participated in anal sex than she is no longer a virgin? The most common controversy concerns those self-proclaimed virgins who consistently participate in various forms of sex (use your imagination) and get to keep the title of virgin.

Regardless of what books or doctors might say, people will always have their own ideas and opinions. Who cares what other people think? You’re a virgin, big whoop! That’s not what is important. Having self-respect and using good judgment is more important than being a virgin. Follow your heart and use your mind. We all know when we are fooling ourselves, like it or not. Luckily, we live in a society that allows us to think freely, so do what feels right for you. If you want to wait for a special person or the perfect moment, good luck. If you are curious and want to experiment, go for it, but be smart and careful. Don’t ever allow others’ judgments determine your self-worth. You have a brain — use it!
Movie Review
Gripped by a Powerful Fright- Until You Leave the

By Alaina Siminovsky
Arts and Entertainment Editor

The Grudge seized number one in the box office when it opened on October 22. Clearly, movie-goers in search of an early Halloween scare were seduced into theaters by the hype created by the film’s commercials. The movie did indeed deliver the fright it promised – and then some – but, try as it might, the film’s scare tactics could not overshadow the flawed storyline.

To create confusion, the film opens with a suicide and then shifts its focus to a young girl, Yoko, who is riding a bike. She pulls up to a house where she cares for a catatonic older woman, Emma. A strange sound lures Yoko into some abandoned upstairs rooms of the house, where she encounters an unidentified force and disappears into a dark attic. Murmurs and squelched screams rippled through the audience when Yoko disappears. The rest of the film’s tactics of fright are along the same lines, and for those who have seen The Ring, they will be very familiar.

After Yoko’s disappearance, Karen (Gellar) enters the scene. Karen, an American college student, studies with her boyfriend, Jason Behr, in Japan. To pass the time, she interns at the local care center. With Yoko gone, Karen is assigned to take over her duties at the mysterious house. While Karen is cleaning and caring for Emma, the same strange sound that lured Yoko upstairs calls to her. She ascends the stairs to an abandoned room, where she encounters a young boy hidden in a taped-up closet. She returns downstairs and tries to speak to Emma when a dark entity enters the room, scaring Emma to death and Karen into a paralyzed state.

What is it? Where does it come from? What’s going on?

Confusion and fear also paralyze the audience, who has not been armed with any inkling about what is occurring in the film. A split in time is used to provide some of the necessary information, but this also adds slow development of the movie. The audience is transported back in time to when Emma’s family buys the house – but the curse is already there. It will take quite some time to find out what happened at the house, and even this is anticlimactic.

The split in time occurs quite often in the film. At one point, Emma’s daughter leaves a message on the machine; several scenes later, the film returns to that point in time when she makes the call and follows her. The most confusing use of time-splitting is at the end when Karen rushes off to the house to save her boyfriend who has gone there looking for her. When she walks into the house she is transported back in time to the night when the original murder/suicide occurred.

While The Grudge does deliver on its promise to scare viewers, those who see the film will question why when the lights come back on in the theater. Most viewers will realize how slow the film’s story developed and that some things just do not add up. The Grudge cannot take its place as this season’s Halloween masterpiece, but does pack a punch full of fright.

Advertisements: Simply Manipulation in Communication

Over the past few months, you have been unable to turn on the television without being bombarded with political advertisements. In truth, this is no different from the average television-watching experience. Think about it. Commercials always dominate the airwaves; only they usually champion products instead of political rhetoric. What is used in these commercials is simply the art of manipulation in communication.

Broadcast media is not the only place where advertisements rule. The print media has been riddled with advertisements for years. While flip through magazines or newspapers, sometimes readers often find beautiful women or men posing with products. Sometimes the ad is for products instead of political rhetoric. The political commercials that one to pause and consider that not only advertisers are using manipulation, but television stations as well.

To aggravate the issue of the manipulative content of these ads, some television stations have, either on purpose or accidentally, spliced parts of the presidential candidates’ commercials into other commercials. On October 27, one of George W. Bush’s commercials began to appear on a local CBS news channel. The president’s endorsement for the commercial ran and then the station cut directly to one of Betty Castor’s commercials for the United States House of Representatives. It certainly seemed like the president was endorsing Castor in her race for the House. This is simply not the case, but does cause one to pause and consider that not only advertisers are using manipulation, but television stations as well.

In an era when most of our information comes from the television, this manipulation in communication simply will not do. While political candidates offer themselves as products for consumption, it is up to the voter/consumer to make sense of the often exaggerated rhetoric that they encounter in debates, speeches, and advertisements.

Now, with the election over, television viewing may return to normal, meaning instead of political advertisements, we can return to simply seeing those for products. But manipulation in communication will still exist. Look out for it, not only on television but in your everyday communication.
In the case of Morin’s example, these occurrences or personalities of today’s political sphere. “I am not partisan. I am not fair,” Morin said of his subject’s personality. “I am not fair, but Morin feels his representation forms “what he [the personality] looks like in my mind.” The caricature of Bush may not look exactly like him, but Morin feels his depiction is accurate, based on his perception of Bush’s personality. He draws a number of other politicians, including Dick Cheney, Ralph Nader, and John Kerry, who he said is “a lot of fun to do.” Cartoonsing comes with controversy, and Morin has had his fair share. More to be said about the process of cartooning and less about politics. Morin, who has been on staff at The Herald since 1978, is a syndicated cartoonist. He has received the 1996 Berrymen Award from the National Press Foundation and was a Pulitzer Prize finalist in both 1977 and 1990. In addition, Morin has a number of books of his cartoons published.

Exciting arguments and heated debates occurred at last week’s SGA meeting. Students from the Pan-African Student Association and the Caribbean Student Association are currently trying to start an African-American Sorority. The problem? The sorority would not be represented in the National Pan-Hellenic Council, the governing body of the sororities at NSU. Their sorority is in a different national governing body. The same thing is currently happening with a fraternal colony. Kappa Sigma is currently represented by the IOC clubs and organizations Senator. Since Kappa Sigma is not in Interfraternity Council, the Fraternal Senator does not represent them at SGA. We at Student Government have voted and are trying to pass a referendum (a change in the constitution) to restructure the way clubs, organizations, sororities, and fraternities are represented. If the following legislation is passed by the student body, the Sorority Senator will represent all NSU recognized sororities, and the Fraternity Senator will represent all social fraternities, regardless of the national governing body. The referendum was passed in the SGA. Now it is up to you, the students, to vote and tell us how you feel! Stay tuned to see how the votes go.

Also, please help us welcome our new Senate Secretary GC Espinoza. GC was voted in this past Monday.

The following legislation was passed at the November 1, 2004, meeting:

Referendum: 01-1101-04, sponsored by: Non-Traditional Senator Jason Peebles and Recognized Sorority Senator Ashley Richie

A REFERENDUM TO BE ENTITLED: IFC Senator to Fraternity Senator

The constitution of the Student Government Association titles the Fraternal Senator as the “IFC Senator.” The Club’s and Organizational Senator represents all clubs and organizations. Therefore, the “IFC Senator” shall be renamed to “Fraternity Senator,” and this will be changed in the Nova Southeastern University’s Student Government Association’s Constitution. The Fraternity Senator will be voted into office by all of the recognized social fraternities of Nova Southeastern University, regardless of national governing body. This legislation will not come into effect until voting for next year’s (2005-2006) Student Senate.

The following is how your Senators voted on Referendum: 01-1101-04 entitled IFC Senator to Fraternity Senator:

President Tommy Gillette – Present
VPL Dane Johnson – Present
VPJ Laura Guevara – Absent
Public Relations Mary Nockimson – Present
CED Vanessa Mezquia – Present
Exec. Secretary Steve Hernandez – Absent
NPC Ashley Richie – Present
IFC Neil Mayer – Present
Commuter Senator Andrew Barry – Present
Commuter Senator Davia McDonald – Present
Commuter Senator Julie Testa – Present
Minority Senator Fahad Islam – Absent
Minority Senator Giselle Gaviria – Present
Non-Traditional Senator Jason Peebles – Present
IOC Liz Harbaugh – Present
Residential Senator Lisa Soave – Present
Athletic Senator Eric Naples – Present
Athletic Senator Danielle Garcia – Absent
Freshman Brittine Tribble – Present
Freshman Furmanski – Present
Senate Secretary GC Espinoza - Present

The rest of the legislation voted on was:

Bills:

Knights of the Kitchen Table, sponsored by Commuter Davia McDonald. Approved for $318.52.

The meeting time has been changed again. Please note that our new meeting time is at 7 p.m. on Mondays. The meetings will still be held in the Goodwin Classroom. The Goodwin Classroom is located on the first floor of the Goodwin Senior Residence Hall, also known as the Goodwin Dorms. Please come and voice your concerns! The #13 ranked Nova Southeastern University Men's soccer team (13-3-1, 5-2-1 SSC) closed out its 2004 regular season on October 31 with a 7-1 win over visiting Florida Tech (4-10-1, 0-8 SSC) at the NSU Soccer Complex.

The Knights scored seven unanswered goals to overturn a 1-0 deficit and end the regular season with its eighth win in the last nine matches. They also finished second in the Sunshine State Conference and will now host seventh-seeded Tampa on Tuesday, November 2 at 7 p.m. in the first round of the SSC Tournament.

NSU midfielder junior Matt Parry spearheaded the Knights rally as he scored his first career hat trick in the sixty-first minute when a free kick from midfielder Gerardo Valerio was thirty-fifth minute when a free kick by Chris Pruden. How-ever, NSU answered back quickly just two minutes later, as Ludden headed in a cross from Joe Clancy past Panthers goalkeeper Ashley Foster.

NSU jumped in front for good in the sixtieth minute when Ludden smashed home a rebound from a Rasmus Jespersen shot for what proved to be Ludden’s sixth game-winning goal of the year. The goal was the first of six scored by the Knights in a 20-minute span.

Parry scored two goals in the space of 18-seconds in the sixtieth minute, begin-ning with his third penalty of the year for a 3-1 NSU lead. Then straight from the kick-off Parry was sent behind the defense on a through ball from Jespersen, and calmly chipped it over Foster for his second goal of the match.

NSU striker Paulo Ribeiro made it 5-1 in the seventy-third minute on an assist from Ludden before Parry completed the hat trick in the seventy-sixth minute on a free kick, which eluded Foster.

Knights sophomore Greg Kagan received a through pass from Arman Sarkisian and round-ed the ’keeper before slotting into the empty net for the game’s final goal in the eightieth minute.

The Curse of the Great Bambino is Finally Lifted

I think the worst year for the Red Sox came in 1986, when they came within a strike of winning the title in game six. “But then came Bob Stanley’s tying wild pitch and Mookie Wilson’s winning grounder through the legs of first baseman Bill Buckner in Game Six,” said Ronald Blum in his article at Foxsports.com.

So, with the trade, the Sox did not get back to the World Series until 1946. “In Boston’s first visit to the World Series since 1918, the Red Sox lost a decisive game seven to the Cardinals. Tied at three-all in the eighth inning, Enos Slaughter scored from first on Harry Walker’s double in the bottom half when shortstop Johnny Pesky hesitated with his relay throw,” stated Blum.

NSU Volleyball Falls to Rollins College 3-1

Dana Buss’ 13 kills not enough as Tars overcome seven-point deficit in game four to defeat Knights

By Eddie Kenny
Sports Information

The volleyball team (4-24, 1-10 SSC) fell 3-1 to Rollins College (18-11, 6-5 SSC) in a Sunshine State Conference match on the afternoon of October 31 at Warden Arena.

Rollins took control early in game one, opening up an 11-6 lead over the Knights. The Tars continued their momentum, as they fired off a ten-point rally and left NSU trailing by ten. The Knights jumped back to 19-10. NSU had a chance to seal the game at 29-19, but Rollins never gave up. The Knights scored five straight points and cut the lead to five. However, NSU held their edge and prevailed in the end for a 30-24 win in game two.

Game three was a tight battle until Rollins sparked a seven-point rally and forged ahead with a 16-9 advantage. The Knights put up a fight as they came within three points of the Tars, but it wasn’t enough as Rollins came away with the 30-18 victory.

Both teams went head-to-head in game four, until Rollins broke away with a 14-9 advantage. The Knights’ lead slipped away when the Tars gained a seven-point lead and tied the game at 24-24. From that moment on the game was a nail-biter, as the lead changed with every point scored. Rollins finished off the game with a 30-28 win and took the match 3-1 over the NSU.

Dana Buss led the Knights with 13 kills on the afternoon, while freshman ElisaButkus posted 11 kills and anchored the Knights with 11 digs defensively.

Allison North and Julia Caner led the Tars with 13 kills apiece, while Caner also notched 14 digs defensively.

Men’s and Women’s Cross Country Teams Finish Fourth At 2004 Sunshine State Conference Championships

By Alicia Winslett
Sports Editor

“Both the women’s and men’s cross country programs took a big step forward this season,” said Coach Bruce McTear. On October 25, the men’s and women’s cross country team competed in the 2004 Sunshine State Conference Championships.

Women’s Cross Country

Freshman Maria Cevallos stepped up and set a new school record in the 6k race. She finished with a time of 23:48.73 in twenty-third place.

The University of Tampa won their third consecutive conference championship with a total of 21 points. Florida Southern finished second with 144 points, followed by Barry University in third place with 210 points. The Knights placed 4th with 312 points.

Men’s Cross Country

The men’s cross country team also competed in the Sunshine State Conference. Brandon Petersen finished eighth place in the 8k race. He set a new school record, finishing with a time of 27:52.01.

For the eighth year in a row, Florida Southern took the title as conference champions. They finished with four of the top five finishers in the race, including the winner Tyrone Bell. FSC held a total of 16 points. Tampa finished second with 57 points, Florida Tech with 68 points, and NSU with 109 points.

“Ahead of us, UT is currently ranked tenth in the nation and FSC is ranked high in the nation. FIT was third place, but they can feel us coming! The team was completely new this season.”

NSU Women’s Soccer Team Closes Out Regular Season With 5-0 Loss to #7 Barry University

Knights unable to keep pace with Buccaneers; begin Sunshine State Conference tournament Tuesday

By Eddie Kenny
Sports Information

The Women’s soccer team (5-7-1, 2-5-1 SSC) closed out the 2004 regular season on October 29 with a 5-0 loss to #7 ranked Barry University (11-2-1, 7-0-0 SSC) at the NSU Soccer Complex.

Barry forward Emelie Karlson scored a pair of goals for the visiting Buccaneers, as they finished the year with an unbeaten record in the SSC (7-0-0). Bucs defender Mairead McLaughlin also had a goal and assist in the win.

NSU fell behind early when SSC top scorer Karlson headed in a corner kick from defender Ulla Markkainen in the ninth minute. McLaughlin then doubled the Barry advantage in the twenty-first minute, as she gathered a rebound from a defensive clearance and fired a shot which hit the underside of the bar and bounced across the goal line.

Buccaneer midfielder Shannon Miller made it 3-0 in the twentieth-sixth minute when she tapped in a feed from Rikke Norgaard. Defender Amy Tewis also picked up an assist on the play, and the score remained 3-0 at the half.

The Knights defended well in the second half, but were battling constant pressure from Barry, which eventually led to Karlson’s second goal in the eighty-fourth minute.

Barry’s Candice DeFreitas closed out the scoring in the ninetieth minute when she took a through ball from McLaughlin and managed to squeeze a shot across the face of goal from an acute angle, which hit the post and bounced in for the final goal.

NSU’s Varsity Four (20:00) boat finished as runner-up by just one-second to JU (19:59) in the Women’s 4+ Championship race.
