Serving the Nova University community

Steinem Encourages Movement

By IDr. Kate Waites
Lamm

Gloria Steinem, feminist, author, co-founder and former editor of Ms. magazine, was the featured speaker of the Nova University Forum Series on November 28 at the Quality Inn Ana Capri in Fort Lauderdale.

Her audience was composed of members of community businesses and corporations as well as students and others associated with Nova University.

Acknowledging the diversity of audience members and their various "stages" with respect to the ongoing struggle for women's equality, the speaker peppered her upbeat talk with wit and a lively display of humor.

Ms. Steinem, a pioneer in the field of women's rights, first reviewed the gains made by the women's movement.

She pointed out that the "first wave of feminism" lasted 150 years and resulted in men and Blacks having finally acquired a "legal identity." Noting the importance of placing "ourselves in history," Ms. Steinem explained that we are presently at the beginning of the third decade of second wave feminism.

Presently, after twenty years of struggling for legal and social equality, "we still have a long distance to go," said Ms. Steinem.

She identified four major goals/themes of the women's movement.

The first goal is reproductive freedom which she sees as a root issue of women's oppression.

When reproductive freedom is denied women, [it is depriving them of] fundamental rights. It also becomes a "health issue and the greatest cause of injury and death among women," said Steinem.

The second goal of the women's movement is continued on page 8

Candle Light

By Sandra Watson and Kevin Hawkins

People began to trickle into the Rosenthal Student Center on Tuesday, Jan. 14th at about 9 P.M. They were arriving to take part in a Middle East oriented candlelight vigil.

With only hours to go before the U.N. deadline for Iraq to leave Kuwait was to pass, students and faculty joined in an open forum to discuss the crisis. Featured speakers included two Vietnam veterans, Stuart Horn and Ben Mulvey, both from Nova's Liberal Studies Program, and student Tina Cerra.

Issues discussed ranged from moral questions about our (the U.S.) reasons for being in the Middle East in such force, to questions about military capability and a potential future military draft.

Mideast Crisis

A Relative in Saudi Arabia

By Christine Tapper

For many Americans, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq were just countries far away in the Middle East. Today, the Middle East crisis has brought these countries as close to home as possible.

The Nova community is no exception, as is seen in my interview with the relative of a soldier in Saudi Arabia.

Broken hearts, tears, sleepless nights, frustration and fear of the unknown are all the emotions that family, friends and relatives are going through with their loved ones in Saudi Arabia.

In interviewing Karen Poyser, who has two cousins in Saudi Arabia, I could see the emotional turmoil she is placed in of not knowing whether she will ever see or hear from them again as January 15, a day to remember, draws near.

Not only is it the day that may determine the fate of her cousins but also her birthday. Karen Poyser, a freshman at Nova University, has two cousins who left for Saudi Arabia on September 14, 1990.

Delroy Donaldson, 22, who moved from England to New Jersey about three years ago and has been in the reserves for two years and Errol Mumby, 24, who departed from New Jersey also and has been serving in the army for seven years now.

"The soldiers should not be in Saudi Arabia because they all have families and friends back home who care and love them and should not have to die for a war that could have possibly been worked out before escalating to this point."

Karen feels that every

What's Happening With Construction???

By Sandra Watson

Some of you may be wondering: What happened to the law School?

What happened to the new dorms?

What about the Rosenthal Project?

The Shepherd Broad Law School is still on its way to the main campus.

"They have in fact broke ground on the law school," stated Dr. Joseph Lakovitch, Dean of Academic and Student Services.

"They just completed signing the contract today [January 14, 1991]. They should start construction sometime in February," he added.

The building should be 122 thousand square feet.

Construction should be finished by 1992.

"The law school will be occupied during the summer of 1992 so they won't disrupt functions at the present law school site," stated John Santulli, Director of Business Services and Facilities Management.

John Santulli

"The cost of the Shepherd Broad Law School project is estimated between eight and nine million dollars," he continued.

What of the Rosenthal Project?

"The Rosenthal project is just a simple renovation. It's definitely proceeding," continued the dean.

How about the new Dorms?

The new housing facility should be completed by the fall of 1992.

"The 220 bed housing facility is a more traditional style suite," said Tammy Jones, Director of Residential life.

"There is more meeting space, lounge on each floor as well as study rooms."

"That is why the addition of a dining hall is crucial for undergraduate students."

Lisa Muellner, Student Government Association Senate President, concurred.

"I believe Nova University will benefit from a dining hall particularly because of the new housing facility situation."

There will be no kitchens in this facility.

Rob Armstrong, Joseph Mackenzie and Belinda Gonzalez were the primary organizers of the vigil. Armstrong, who expected a low turnout owing to school-wide apathy claims he was "very impressed." Mackenzie thought the vigil was "great!" and was very enthusiastic about the Nova Student Body's response to the vigil.

Editorial: Society Still Suffering From World View

By Cleveland Ferguson III

Charlotte Perkins Stetson Gilman, a nineteenth century author and feminist, once said "when women stand free as economic agents, they will lift and free their arrested functions, to the much better fulfillment of their duties as wives and happiness of the human race: These "arrested functions" included such things as cooking, sewing, washing laundry, cleaning, shopping and taking care of the children. Unlike the women of the 1900's, women can make their own decisions today in that they have achieved a degree of independence in social, political and economic arenas. Perhaps what Gilman did not foresee, however, is how society would continue under the male-centered world view so that the advances of women in these three arenas would serve to burden rather than to free them.

woman, more so than because she is Black. She also stated that when it comes to female politicians, men stick together.

Gloria Steinem agreed. She was the second to last Forum speaker in 1990, sponsored by Vice President Steven Goldstein and the Office of Corporate and Foundation Relations. "While we have much of the popular support on our side on various issues, we need to continue to make the institutional changes that Many men in politics plot and discriminate against their female counterparts. For example, at the last Nova University 89-90 Forum Speaker sponsored by the Alumni Association, Shirley Chisolm said that she would not run for another political office because the male politicians would not support her. Many of these men she helped get into office.

She continued to say that males discriminate against her because she is a make these dreams possible," she said.

Similarly in the social arena, Georgette Moshbacher, Chief Executive Officer of a million dollar cosmetics company and wife of the United States Secretary of Commerce, Robert Moshbacher, gets attacked by critics often. She draws extensive attention to her lavish appearance, jewelry and clothes. Some men dislike her ambitious attitude. In a recent article in the Miami Herald she said, "The Washington press really took me apart one evening because I am not willing to dress like a man in order to be taken seriously."

Almost all women have become burdened in the economic arena. Because of the high cost of living and other financial factors, husbands and wives have to get jobs to maintain control of their financial situations. Because of an androcentric world view, some men expect their wives to take care of the homemaking responsibilities. Although some husbands may help their wives, he does not have to shoulder the dual responsibility of work and the affairs of the home.

Statistics from American Demographics Journal show that men do only 1/5 of the cooking, cleaning, and laundry. According to the Reader, journalist Arlie Hoshchild, most women work one shift at the office or factory and a "second shift" at home. Hoshchild cited a recent article in the March/April 1990 edition, that over the past thirty years women have been working outside the home and more have been divorcing. Many have declared that their husbands neglect the children and the home. Perhaps these couples can no longer bear stress as women's dual responsibility has made the couples more argumentative, edgy, and short tempered. In addition almost every woman, married or not, feels the economic burden through unequal salaries in many professions. Many still get about 70 cents on the dollar.

Many women have pushed aside the burdens to make improvements for the human race: Golda Meir, Marie Curie, Shirley Chisolm, Gloria Steinem, and Mother Theresa. Few "stand free as [individual] economic agents," however.

Economic equality in terms of equal salaries may help assuage financial strains on families and perhaps marriages. The majority of men must realize that like the emergence of political and social freedom of women, economic freedom is just as important to women. This double standard will continue to exist until all men dispose of all their prejudices towards women, which impedes the progress of society. But the price for freedom is usually high, and women are paying for it.

When We Don't Work in Unity, No one Wins

By Belinda Gonzalez

September 1990 marked the beginning of a new school year for many students here at Nova. For some students, it marked the beginning of a battle. I refer to the underground efforts by certain students and faculty to establish a recycling program on campus.

Certain students banded together and spent the last four months trying to get paper bins, soda containers and recyclable paper on campus with the hope of establishing a recycling program. Numerous meetings were held with recycling companies, Nova Physical Plant and other recycling consultants. On Nov. 19, a memo was passed out to all Nova Employees and the Student Body explaining how the recycling program was to be implemented. However, this memo marked the end rather than the beginning of the students' efforts.

According to some of the students involved, the faculty was infuriated at this memo and demanded that the project be turned over to them. Issues of responsibility, liabilities, control, authority and recognition ("who gets the credit") were the focus of the faculty meeting in which the students were confronted. The students felt that they had lost the battle and conceded to the faculty.

awareness program on campus. Just this year the faculty have been in the process of establishing a committee which will delegate duties and services among the entire University. The representatives may be faculty members or students. It is hoped that by involving all facets of the Nova community in the project, that it will be better coordinated, well-established and successful.

The faculty members involved in this project were very upset at the fact that they were not approached nor aware of this "other" recycling project. The faculty would have wanted to help and be a part of the effort that the students had taken upon themselves. They were also upset that the Nov. 19 memo presented a 'University'-wide

However, the faculty and administrators of Nova have their views also. According to several faculty members, the Nova administration has been trying for years to get some type of recycling/ecological agreement when in fact they had no idea of the project. They finally agreed to present a recycling/ecological awareness program proposal to the Academic Council and had the students postpone their efforts until the almighty Nova University approval was handed down.

So, you may ask, who won? In my opinion, no one won. Why? Simply because soda cans are still thrown out, students are not aware of recycling efforts, papers are still being thrashed and no education of an overall ecological awareness is being offered. (Except the Liberal Studies Circle "Nature's Planet.") I believe that the main problem between students and faculty in this situation is a lack of communication. It seems that the particular students involved were led to believe that they did have the authority to establish a program when, in reality, they did not. But, at least they got the recycling program working. They got it to actually happen.

I understand the faculty being upset and wanting to be a part of it, but I also feel that instead of postponing the students efforts or trying to take over the program, that they should have taken the students impetus and have tried to come together in an agreement so that Nova University could join the ranks of UM, FIU and FAU who already have well established recycling programs.

Neither the students nor faculty are to blame. Rather, I applaud their efforts, but not their results. Enough of the bureaucracy and let's just DO IT! Let's make sure all Nova's paper is recyclable, that we use environmentally safe substances, that all cans are recycled, that paper is one-sided and recyclable and recycled, that classes and seminars and programs enhance the student awareness of ecology. If we are not destroyed by the Middle East crisis, then we will destroy ourselves with our own garbage. Let's just take action now, not 'next year.'

Steinem: It Don't Come Easy

By Dr. Chris Jackson

When the Vice President of Corporate Relations and Foundations, Steven Goldstein, his staff, sponsors, guests and others welcomed Gloria Steinem to Fort Lauderdale, I accompanied students to the presentation. Did I gawk? Of course. Gloria Steinem is Celebrity plus. Sure her hair is more boring than Sinead O'Connor's, but then Sinead didn't go to Smith either. In any event, she is Big League to us star-gazers, and I hadn't seen a famous female celeb since Loni Anderson toted up the Intra-Coastal.

Steinem sure didn't put on much of a show. She wore a conservative violet dress that Cher wouldn't be caught dead in. She spoke in a low, throaty monotone. We actually had to pay attention to understand. She also didn't use her hands to "emote." She kept them by her side or rested them on the speaker's podium. What did she expect--that her ideas would be emotional or something? Now and again, she turned like a tennis watcher to give each side of the room equal time for eye contact. If she can command big bucks on the media circuit, she should have more cooking than that. How about Oprah's warm stew with a teaspoon of Dr. Ruth's spicy advice thrown in? From a public speaking viewpoint, she would rate a C+, well maybe a C++ to be generous.

If Steinem's speaking style needed glitz, the content was even more of a downer. She began by calling for "everyday rebellions." Oh goody--conflict and violence. But there was no shouting, no anger, no blood. The kind of overturnings she requested were subversions of thought. What fun is that?

Don't tell us, Gloria, that all people, men and women, can live in the spirit of tolerance, compassion, and acceptance of individual choice. Don't mention to us that discovering these choices for ourselves involves a long process of exploration and independent thought. Instead, give us instant self-help. Tell us what to wear, what to do, who to be. We want you to answer for us the burning question voiced by women all over America: Should I wear three earrings in each lobe or four?

Editor's note: Dr. Jackson is a Liberal Arts professor at Nova College.

Deco Party is a Success

CCM Helps bring Holiday Cheer to Needy Children

By Melisa Tebeau

On December 20th, the members of Catholic Campus Ministry of both Nova and BCC, along with Toys For Tots, brought some added Christmas cheer to the children of Carver Ranches Day Care Center in Hollywood. The members got together beforehand to make ornaments for children to decorate the Christmas tree donated by Brad Williams and Campus Programming Board.

At the Christmas party, the members sang Christmas Carols with the children, while Santa handed out presents. Members helped the children decorate the tree by handing out ornaments and icicles, and lifting the children so they could place their ornaments on the tree. The members of CCM had a great time doing this community service and hope to do something similar next year.

I would personally like to thank the members of CCM and Stacy Klein who gave their time and participated in this event, and Brad Williams and Campus Programming Board for donating the tree. Thank you all for your time and support of this successful event.

By Dawn Erin Christensen

The Christmas Decorating Party held on November 30 at the Rosenthal Student center left children with smiles and the windows of the Center decorated with a variety of holiday scenes. Children from Big Brothers/ Big Sisters received toys that were collected by Alpha Chi and donated by caring individuals all around Nova University.

Many individuals who were unable to donate toys contributed money, which in turn was used to purchase toys to be distributed to the children. The toys in substantial amount were donated to Kids in Distress.

Dawn Erin Christensen

The toys were wrapped at a toy wrapping party sponsored by both Psychology Club elves and Alpha Chi.

Refreshments, such as including Wassail punch and freshly baked cookies were provided by Campus Programming and the Nova Clinic. Music was provided by WNKR Radio and various other clubs donated decorations.

This Christmas Decorating Party was a success because of the collective efforts by many campus organizations and individuals.

Both the children and the director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters expressed a genuine desire to return and help out with any events that Nova clubs are organizing because of the joy they received at this event.

Big Brother/Big Sister will be holding the Taste of Fort Lauderdale event highlighting local artists, restaurants and scenes of the city. This event will be held on February 22nd, 23rd, and 24th.

Santa hears holiday wishes as Belinda Gonzalez (bottom Left), President of the Psychology Club and Alpha Chi Vice-President (upper right, red shirt), Mary Anne Rutherford look on.

"It would also provide a supportive social structure for the students and the administration alike," Ms. Mueller continued.

Residential Life will be hiring additional Resident Advisors for the new facilities.

There are five stages to go through before actual building takes place:

1. Design
2. Approval by Buildings and Grounds Committee
3. Final Drawings
4. Budgetary Meetings
5. Contracting

The Residential Life project is now at the bidding stage (between 4 & 5).

"The new housing facility will include an apartment for a Resident Manager," said Mr. Santulli.

"There will be an area created for proper mail distribution as well," he added.

Construction should begin by June or July of 1991.

Other renovations or additions being considered by the Building and Grounds Committee are the Administration Building and Oral Baldwin School.

the "re-definition and re-valuing of work." "Homemaking should have economic value, because homemakers work harder and longer than anyone else."

Ms. Steinem also pointed out that the most dangerous place for women is the home because of the high rate of domestic violence, depression and tension-related diseases that afflict women in the home.

The creation of "democratic families" was the third goal of the women's movement discussed by Ms. Steinem.

"Both parents should be equally valued and free to engage in the work of their choice," she said.

She also noted that it is wrong for "boys and girls [to] grow up believing men can't be as nurturing as women and that authority is more natural to men."

Dr. Kate Waites Lamm

The fourth and final goal proposed by the speaker was the "de-politicization of culture."

"Society needs to take the politics out of the culture because women's oppression is all in the culture we swim in, [including books, television, the media and religion.]"

Before ending her presentation with a question and answer period, Ms. Steinem forecasted the continued economic empowerment of women which, combined with changing demographics--more older women becoming more radicalized with age--will result in a "greatly accelerated women's movement."

The mixed audience of both men and women responded enthusiastically to Ms. Steinem's talk.

One audience member and veteran of Nova University's Speaker's Forum dubbed Ms. Steinem's speech the most rousing one to date.

resolution in sight. As the deadline draws closer, I cannot see Hussein backing down now."

Our prayers are with those brave soldiers who may lose their lives fighting for America.

The problem has a solution and the problem between Saddam Hussein and President Bush also could have been solved before sending so many innocent soldiers to face the unknown in Saudi Arabia.

In Karen's opinion, their was justification for Saddam Hussein to attack Kuwait.

"Since Saddam Hussein attacked for economic sanctions it was justified. This brings back to memory when America attacked Panama for economic sanctions."

"President Bush should give sanctions more time to work after January 15," said Karen solemnly.

The above statement has two points of view. One is that President Bush should do all he can to spare the lives of so many human beings. The other point is that Saddam Hussein do not care about the lives of other people and may attack right after January 15 forcing President Bush to retaliate.

"At this point I think war is inevitable. There has been many peace talks and no sign of a

After the newscast, at about 12:30 on the morning of the 16th, candles were distributed and lit. Students (still nearly 100) gathered outside of the Rosenthal to hear the final speaker of the evening.

Rob Armstrong, General Manager of WNKR videotaped the vigil.

After Tina Cerra's speech, other students who are presently inactive members of the U.S. Armed Forces gave their own views on the Middle East crisis. They tried to impress on students the importance of supporting U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf. The vigil drew to a tearful conclusion as members took what comfort they could from their gathering.

Intramural Sports Flas-h !!!

By Jennifer Vossellor
Contributing Intramural
Sports Coordinator

Brad Williams, Director of the Student Life department at Nova University, continuously aims at improving the life of students outside the academic life. Parties, dances, picnics, and the Intramural Program are all the works of Brad. The intramurals are the newest of his workings and is the first type of intramural program that Nova has ever had.

The program, now in its second year, continues with great success. Along with success, Brad anticipates the program will develop into more than just the intramural sports but a whole "Campus Sports and Recreation Program" in the upcoming years. The intramurals have proved to be a great program that through the continuing interest and participation of the students and staff, will grow into that whole program. This will give more fun and excitement along with competition to the our University.

of Student Life

Volleyball

Congratulations goes out to members of the team 'One Day Late' who are the intramural volleyball champions for 1990-1991. Teams players include Tom Van Achen, Jennifer Masterantoni, Christine Miller, Katie Nolan, Nancy Porrier, and Rob Suydam.

Golf

Beating out an excellent field of competitors for this years intramurals golf championship was the team of David McNaron and David Jenkins. Their combine total was 137.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS UPDATE.

By Jen Vossellor
Contributing Intramural
Sports Coordinator

Originally scheduled to begin play January 17, intramural basketball has been reset to January 22 due to complications with the new lighting facilities at the outside basketball courts. These lights will enable games to be played at night when play during the day is not feasible. Games are now scheduled for every Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6:30pm and 7:30pm.

This season there are nine teams participating and includes a faculty team. Schedules will be available in the next issue and your support is will be greatly appreciated.

"The girl who works the intramurals,• is a phrase I have heard a number of times by those who do not know me. This is due to my work as co-director the newly found intramural sports program with Dean Moran. The program began the fall semester of 1989 as a program of sports and tournaments that could be played, only not at the collegiate level.

Just to tell you a little bit about myself, my name is Jennifer Vossellor. I played sports on Long Island up through my senior year in high school. Growing up with a brother who had me for a sports mate gave me no choice but to play them. At Nova, they didn't offer any sports that I played. As a substitute, through the help of a friend, I contacted Brad Williams, the Director of Student Life at Nova, who offered me the job of Intramural Sports co-director.

We have entered the second year of the intramurals with volleyball, football, and now basketball. Intramurals will continue to grow and succeed but only with your participation. So keep getting involved and if you have any ideas you would

With a lot of work, patience, and dedication, the intramural program began to a slow start. The program, which many may know, has continued with each sport with increasing success.

Athletic Director Speaks Out ...

Dear Students,

As Director of Athletics, I would like to thank you for your support during 1990. The players of all of our fall teams greatly appreciated your support at all of our home games.

The basketball team has started the year with a couple of impressive wins and are looking for more success as they begin their first year in the new Florida Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (F.I.A.C.). This is a great opportunity for you to once again demonstrate your enthusiasm by attending the home basketball games this semester.

Three other teams will be starting their season this semester and they would also appreciate your support. The baseball team will be playing their games at the new field located just west of the Parker Building. The women's tennis team will hold their home games at B.C.C. and practice at Rolling Hills Country Club, and the golf team will hold their practices at Rolling Hills and play their tournaments at many of the best country clubs in South Florida.

Once again, thank you for your outstanding support this past semester, and let's really get out to as many games as you can and support your teams.

Sincerely,

Sonny Hansley
Director of Athletics.

The Harder They Come ... The Ideas Behind the Metal

By V. I. Short

Band: Queensryche
Album: Empire

I had originally set out to explore and comment mainly on the ideas and mood of this particular release and ended up so extremely impressed with this band's musical compositions that I feel I must elaborate on this. Guitarists Chris OeGarmo and Michael Wilton both use 6 and 12 string guitars (both acoustic and electric), and although I am not an expert, I can assure you that the effects of these instruments are tremendous. All songs on this release, from ballads like Silent Lucidity to the hard hitters like Resistance, are sophisticated and complex in musical style.

As for the lyrics, well, they are reflective and just as impressive as the music, with the exception of a minor incident, that being the title track, Empire.

Now, I may be wrong on this one, and I apologize if I am, but after careful evaluation, I came to the conclusion the band is a little confused on the drug issue contained within this song. They seem to focus on the 'evil' of drugs and their abusers rather than the real problem, as I see it: the illegality of drugs and the 'empires' being built as a result of our government's restrictions.

Again, this is a debatable issue, but the other politically oriented tracks seem to reflect a more consistently 'leftist' attitude, which seems to be in definite opposition to the position taken in Empire.

In addition to political statements, Queensryche includes many 'romantic' notions on this release. Best I Can reflects the emotions of a disabled young man, that range from sorrow to perseverance. Another Rainy Night (Without You) is a true expression of one man's loneliness.

So to bring this review to an end, I'll sum up my thoughts on the entire piece. It is a well-thought-out effort, both in the political and 'romantic' sense. I would recommend this release to anyone who is interested not only in 'metal', but also in the problems of our society. Queensryche is a bright and musically talented band, and their release Empire is evidence of this.

Dining Out With Kev & Jax Plenty to Beef About at Beefsteak Charlie's

Recently, we visited Beefsteak Charlie's, a chain-steak house located at 2889 Stirling Rd. in Hollywood.

When we entered, the environment was pleasant. The first thing that struck us, however, was that the restaurant was practically empty. We should have taken this as an omen.

Instead, we stayed and, after about 5 minutes, were seated by a crabby old lady who, just by chance, happened to be our waitress.

After we had perused the menu, we both decided on the Jr. Sirloin priced at 13.95, which was one of the lower priced items available. We decided that we would give it a chance since each meal came with not only an unlimited shrimp and salad bar, but also a free pitcher of beer, wine or sangria.

The waitress brought over our pitchers of beer and we approached the shrimp/salad bar. Everything seemed fine until we returned to the table.

The "free" beer was suitable only for the purpose of cleaning off the unpeeled, uncleaned shrimp. Now, both of us had worked in restaurants before and were familiar with cleaning and shelling shrimp; when they are larger than brinesize (that's the stuff you feed to your turtles).

Since we couldn't drink the beer which, by the way, makes Pabst Blue Ribbon look like Heinekien, we asked for water...five times, which we never received. We dismissed this as simple water restrictions owing to the Iraq conflict.

Finally, our meals arrived. I guess that the only way to put this forth is by saying that Kev's medium-rare steak could have been used for a transfusion if one of us needed it. Perhaps a pint of blood could have been squeezed from it.

On sending it back, the waitress displayed unparalleled rudeness. She ripped the meal away, without a word, and disappeared in a puff of black smoke.

By the time the unrequested replacement meal arrived, Kev, who hadn't eaten all day, had lost his appetite. Our bill arrived at the same time amounting to a grand total of $37.00. That's with tip, because there was none.

On the way out, Kev and I asked one of the 'salad boys' if we could speak to a manager. We were told that he was in a meeting and "couldn't be bothered." Well, the manager need never be bothered by us again.

In closing, we recommend that if you value your taste buds, you will avoid Beefsteak Charlie's. Perhaps recommend it to your worst enemies, but then - maybe that's too cruel.

Rebel Without a Tag - Getting Auto Tags in Broward County

Like most Americans, I don't particularly enjoy parting with my money. So when I got notice from Tallahassee that my auto tags were in need of renewal, I was not thrilled. Sure, I could have mailed in to the bureau and had them send out my tags, but I don't particularly enjoy parting with my money. Therefore, I waited until the last possible moment to go and register my vehicle.

It was a sunny and warm January day when I went to the Broward County central courthouse (that's the place that you pick up tags when you don't mail in the cash because you don't want to part with your money until the last possible moment). This was as close to the last possible moment as I could get; January 4th. In three days I would have to pay an additional fee, plus I ran the risk of getting a ticket for an expired tag.

Anyway, I figured that I'd just pop in about 3:00 because, after all, people were still at work. When I walked through the doors I was greeted by at least 40 people who had the same idea that I had; and these were people that were lined up waiting to get INSIDE the office to wait. I stepped in line and remembered all the times that I was in the middle of a line and looked at the poor sod at the end and, beaming with self satisfaction, thought, "I'm sure glad I'm not him." I looked into the middle of the line to find at least three people looking back at me with big grins on their faces and I wished I didn't know what they were thinking.

Just then, the man in front of me said, "Ya know, this line hasn't moved in two hours." Even taking exaggeration into account, I wasn't prepared to wait that long. So, I looked back at the three stooges grinning from the middle of the line, gave them my best Schwarzenegger "I'll Be Back" look, and headed for the door. I'd be back, all right; and next time I'd be ready.

So, now it's Monday morning, 7:30 AM... I wasn't ready. I dragged myself out of bed, brushed my teeth, threw on some ratty clothes and a hat and headed to the courthouse. I thought, "Maybe I should have mailed out my tags."

"No, no way!," I quickly rebutted myself. I wasn't like the rest of the people, and I wasn't going to satisfy their bureaucratic egos by sending in my tags. By gosh, I'm a person; and they're going to treat me like one, not just another number mailing in its money. They open at 8:30 and they'll find me standing first in line, just waiting for my tags.

First in line is a very subjective term. Actually, I was shocked when I saw the line when I got to the courthouse at 8:00. I counted 45 people in front of me, and they still didn't open for another 30 minutes. I was behind someone that looked a lot like Popeye, and there were a cast of many in front of him, even a Mort Downey Jr. look-alike. So, for 30 minutes I stood in line, trying not to notice the grins of others that were miles ahead of me in line. It is very disconcerting to leave, come back three days later, and STILL be in the same place.

Anyway, I won't bore you with the trivial details of how long I waited or how annoying Popeye became before he started into his coughing fit that finally silenced him. The only thing I leave you with is this: Be an individual and from now on, get your tags through the mail.

Matthiessen Visits Broward

Renowned travel author Peter Matthiessen calls the main character of his latest book, Killing Mr. Watson, a "classic 19th century character." Mr. Watson, Matthiessen said, was "direct about his methods...[if] people were in [his] way, [he] took care of it."

The Broward County Library hosted the Florida Endowment for the Humanities' "Evening with Peter Matthiessen" on Jan. 14th, 7:30 P.M. The author was introduced by Miami Herald columnist Carl Hiaasen, who spoke glowingly of the man who was to take his place at the podium. Hiaasen was informative, invigorating and humorous.

Matthiessen himself, although a non-Floridian writer, has been in and out of Florida for over 50 years since his first visit at the age of eight. He is consistently environmentally active, both as a writer and in his private life. With a penchant for exotic locales, Matthiessen does all his own research for his books. He claims it took him up to six years to gain the trust of the Everglades natives he encountered in researching Killing Mr. Watson.

After a brief informal introduction, he proceeded to read the first chapter from his latest book, pausing occasionally to provide additional information about characters or locations. The book is about the somewhat legendary Ed Watson, an Everglades trader with a reported habit towards violence.

Edward Watson has allegedly about 55 deaths attributed to him. Matthiessen pointed out, in the audience 'question and answer' time, that no survivors of such episodes ever saw Watson kill anyone. Watson, he added, was tied more likely to about seven deaths.

It is the taming of the Watson legend that the author considered his greatest challenge. His task was to follow an 8 decade old trail and fictionally represent Ed Watson truer to life than popular legend presents him. Matthiessen also claims to have been intrigued with the idea that this well-esteemed, capable man had been executed by his neighbors.

Killing Mr. Watson.

Matthiessen informed the audience, began as a "thread" in another novel he was working on. The Watson 'thread' soon subsumed the other novel. Matthiessen is already working on a second volume in the Watson series that will explore the aftermath of Watson's death. He claims that there is the potential for a third book that would be written from Watson's own point of view.

Two particular points of interest arose during the question-and-answer session with the author. Matthiessen mentioned that his book In the Spirit of Crazy Horse is due for re-release in May. Crazy Horse tells the story of Leonard Peltier, an American Indian who was framed for the murder of two F.B.I. agents.

Matthiessen also told the audience that Killing Mr. Watson has been bought as a TV mini-series. He says he is uneasy with the idea as he distrusts television productions "heartily and profoundly."

After his presentation, Matthiessen took some time to speak one-on-one with audience members during a signing session.

Dear Dixie

Dear Dixie,

How would you recommend dealing with confronting a friend whose girlfriend is being quite unfaithful without his knowing?

Teed Off

Dear Teed:

Why would you want to confront him? Mind your own business. You can bet if you do confront him and I don't recommend it you stand a good chance of losing a friend.

Dear Dixie,

How can we as dorm students help to eliminate alcohol abuse around us?

Al Coholic

Dear Al:

Do the obvious—drink less or not at all. Take care of yourself physically, mentally and spiritually. Plan events that don't have booze as a central focus. Designate a driver when you do party. If under undue stress, choose a healthy alternative. You may be able to have some influence on others by being a healthy role model.

Take note Al, these are some of the things you can do if we could figure out a way to eliminate alcohol abuse—the world would be a better place. You can only take care of yourself.

Dear Dixie,

Who are you?
Mysty

Dear Mysty:

Which life?

Love,

Rankings and Ratings By: Jax

Thumbs Up:

To Daniel "Cuestick" Finn, winner of the second Nova Pool Tournament. Special note also goes to Mike Pirello, who came in a darn-close second. However...

Thumbs Down:

To the Outdoors Club, sponsor of the Nova Pool Tournament, for giving fewer than 24 hours notice of the event. Maybe that can be the reason only 8 people showed up in comparison to the last tourney's turnout of 15. Come on guys, get on the ball. Get it? Ball...cueball? Never mind.

Thumbs Down:

To WNKR, the Nova U. on campus radio station, for its concerned efforts towards mimicing a large scale radio station. Instead of making play lists and getting 'professional', maybe you should try to stir up a listening audience. Right now, the listener/DJ ratio is hovering at about 1:1; and that's on a good day.

No Thumbs:

To Accounts Receivable. Where the heck is my refund check? Did you route it through South Vietnam or what?

Thumbs Up:

To Intramural Bowling. Now here's something I'd have NEVER expected to work...and I was pleasantly surprised. Hats off to Brad Williams and whoever else helped concoct this idea.

Double Thumbs Up:

The first Double Thumbs Up goes to the Candlelight Vigil sponsored by WNKR, and Belinda Gonzalez, president of the Psychology Club. With an attendance of over 100 students, numerous speakers including Vietnam veterans, and just a general feeling of involvement, this function is definitely worthy of two thumbs and may very well be the best Nova event of the year.

Poetry Corner

Darkness descends,
a leaf cast off from a lonely tree.
In this time of crimson sunsets, our lives join to be safe from the wolves of destiny.
Building structures of light,
out of the tar of our sins.

Your virtue, like butterflies varies through carnage, forming a consistency, long and soft like your blond hair.
Grey day and night filled with rain like tears,
leading to guillotine like thoughts,
slicing away my comfort,
leaving a hell.
But your soft countenance soothes my stringing eyes, mining past the face of a mountain of falsehoods,
you rescue me as my air runs out.
Hovering like a swan of mercy,
aiding the phoenix in its fiery rise to triumph.

I lose control,
comforting tremors within my hands.
an ocean of emotion within my tears,
I have much to gain from you being here with me.

Love, in my hands,
carried these long months.
out from inside me,
new life promised by the new day.
a feeling that makes efforts seem like ecstasy.

July Aloneness

Without aggression or pretense she reached deep inside of me and gently pulled out my frightened inner child.
When I told her about my childhood
she listened, empathized, and cried
with me.
But, while she nurtured and healed
my wounds something exotic occurred. a scarlet light flashed across my eyes. The dream enclosed my imagination. I saw a cornucopia. Out of it rose a picture. I was caressing a woman's hair. She nestled her head in my chest. My eyes opened to see that it was her. I snapped upright. Shivering as a cold sweat drenched my sheets.

Guess What?
By Betty Sylvestre

Guess what? I am in love yes, I am isn't it great life has so much to offer.
That is his name you know, life.
I did not realize that I had been having an affair with him all this time.
Life enables me to hope, to dream, and to make these dreams come true.
Life is the one husband that will never betray me. Most of all, he is in love with me.
I don't know what happened, all of a sudden I found out that I have been engaged in a mutual love relationship since the day I was born.
What a revelation!!!
When the time comes for me to part with him, I will leave happy knowing that I have fulfilled a least one of my desires, to know that love is all about.
great, unselfish love!!!

Soleil d'hiver

dark threatening clouds stand guard
over the shadowy white cold, but holes in its defence
let warm golden rays penetrate the chilling scene
thawing my fingers amidst another dismal day.

Death comes as a postcard

A sign of escape framed by the window pane brings her to an answer avoided before.
the season of dying seen as a postcard invites her to leave the warmth of this world.
cold death came packaged so neatly in the peaceful white snow,
calls her to serenity
from a life in hell.

Dawn loves the hills

Dawn loves the hills,
she caresses them with shadows.
she lurks within their hollows longer, conserving her darkness.
her presence awakens me late at night,
I see her in the hills early in the morning.
Dawn has a dark soul,
but she always respects my foolish ways.

Get Russian News From The Source.

Russia's most respected newspaper is now available in the U.S.

A FREE COPY IS WAITING FOR YOU!

For the first time ever, literaturnaya Gazeta is being translated into English. You can now get the Russian view on all the exciting events taking place in Russia and Eastern Europe.

literaturnaya Gazeta has been publishing news and commentary on political and social problems in the Soviet Union since it was founded in 1929. Some in the Soviet Union say glasnost never would have come about without the Gazeta's continued editorial support for reform. Now with its objective in sight, literaturnaya Gazeta is taking a leading role in analyzing today's events.

Literary Gazette International is unlike any American newspaper. By its own definition it is a literary and socio-political journal. Every article is an in-depth look at its subject, whether a feature, or a debate on political policy. A recent issue had an article on a convent in a small Ukrainian town, a round table discussion on the dialectics of unity, and an intriguing look at whether Soviets think the U.S. wants to give them financial aid. Another article reveals insights on how Russians view themselves. It says, "We are referred to as a 'superpower', but in many respects we are still a poor developing country." It continues, "Therefore it is our main duty today not only to make an honest assessment of our past and rid ourselves of the vestiges of Stalinism in our domestic policy, but also to separate Stalinism from communism in the eyes of the world." Nowhere else will you find such open, honest talk published by Russians.
