

April 2016

A Love Story in 100 Words

Grace Ducanis

Nova Southeastern University

Follow this and additional works at: <http://nsuworks.nova.edu/digressions>

Part of the Art and Design Commons, and the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Ducanis, Grace (2016) "A Love Story in 100 Words," Digressions Literary Magazine: Vol. 13, Article 27.

Available at: <http://nsuworks.nova.edu/digressions/vol13/iss1/27>

This Fiction is brought to you for free and open access by the CAHSS Journals at NSUWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in Digressions Literary Magazine by an authorized administrator of NSUWorks. For more information, please contact nsuworks@nova.edu.

A Love Story in 100 Words

Author Note

“I love stories in any form. I write because it’s the easiest way for me to tell a story. In a realistic perfect world I would have a career writing for a Christian magazine and publishing the series of novels I’ve been writing since I was fourteen, but I would also proofread medicine labels for a decent amount of money. I firmly believe that a little controversy is good for the soul.”

A Love Story in 100 Words

Grace Ducanis

She came late and left early. He was always there, which was what she loved most. She didn't talk to him, because talking cheapened love.

But such things. Oh, such things he said with his eyes! Their glances were infused with meaning. She didn't know what they meant. It didn't matter. His eyes did mean something.

She was cynical; it was impossible for one person to understand another. She didn't want to be understood.

No.

She wanted to be seen—to know that he noticed she was there, and would have noticed if she was gone.

Which, eventually, she was.