1-1-2014

For the Love of Dance

Rebecca J. Quinn
Nova Southeastern University

Follow this and additional works at: https://nsuworks.nova.edu/digressions
Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation
Quinn, Rebecca J. (2014) "For the Love of Dance," Digressions Literary Magazine: Vol. 11 , Article 18. Available at: https://nsuworks.nova.edu/digressions/vol11/iss1/18

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the CAHSS Journals at NSUWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in Digressions Literary Magazine by an authorized editor of NSUWorks. For more information, please contact nsuworks@nova.edu.
For the Love of Dance

Author Note
My poem came from a friend of a friend and an inspiring session in the dance studio.
I am a dancer.
I am a masochist.
The two are essentially
The same thing,
You know?
I fell in love with dance
And I gave my body to it
So I also fell in love with pain.
I am beaten.
I am bruised.
I bled.
I possess the scars.
All from one lover,
A sadist of the toughest form.
But not a sadist who leaves you
   Alone
   Crying in pain.
A sadist who stays while you’re hurt.
A lover who tends to your wounds.
Physically you’re hurt.
Physically you’re dying.
Sadist dance does not
   Tend to you physically.
   It can only harm your worldly essence.
But, if you dance,
   Your soul will be beautiful.
The sadist dance beats your body,
But the lover dance tends to your soul.