Editor’s Note

The inner landscape of a student is guaranteed to reveal something that the external hides. This is the beauty of Digressions, the literary magazine, a collection of the best written and visual works of NSU’s undergraduate and graduate students. The pre-med biology student with a penchant for prose is given a chance to be heard. The graduate business student with unique photographic vision is given a medium to share their talent. And the NSU community receives from this an even greater gift: the reassurance that they belong to an academic community full of beautiful minds. This year, we are thrilled to share with you a brooding, darkly magical, and truly unique volume. It is a representation of a year’s hard work and the contributions of many individuals.

Juanita, Nicole, and the entire editorial team, you have unparalleled patience, understanding, and kindness of heart. You volunteered to review your peers’ art, a monumentally subjective task, and I am so proud of our final compilation. You have impeccable taste. Emily, our barefoot Queen of Design. This magazine is your masterpiece, and there are hardly words to describe how confidently you undertook the entire layout process. Your patience is so appreciated, and the way you understand my plans and demands has been a godsend. Thank you for being you.

The contributors, you bravely offered up the secrets in your hearts and hoped for the best. Thank you for being receptive to our criticism and praise, and for being true to your passion for expression. Without your writing and art, Digressions could not exist, and there would be a void in NSU’s student life.

Dr. Kevin Dvorak, our benevolent overlord and guide. You give us the tools and the confidence to freely create, and in this time of change at NSU, I’ve never felt lost with you on our side. Thank you for entrusting me with Digressions this year, and for allowing me to embrace my identity as a writer. I will never forget. As you hand down the reigns, I hope you are proud of the standard you set and the legacy you’ve left.

Dr. Molly Scanlon, you have been an integral part of our process and I am so grateful for the support and inspiration we would have sorely missed without you. As you inherit Digressions, I hope it enriches your experiences at NSU as it has for all of us.

Dr. Tennille Shuster, you should be deeply proud of your design students and the rich projects they created for our cover contest. Thank you for guiding them. Kati Pyles, thank you for this year’s winning cover. You artfully captured the balance of science and art that is essential to many NSU students, and I am proud to be the editor of a magazine with such a beautiful face.

Ed and the entire PVA staff, thank you for lending your time, advice, and space. Michele from NSU Archives, thank you for your endless assistance. All of you gave our publication wings.

Michelle and Brian at bepress, you were indispensable to our new nsuworks site and we are grateful to have such flawless tech support as we bring Digressions into a new age. You were attentive to detail and so accommodating to my many requests, I can’t thank you enough.

Lastly, but not for lack of importance, the readers. Whether you are an NSU student, professor, proud mother, someone mildly interested in poetry, an aspiring writer, or bored with nothing else to flip through - thank you for picking up our magazine. The works within were meant for your eyes, because in poetry, fiction, and art, there is always a reminder that we are all the same. Fragile humans who cling to beauty wherever we can find it.

32 Contributor Notes
To err is to be human, for certain. Unjustly tethered to bodies, we are spirits yearning for a realm ungoverned by law and order. We mess up, mess around with our bodies, make a mess, and recklessly demand freedom of expression despite our tendency to harm ourselves and one another through words and action. But to be human is to be able to encapsulate in art the fleeting qualities of life that make it so precious, and this is perhaps the greatest redeeming quality of our species. We write memories of our mistakes, depict in paint the color of our sins, tell stories of our deepest regrets, and photograph the faces that reflect our own fragility. And from our art, we learn, we grow, we forgive, and witness the flowers bursting forth from our bones. The night melts into day, and life begins anew. In this 13th volume of Digressions, a star-crossed and inauspicious number, we are lucky to bare the shades of lust, vice, immorality, and imperfection that darken our souls, but also create a stark canvas for the starry dreams of perfection we will always chase.

“Virtue has a veil, vice a mask.”

Victor Hugo
Add in:
9 cups of doubt
A teaspoon of bitterness
A sprinkle of apathy
A sliver of self-deprecation
Too many stories about the greatness of a higher power 4 communion wafers
3 disappointing Christmases
1 and a half hours of Mass
1 lie in the form of a confirmation Salt.

My sacrilegiousness began the day
I snuck into a deserted chapel and stole a communion wafer from the dusty altar and let it melt on my tongue, dry and tasteless, no, it tasted like Nothing—a mixture of disappointment and confusion, bland and scratching my throat on its way down
A silent foreshadowing of my time to come
Inside the endless silent walls of endless silent chapels
Waiting for something to come save me from a life
That I never wanted to face up to
I don't believe in God and I don't believe in myself I wish there were something for me there, I wish I could speak in tongues and fall to the floor and understand why people can put so much faith into a pile of bricks but never in themselves
But every time I walk though the doors of any church, I feel Nothing No, not true; I feel bitter disappointment at both myself for wanting to believe in a dusty book and at the dusty book for letting me down
I feel slightly angry at blind ignorance, extremism and hatred cloaked as faith
I feel regret at having wanted to believe so blindly, I feel regret for not being able to,
I feel sadness because every time I walk into a church or see my grandmother pray a rosary for me,
I feel an empty gaping space inside my chest that no higher power can fill,
I feel empty and incomplete and I wish I could shovel in church blocks and build a cross of mortar on my soul, but the foundations are cracked, they've always been cracked

I still feel defective in some ways; what is missing inside of me that I cannot believe in golden chains and in silent chapels?
Do you believe you're missing out, and that everything good is happening somewhere else?
Well, Jesus Christ, I'm alone again,
So what did you do those three days that you were dead?
I have a feeling this problem will last longer than the weekend
Well, Jesus Christ, I'm not scared to die, I'm a little bit scared of what comes after Do I get the golden chariot—am I worthy, in the eyes of a greater good, in the arms of a Holy Ghost that continually haunts me?
I find true spirituality and inner peace in rain, in falling rain
I feel peace when violins play, in the quiet spaces between trees and my own breath in the early morning, in the soft skin at the back of my own neck,
In the brokenness of other people,
In the way that the sea kisses the shore for an eternity
I have found greater tastes on my tongue than those of a dusty communion wafer—
I have a body I wish I could eat as bread every day, ha.
I have swallowed up the sunshine of the laughter of my life as if it was holy blood,
And if I could stop the feeling of driving down a highway late at night with all the windows down and nothing but the wind rushing towards me, I would I have been to airports that have seen more sincere kisses than weddings
And I am sitting in a hospital that has seen more honest prayers than church pews,
More tears of mine than I can lay on pewter mortar
I think of eternal sunshine, I like being ephemeral, and I will watch my life through art museum window panes,
And someday, I will tour the churches of Italy again, and I will see more than stolen pasts inside the Vatican, I will absorb art and beauty in life, and I will find my own absolution, absolution!
And yet, I am not absolute, I have bitten from too many fallen apples and have trampled on the battlegrounds of scarlet seals and marble faces, and the gold plating on the vases of the Romans is the same gold that makes up the fake teeth of smiling sphinxes, I am, upon my own grace, a martyr.
I, I am not sure that I believe in the people, but the people still believe in me, and so, I will walk the road of morality and mortality and remember how temporary my breathing is, and how frail my bones will look when they, too, are dust.
I will fall on my knees before Degas and yet not before an altar, and I wonder what kind of person this makes me.
Death’s Epiphany

Kyle Boltson

I fear death for lack of faith.
Yet many times I have died in dreams, only to wake up and experience a greater reality.
Perhaps one day I will die, only to enter into a greater reality.

Heartless

Ezana Assefa

Home is where the heart is. I wonder where my heart is...
And if a home remains unknown, does that make me heartless?
The heart is where the home is. I wonder where my home is...
If my heart remains apart, am I considered homeless?
A home once was where my heart used to be A love-craved castle with fantasies as far as the eye can see
Trust and delight fortified every crack and seam
While hope and security formed every column and beam
What seemed to be an indestructible structure
Was destroyed with an unexpected internal rupture
We vigilantly defend the outer, forgetting tragedies strike from within We diligently focus upon the hour, forgetting they are composed of minutes Home is where the heart is. I wonder now where my heart is...
Since home, I am alone, wondering where my heart is.
It is departed.

She met him on a Friday in his car
Sipping Keystone beer hiding in the street
Lost in the ecstasy he seemed so far

Vibrating energy of youth and trust
Never before had he tasted so sweet
She met him on a Friday in his car

Excited to feel his hands on her bust
They filled the Chevy with strong breaths and heat
Lost in the ecstasy he seemed so far

Inflamed on edge as he began to thrust
Sticking together on the leather seat
She met him on a Friday in his car

Provoked he turned black from lust
Hands around her neck blind to the mistreat
Lost in the ecstasy he seemed so far

Violated by trickery and disgust
He pushed her out alone on the concrete
She met him on a Friday in his car
Lost in the ecstasy he seemed so far
Everything I Am Not Or May Never Be

Dymun Fengshui (Jonathan Back)

I may not be,
Where I want to end.
But I am in love,
With the moment that I am in.

I may not be,
Who I wish to become.
But I am proud,
Of me as I am young.

I may not be,
Where I could have been.
But upon looking back,
I wouldn't wish to begin again.

I may not be,
All I am capable of.
But for now,
I know that I am enough.

I may not be,
Accomplishing all I wish.
But desire comes and goes,
And sometimes it will switch.

I may never be,
Able to see all I imagine.
But my thoughts for today,
And tomorrow may not be matching.

I am who I am.
And for now,
That's all that I will be. I am fine with that.
I am happy with me.

Numb

Tory Njardvik

Stuck in this vicious cycle
Repetition and routine
My mind is numb
I can no longer feel the excitement
The alcohol, pills, and cocaine aren’t cutting it
They no longer take me high
Orgasms and vibrations no longer exist
Nothing but a runny nose
I am bored in this glass house
He finally comes home
I beg him to choke me
To pin me against the wall
And burn me with melted wax
Nothing
He lies on the bed exhausted
Covered in sweat
Annoyed, I go outside
He follows
Standing on the deck
Waves crash and beat against the rocks
Holding on to the railing
He stares at the moon
Triggered
I push him.
His scream gives me goose bumps
Finally
I can feel again
I run down our staircase that connects
Our home to the sand
Blood rushing between the sharp edges
Staining the shore
I can feel his heat
I can feel!
Fingers interlaced
Struggling to pull his heavy body
I cut into him
Coring him like an oyster
A trail of his body
Leads the way back home
Exhausted I lay down
Coming down from my fix
Arms strapped to my sides
I can’t move my legs
Belted in tight
Nothing on the walls
A room bleached and stale

Do Not Be Alarmed

Faren Rajkumar

Do not be alarmed by the diamonds that glare in the tangle of my hair.
Does it scare you that my words are sharper than broken glass and brighter than the sun of your Universe?
Do you tremble when I exhale a fine mess of dust that shimmers like the crushed stars in which my inner pieces swim?
Do not be alarmed by me, a planet, no longer light years away,
Close enough to shake the orbit of your Earth.
Embrace me, this satellite adrift covered in the powder of space and time.
I have seen the darkness, and I have set it ablaze.
Breathe in the gold that paints my being Empty your bottle and fill it with the air left silver-hued by my laugh.
I can fill your nights with flame.
I can teach you to speak loud and dream louder, to burden the stars with the weight of greater wishes and chase fear into eternity.
Because as I search for all that glitters,
That is what I become.
A Midday’s Contemplation

Ezana Assefa

Have you ever heard the sunrise?
Triumphant shouts that pierce the sky.

Vibrant colors illuminate the expanse
A new masterpiece of God's romance

The heavens painted with an array of hues
Each day, He creates everything anew

Depicting His majesty with the utmost solemnness
And showing His mercy through gracious providence

Have you ever heard the sunset?
Soothing cries that pacify all frets

Calming tones of glorious sights
As fleeting glows usher in the night

The space above is filled with His everlasting peace Occupying every sight the eye can see

And as His serenity displayed always endures
This cycle continues, He rests assured.

Hand of Glory - I Get Nervous
Alonzo Williams
Woman of God
Romartine Virgile

So you want me to tell you
She
Carries a tender voice
Slight melody
Words of grace
Oh femininity
Show the world what is means to be a woman?
Your daughters
Your mothers
Your sisters
Your wife
Are wondering
Is this that coming of age?
Wo-Man
Forever in a power struggle
Man pursued her womb
Ate of the forbidden fruit
Causing her own demise
The outcome left her rapped throughout time
Abused by men
Determined to use her tools
As slave trade
In search of what?
The cave of independence
Disrespect became her vice
An old proverb says
Stay away from the strange woman
She flatters with her lips
Seduction fills her eyes
Don't desire her beauty
She caters to the blind
Woman
Looking back
Left out of Sodom and Gomorrah
Judgment produced her death
Negatively portrayed throughout centuries Told to Stay at home
Be quiet
Just hide
Behind the showdown of men
Always in the background
That side chick
Prostitutes on 79th get a lot of attention though
Drug dealers looking for dimes
Use her body
Sell her goods
In exchange for her life
Her friend says
It's just an issue of blood
So
What's the solution?
Cover her head to toe
It's not her body
Female genital mutilation
Let's get rid of her womb

She is your property
Just tell your girl to stay silent!
Woman of God!
Don't you know that you're the daughter of our heavenly Father?
Find identity in God
Who
Spoke a word over woman that changed the course of her pregnancy
He created them
Male and Fe-Male
The image of God Almighty Tramples the reflection of Not being good enough
I need a dolled up face
Skinny waist
Hour glass hips
So much insecurity!
These were her birth pains
Signs of labor contracting throughout the word of God
It was a woman
Who chose what was good and everlasting
By sitting at the feet of her savior
She learns of his love for her
It was a woman
Blessed and highly favored
Who birthed through mother-hood
The greatest being to ever step this earth
Jesus
Loves the church
His father gave him
As... a... bride
He said
She was worth it to die
Rescuing her out of her pool of blood in Ezekiel
To deck her out with gold and silver
Fine linen
A wedding gown
The Gospel is good news to the woman
Jesus vows
Blessed are they who are called to the wedding supper of the lamb!
Come be a witness to the beauty of a wife's submission
Now, Solomon mentions
A woman's every body part is to be respected!
So men
Don't open her love before time!
The Glory of her Husband
You may desire her body but he will love her ways
A woman is described as Wisdom personified
In Proverbs 31
Who can find this virtuous one?
Her worth is beyond rubies
Recall Sarah's gentle spirit to her husband
Esther's courage to save her people
Deborah warrior hearts lead to victory
The faithfulness of Ruth as she stayed with God's family
Don't forget
Mary's devoted love to Jesus
With this, charms becomes deceitful Beauty...
Is fleeting
But woman!
I charge you
Stand in the fear of the lord And you will be praised!
Night

Sophie-Anne Baril

Outside the sky is painted a rich onyx
No stars light up the dark sky
Crickets chirp and upset the possible quiet
And for a moment, I am one with the night.
My thoughts evade my mind and into the darkness
They get lost into the eternal and deep sky.
My dreams are my thoughts returned as a gift
From the endless onyx sheet high up above
I listen to the crickets; maybe they have a word to say
And I let my heart take over as I let my mind float away.

Alive Again

Danielle Pierce

I remember the bottle on the floor, empty, Just like me. Tonight I was supposed to feel alive again. But as you are giving me these slow, slow kisses, I feel nothing.

I remember I am marked by an invisible path. There are smooth curves, sharp edges, clear lines. Someone else has these directions. You will never be able to follow them.

I remember smiling once. There were days when I was contagious with it. Each day was a promise for a new adventure. I was happy with him.

I remember being broken. Everything I ever felt for him had shattered. I could not, would not, understand how it happened. Trying to pick up those pieces has scarred me.

It hurts to remember. I want to erase those memories And feel something else. I kiss you harder, Hypnotized by the alcohol we split. Closer, come closer. I drag my fingers down your back, Pressing you against me. There is no time for breathing. I start to feel something again, Just within reach. Closer, come closer. Too many emotions My head is spinning My vision is foggy I am wrapped up in you I do not want to escape I am alive again, until—

I remember the bottle on the floor, empty, Just like me.

Moonshine

Faren Rajkumar

“But what is it?”
   “Sip, and don’t swallow fast”
   Easy now

That’s it
Fire, earth, and honey amber of little understood fables
My insides floating up to exit my unworldly mouth
To let stars meet stars
Darkness meet darkness
Lovers parted, reunited
A warm, golden vein snaking around me
Am I glowing?
Will the fireflies name me king?
Will I be the lantern to guide the prophet?
Like a soup of bright ecstasy and wine, but better
Like the way her eyes blazed that night I said goodbye
Not that I could see through the tears, but I could feel her fire
And again I feel it in my throat
   “Moonshine”
I get it now.

I remember the bottle on the floor, empty, Just like me.
It was on a cold night that she realized what it was to love. Not cold to the others but cold to her—cold in her. She was always colder than the others, as if her blood ran thinner than the rest. To love, she realized, was to be completely at home; at home with her family, at home with her surroundings, at home with herself. It was to sit amidst the noise, and bask in the quiet; to hear the human sounds—the laughs, the conversation, the music, and the cheer—and to be able to hear beyond those murmurings. To love was to hear her thoughts clearly through the chaos, because the people around her brought such excellent clarity. To love was to feel the palpitations of the resonating soul of the human environment, and to wrap herself in it. To love was to feel warm was when she was cold—to feel her blood thickening as the moments ticked by—and to finally feel whole.

To love was to feel like the most fortunate person she knew, even when society dictated she had drawn an unfortunate lot. To be in love was to know that despite what society thought, she knew that it was real, and that she was, indeed, the luckiest person on earth.

Love, she thought, is warmth that permeates the soul.
A Reflection on What He’s Done, and Continues to Do

Nicole Chavvanes

Back in those days when any man’s implied affection
Could garner her fickle attention
She knew her worth was more
And yet continued to wipe the floor
With her heart.
She ignored the warnings in her head
As she lied awake, alone, in her bed
Allowing these insignificant men
To occupy her thoughts.

She hoped and prayed for the day to come
That her best friend would become The One Whom she could hold close
When the fears that strangled her took too strong a hold,
And the tears stung her eyes,
And her mouth twisted in pain,
And the only comfort she felt
Was in the warmth of his embrace.
And when that day finally arrived,
All she could do, again, was cry
And hold him harder,
Pulling him closer
Until her eyes were dry.
And he did not just take the tears away;
Her smiles — her laughter — that you see today?
They are his, and his are hers, and they are perfect that way.

MCM

Julie Saint-Fleur

I want to get lost in you without losing myself.
I want to like what you like and still like what I like.
I want to do what you do and still do what I do.
I want to touch your soul without losing feel of mine.
I want to run away with you and still be safe at home.
I want to be one with you and still be complete alone.
I want to forget time is moving without losing track of time.
I want to help you grow and still flourish myself.
I want to mean something to you and still mean something to myself.
I want to bring out the light in you without losing the light in me.
I need to know you want it too.
The House of Bodies

Tory Njardvik

I push my way towards the bar.
Catching your attention.
The bartender slides me a drink,
As you drop a toxin.
Fruity and sweet, it trickles down,
Spreading throughout my veins.
You approach me with your ice eyes,
As it sweeps to my brain.
Slurred words tainted with rohypnol.
You catch me as I fall.
Compromised by your seduction,
Trapped behind dry wall.
Trying to scream with empty air.
Laughing, you strip my clothes.
Paralyzed. Unable to escape,
As blood seeps from my nose.
Chained to the pole, you stand above
Smirking. You strike a match,
As kerosene burns through my skin,
Helpless, itching to scratch.
I cry from misery and pain.
A moment of despair.
The lights fade, as I slip away.
My lungs burst red air.
In the bar, victims lose their way.
His pattern does not change.
He lures her in, and takes her home.
She is placed in the range.
Her body packed under the stairs,
One more girl last in line.
Hidden bodies throughout his home.
Content, his classic shrine.
Documenting his victims’ deaths
With photographs and heads.
On display, he opens his house
Welcoming the unwed.

A Love Story in 100 Words
Grace Ducanis

She came late and left early. He was always there, which was what she loved most. She didn’t talk to him, because talking cheapened love.

But such things. Oh, such things he said with his eyes! Their glances were infused with meaning. She didn’t know what they meant. It didn’t matter. His eyes did mean something.

She was cynical; it was impossible for one person to understand another. She didn’t want to be understood.

No.

She wanted to be seen—to know that he noticed she was there, and would have noticed if she was gone.

Which, eventually, she was.

Hollow
Kyle Boltson

Caving in from the outside,
I can feel her swallow.
Her soul is empty,
It leaves me feeling hollow.
Her eyes are the darkest I ever seen,
My conscience is weak, and too numb to scream.
Nothing is there.
Consummation

Daniel Arguelles

The sand was our carpet
And the palm trees our chapel
The warm breeze served as a witness
As the man robed in black declared our union sacred
We walked to the shore to escape the pesky guests
And the waves stretched out to caress our toes
Insisting on an early honeymoon start
We surrendered and rowed out just before the end of day
The sun was falling off the edge
And the waters danced lazily in a midnight waltz
So propelled by the lust of adventure
We let Jack Daniels take over the helm
And with the stars a blanket in the soft moon light
Gushing pleasure fused us as one, we hoped, for life
The sea hypnotic rocked us to sleep
We never knew in every direction the shore was no more Just six hours later everything snapped
And suddenly awakened, our salty host bawled
Mortified by the intrusion she slapped us around
The skies turned gray and the winds went mad.
Nine days passed
Oh, my perfect bride, her white dress now crimson
Bursting blisters and white secretion
We had to pour our warm yellow self Down our cracked lips which begged for more
I once swore to my bride’s father
If need be I would die for his princess
But now like a fetid rag she lay strung on my arms
The stench was putrid, but I could not loosen the embrace I’m not sure when she left me or if my mind went first
The lips and eyes I had worshiped now only crawling white rice
A dolphin glimpsed up and mockingly smiled
Deep dark grave, were not the Titanic, Atlantis and Earhart enough?
Some time ago I started to see what I wished
At times I was back on that beach, succulent platters abounding
Fresh water and festive ovens bursting with flavor
But neither insanity nor delusion could ever forgive what came next
There is no redemption for cannibalism
I had hoped for life but now prayed for death
But there was no blade, rope or bullet to put an end to myself
And too weak to jump over to the circling Great White My last hope was …
I long for you intimately, your pseudo-psychological intimacy
I love how every time with you is a new experience infinitely

The mental intricacies you create have no equivalent
Your two dimensional figure is such a neural stimulant

How you keep me vigilant, forever attentive
Your grasp on my heart becomes more aggressive

You captivate and control every moment I give you
A self designed paradigm I vicariously live through

The power you grant me to create my perfect fantasy
Is toxic enough to blind me of my preexisting malady

For a moment in time, I am enchanted by your allure
And with a hypnotic trance, you begin to obscure

My judgments and prudence, my foresight and wisdom
To your supernatural abyss my insatiable lust falls victim

I give you my all; the best of my being Releasing the essence of my soul; spiritually freeing

Satisfaction. Or the lack thereof Satiety. Or the lack thereof

You have left me. Alone and wanting
You have left me alone, in haunting

Confused as to how I must climb out of this void
When suddenly from a far, I hear a familiar noise

A faint voice I know all too well
A lie it whispers, “With me, your answers and desires dwell.”

Reluctantly, I follow the voice into the abyss
Never learning from what originally led me amiss.

Staff Notes

Faren Rajkumar, senior English major
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MARKETING DIRECTOR
Faren has lived in South Florida for most of her life, and has experienced a valuable four years at NSU in the Honors Program. She is moving on to pursue an MFA in Creative Writing with a poetry concentration, and hopes to publish her poetry, fiction, and creative nonfiction while also pursuing a career as a graduate professor. As a lover of words through and through, Faren is passionate about the purpose of Digressions, and is also a Writing Fellow tutor and former editor at The Current newspaper. In her spare time, she re-reads novels, daydreams about the American wilderness, and tries to keep the violin up to snuff.

Emily Harrington, junior environmental science major, marine biology minor
DESIGN MANAGER
Despite Emily's unfortunate inclination towards the sciences, she has always had a strong passion for the arts. This led her to pursue a position on the Digressions staff as a freshman. The future is bright but uncertain for her, so she has dabbled in many fields, including environmental writing and magazine design. She specializes in short stories, painting, and the art of walking on concrete without shoes.

Juanita Castro, sophomore English & political science major
MANAGING EDITOR
Juanita immigrated from Colombia when she was younger and now lives in South Florida. She’s been writing, drawing, editing, and petting as many dogs as she can for years now. She’s active in the Jason Taylor Foundation, and currently interns for the Omari Hardwick bluapple Poetry Network. She was recently crowned the Youth Poet Laureate of South Florida, and splits her time now mainly in between writing, volunteering, and teaching creative arts at schools. She loves Digressions as much as she loves petting puppies.

Desiree Casanova, junior sociology major
EDITORIAL STAFF
Desiree is from Coconut Creek, Florida, and is involved with President's 64, the Honors Program, SGA, and Digressions. She has interests in HR and non-profits, in addition to a passion for writing. Desiree enjoys being part of Digressions because it allows her to see and showcase the work of creative NSU students.

Nicole Chavvanes, sophomore English major
EDITORIAL STAFF
Nicole has been writing since middle school, but not diligently enough to satisfactorily call herself a “writer.” However, seeing the wonderful work of her peers has motivated and inspired her, and she’s writing more than she has in years. Her passion for the craft has been mercifully been re-ignited.

Tiara Baldoni, senior communications major, marketing minor
EDITORIAL STAFF
Tiara grew up in a small town in Pennsylvania called Peckville. She is a member of Sigma Delta Tau Sorority, currently the Director of Social Affairs and Risk Management. She also works on campus in the Writing Studio as the Administrative Assistant, and has a Marketing Internship at Celsius in Boca Raton, FL. Tiara was also a member of the Nova Southeastern University Cheer team for two years, and in her free time, she enjoys hanging out with friends, singing, skiing, working out, and dancing.

Kyle Bolton, junior biology major
EDITORIAL STAFF
“If you saw the world through my eyes, you would realize that no form of government is fit to secure us from the tyranny of human nature. Our generation believes it's breaking free from old conventions, while it's actually conforming to the system which enslaves it. They say I'm weird. I say I'm free.”

Hannah Dean, sophomore biology major, psychology minor
EDITORIAL STAFF
Hannah is the treasurer of Fitwell, and also a member of P64, Pre-PA, and Supernovas volunteer program. Hannah joined Digressions to make it more known to students that they don’t need to be in an art or writing class to be able to show off their work; she believes that everyone should have the opportunity to share what they love doing.

Amanda Kaplan, senior communication studies major
EDITORIAL STAFF
Amanda is originally from New York. She works for The Current newspaper at NSU and has a love for writing. She aspires to work for a magazine after graduation and continue to grow as a writer. She loves to laugh and has a secret passion for expressing her emotions through dancing.

Tory Njardvik, senior international studies major, writing minor
EDITORIAL STAFF
Tory is 21 years old and left Montana to pursue international studies at NSU. She played on the NSU volleyball team for two years until she broke her back in an accident, ending her volleyball career. In her spare time, Tory enjoys writing poetry, travelling, and attending music festivals.
Contributor Notes

Ezana Assefa, junior behavioral neuroscience and biology major “I want to be a neurologist or neuroscientist, and in my spare time, I am found at the gym, basketball courts, or in a book.”

Sophie-Anne Baril, senior international studies major “Writing poetry is one of my hobbies and I hope to turn it into something bigger if I get the chance to publish a poetry book.”

Grace Ducanis, junior English and communication major “I love stories in any form. I write because it’s the easiest way for me to tell a story. In a realistic perfect world I would have a career writing for a Christian magazine and publishing the series of novels I’ve been writing since I was fourteen, but I would also proofread medicine labels for a decent amount of money. I firmly believe that a little controversy is good for the soul.”

Dymun Fengshui, senior speech-language pathology major “Can’t complain... nobody wants to listen.” - Ralph J. Hall

Hawk Hardy, sophomore computer science major “I take photographs because human memory is mutable and ultimately volatile.”

Julie Saint-Fleur, senior elementary education major Julie is an aspiring author who wishes to publish realistic fiction novels worldwide. She also plans to teach English to small children internationally.

Lucy Schwartz, freshman psychology major Lucy is on the NSU rowing team.

Alonzo Williams, junior dance major “I would love to build a performance arts academy dedicated to all forms of art. I write and photograph to capture God’s insight and understand His beauty.”

Romartine Virgile, senior applied professionals major “The raw truth is I write, draw, and paint out of the beauty and love I have for God. Other than that, everything would be boring to me. I have a passion to live my purpose so it’s all the more meaningful that I use my gifts and talents.”
Imagine. Create. Inspire.
