Ferraro Comes to Nova: Blasts United States Health Care

By Sandra Watson

The Honorable Geraldine Ferraro, author, first woman vice-presidential candidate on a national party ticket, and Congresswoman (D) New York, was an extremely endearing and charismatic speaker at the Nova University Forum Series hosted by Vice President Steven Goldstein and the Corporate Relations and Foundations office, on February 13 at the Quality Inn Anna Capri in Fort Lauderdale.

Ms. Ferraro informed her audience that she would not speak on the Gulf War since she was not an authority on the topic, but rather she would discuss a topic with which she had become tragically familiar during the 10 weeks of her mother's illness.

She would speak "20 minutes of prepared brilliance" on the condition of the American healthcare system.

"We need to stop applying bandages to our healthcare and start trying to cure its fundamental illnesses."

Utilizing her expertise in policy making she began to expose the problems with the healthcare system.

"To be brutally frank, with the [3.4 trillion dollar] budget deficit being worse than had been anticipated, with the Gulf War by some estimates costing a billion dollars a day, with the recession plodding on, and with the S & L crises looming ever larger, I just don't expect much movement on this issue."

Hon. Geraldine Ferraro

She pointed out that our national security should not only be measured by the superiority of our Armed forces but also by the "health of our economy, by the effectiveness of our educational system, and by the quality of life we provide our citizens."

Assessing the increasing number of overcrowded emergency rooms, she concluded that it is not only the rise of violence in American cities that contributes [to society's problems], but also the 37 million citizens without medical insurance, "because so many [of these] people are letting minor illnesses continue to the point where they need emergency service," she explained.

She attributes the lack of healthcare coverage to, "[high] healthcare costs [that] are so out of control, and a delivery system [that] is so fragmented that we are not getting the [production] we need despite the amount of money we spend."

Ferraro feels this situation is horrible in a country

Nova Law Center Hosts F. Lee Bailey National Moot Court Competition

By Sandra Watson

The trials have been adjourned, and the verdicts are in: the winner of this year's F. Lee Bailey National Moot Court Competition held at the Shepard Broad Law Center of Nova University, on February 14-17, 1991, was the University of Houston.

Fourteen teams from twelve law schools around the country participated in the National Moot Court competition.

The University of Houston students, Denman Heard and Martin de la Torre, won the best overall team award. Before the National Moot Court Competition, there were a series of mock trials held at the Nova Law Center to see who would enter.

When the dust cleared and the smoking guns had been put away, Thomasina Moore of Fort Lauderdale and Laurie Moss of North Miami Beach, were selected to represent Nova in the National competition.

The Shepard Broad Law Center team placed second in the National competition.

"I thought they were very professional," said one Nova Law student who had been invited to attend the competition.

The best brief was submitted by the South Texas College of Law.

The competition consisted of two-member teams facing off in a mock trial.

This year's problem was based on an actual criminal case concerning the admissibility of hearsay evidence where the key witness was unavailable for trial.

The case is still pending before the Eleventh Circuit U. S. District Court of Appeals.

F. Lee Bailey, a Nova Law School adjunct professor, briefed all participants on the strategy of appellate argument.

WNKR: On The Move

By Kevin Hawkins

WNKR 760 AM, Nova Knight Radio, has begun a promotional effort that centers on giving listeners the chance to win free tickets to plays, concerts and other entertainment events. Nova students and employees will now be able to win tickets only by listening to the station and taking part in call-in/walk-in contests.

Jay Kell, entertainment director at WNKR, has managed to acquire tickets to many diverse events. The first contests at WNKR will feature tickets to see musicians Living Colour, Winger (with Nelson), and Duke Ellington. Kell mentioned that he is now waiting for tickets to arrive for the plays Hollywood Exposed, Hello Dolly, and Ten Types.

Rob Armstrong, general manager of WNKR, hopes that the new promotion will help raise student awareness of the radio station's presence on campus.

Ground War Looms, Students Take Action

By the time this issue reaches you, the Middle East will look a good deal different than it did last August.

Iraq's deliberate creation of the world's largest oil spill as well as the oil well fires confirms fears that the Gulf War will create widespread environmental destruction.

As a result, students on college campuses took action through various activities.

"New York City students marched to the United Nations and to Wall Street on January 15th and 16th. While in neighboring New Jersey, Kuwaiti volunteers completed basic training at Fort Dix to serve as guides and interpreters for U.S. troops in the Gulf.

Robert A. Steele Honored With C.H.I.E.F. Award

On January 31, 1991, Robert A. Steele, a 16 year member of the Nova University Board of Trustees member, was the recipient of the most prestigious award given by the Independent Colleges and Universities of Florida, the "Champions of Higher Independent Education in Florida" (C.H.I.E.F.) award.

Mr. Steele was nominated by Nova University with an unanimous vote by the twenty members of the President's Council of the ICUF.

He was one of nine awardees honored at a banquet hosted by the twenty presidents of Florida's independent colleges and universities in Dania.

Other 1991 C.H.I.E.F. awardees include: Charles I. Babcock, Jr. Miami; Karl Beachler, West Palm Beach

Can Women Wage War on the Frontlines As Well As Men ? ? ?

By Sandra Watson

In a recent poll administered by the Nova Knight, a 75% majority of the 100 students surveyed feel that American women already in the Armed Forces should participate in the fighting against Iraq.

The students polled are from all parts of the country, but they share one common trait: they are undergraduate students on the Main Campus of Nova University.

Ages ranged from 18 to 42. Pollees were from a diversity of majors.

While many may argue that men are better suited for combat than most women, others argue that this is just another way which the country has kept the American women as second class citizens.

There is still a double standard in this country.

"I'm personally grateful I don't have to go, but there are some women who choose this line of support. In my opinion, if you took a front line of women on PMS, the war would have been over in six days," exclaimed Tyschka "Lady Squeeze", senior DJ of WNKR.

While 32% of the women polled said that they would be willing to have a female member from their family fight, 21% of the males on campus said they would be willing to fight and only 13% would be willing to have a female member from their family fight. Compared to the Nova Knight poll in Vol I, Issue XIII, this reveals a 10% increase in student body members who would be willing to serve in the Armed Forces in the now-defunct war against Iraq.

About four in five female students said 'Yes, women should be allowed to enter into combat if they are properly pre-

The Political Elite in the Executive Branch and the Law: Uses, Misuses and Abuses

By Cleveland Ferguson III

This is the first in a 4 Part Series in which I will examine how effortlessly the different branches of government prove to be above the law.

To use, misuse or abuse the law . . . that is the question. It seems that the political elite in this country are the only ones who are above the law. They are the only ones who can, exploit, pervert, and violate, the laws in order to do what they want to do; to act as if there were no law, without being penalized.

No single office has had more users, misusers and abusers than that of the President. In fact there is a particular law that seems to be a Commander-in-Chief's inside joke. It's called the War Powers Resolution. Because this act is called a resolution, that does not mean it is any less important than an act that is called a law. It has the same effect because both the House of Representatives and the Senate passed the bill. Although President Nixon vetoed the bill in 1973, Congress overrode his veto, which made the bill become law.

The War Powers Resolution specifically states what the President is supposed to do before sending troops into war.

1. The President must consult with Congress "in every possible instance" before sending military forces into hostilities.

2. After consultation with the Congress, the President is required to report back to Congress within forty-eight hours after sending troops into war. The President is required at that time to explain why they were sent and how long they are expected to remain.

3. The President is required to withdraw troops after ninety days, or earlier if Congress passes a concurrent resolution.

Every President has ignored this resolution since it became law.

In the face of an apathetic public, and/or a Congress worrying about losing "international face" by reversing a presidential decision, the following incidents have occurred:

*Evacuations from Indochina, 1975

Prior information about intentions, report filed immediately following action evacuating DaNang, stating "In accordance with my desire to keep the congress fully informed on this matter, and taking note of the provisions" of the War Powers Resolution; no consultation prior to evacuation, in the same terms as DaNang report; third report filed after evacuation of Saigon, "taking note" of the War Powers Resolution.

*The Mayaguez Affair, May 12-15, 1975

Ten House and eleven Senate leaders informed that President Ford would probably use some sort of force, on evening before major force used (though armed forces "introduced" into area earlier); report filled within forty-eight hours (at 2:30A.M.)

*Evacuation of United States Citizens from Lebanon, June 18, 1976

No consultation prior to termination of effort; report filed "because of my desire that Congress be informed on this matter and consistent with the reporting provisions of the War Powers Resolution"

*Lebanon, 1982

Troops were sent to Lebanon as a "peacekeeping force. There was no attempt to comply with the War Powers Resolution because troops were not sent into "hostilities." By the fall of 1983, the troops were engaged in substantial defensive activities, and in September a US warship shelled targets in Lebanon. The ninety-day limit in the War Powers Resolution failed to be triggered. Instead Congress "compromises" and enacts an extension for the troops to stay in Lebanon far longer than Reagan wanted them there anyway.

*Invasion of Grenada, October 1983

No prior consultation, though congressional leaders notified of impending invasion on the night before it occurred; report filed "consistent with the War Powers Resolution"

Invasion of Panama 1989

There was no consultation with Congress. I believe that the CIA needed to find Noriega's records before Panamanian forces did.

Declaration of War on Iraq 1991

Bush committed troops in speeches and sent them to the Persian Gulf without consultation with Congress. Congress took no action. The country needed to stand behind its President in order to save international face.

*Source: Central America and the Law: Civil Liberties and the Courts by Mark Tushnet, 1988.

The public needs to concern itself with executive branch affairs as it did in the Theodore Roosevelt years. The majority of us have let political corruption run our economy through the ground. Yet, we sit back and complain about our daily conditions and all of the taxes we have to pay. It seems no one care when Peter Jennings, Dan Rather, Bernard Shaw or Tom Brokaw casually mentions that the US has just sent $30 million in aid to the Soviet Union! $30 million, and our healthcare system is in shambles? $30 million, and our taxes are increasing every year? $30 million, and our national debt is in the trillions? Let's wake up!!! Vote sagaciously!!!

Domestically, poor Bush was in the loo. The budget mess, recessions and a stew Of problems—drugs and health care, to name two—Gave evidence that Bush's White House crew Had not a clue of what to do.

Now news shows show no homeless on a grate. They show our triumphs as we deastate Iraq with weapons all appreciate. Because Bush went to war to free Kuwait, He has a great approval rate.

But when we show Saddam Hussein th door, We'll still have problems here we can't ignore. In fact, by then we could have many more. The White House, just as baffled as before, Might have to score another war.

Annual Psychology Conference attracts 'diverse crowd.'

By Alan Ginja

On Saturday, February 19, the Nova Psychology Club presented its second annual Psychology Conference. The event was held at the Rosenthal Student Center. It started at the scheduled time of 11:00 a.m., and lasted until approximately 5:30 p.m. The conference was open to all people and there was a two dollar donation fee requested at the door. Lunch was supplied by Brad Williams, Director of Student Life.

This year's Psychology Conference attracted a diverse crowd. There was a surprisingly large group of high school students who attended. Along with the Nova University students and faculty who attended the conference there were members of Florida International University, Florida Atlanta University, the University of Miami and Barry University present as well.

Over sixty people attended this year's Psychology Conference. This number does not include the many people who were involved in the preparation and presentations involved at the conference.

The Nova Psychology Club sponsored the event, and although many of the clubs members helped with the preparations in this year's conference, special appreciation goes out to Nicolla Schutte (Faculty Advisor of Nova Psychology Club), Robert Knapp (Co-Vice President of Nova Psychology Club), Belinda Gonzalez (President of Nova Psychology Club), and Tammy Bady (Co-Vice President) for their efforts.

Both Nova's undergraduate and graduate level faculty participated in the conference, lending their expert advice on such topics as: clinical psychology, child psychology, eyewitness testimony, forensic psychology, community psychology, substance abuse, volunteer services, employment opportunities, and graduate school programs.

Those who attended were also given background on the different specialties that psychology has to offer which included: Experimental, Clinical, Industrial and Organizational, Psychiatry, and Social Work. The teachers that participated at this year's conference were: Steven Gold, Ph.D. of the Nova Psychology Graduate School, Nicolla Schutte, Ph.D. (Undergraduate Psychology Faculty), John Malouff, Ph.D., J.D. (Undergraduate Psychology Faculty), Earl Patterson, Ph.D. (Undergraduate Psychology Faculty), Elizabeth Armstrong (Nova Geriatric Ward), Michelle Milchman (Career Resource Center), and Monica Dowling (Nova Family Center).

Psychology students also took part in the conference by displaying research papers in using visual aids such as poster boards. Although most of the papers presented were from Nova's undergraduate psychology program, a student from Barry University did present a paper at the conference. The research papers were on display all day, and most students made copies of their papers available to the public. This public display of research was one of the highlights of the conference because it gave each student an opportunity to share their findings. The high school students who attended the conference were also given a tour of Nova University, another worthwhile feature of the conference.

The Nova Psychology Club has already begun evaluating feedback from the conference. Most people who filled out the evaluation forms answered that they learned some valuable information from the conference. The length of the conference was questioned, and as a result next year's conference will be shorter, probably lasting only 3 to 4 hours. At this year's conference, there was a break for lunch, which was provided by Student Life.

The donations collected for the lunch was a very small amount when compared to the cost of the food. Next year there will probably not be a lunch served, unless it is decided to charge an admission fee for entrance to the conference. These are some of the decisions that must be worked out within the next year in order for the Psychology Club to be able to hold another successful conference in the Spring of 1992.

The Nova Psychology Club would like to extend its appreciation to Brad Williams of Student Life for providing funds for the great lunch served at the conference. These funds were supposed to have been offset by donations collected at the conference. Unfortunately, the amount of donations collected was pathetically low. The members of the club working on next year's conference have taken note of this shortcoming, and have decided to change the format of next year's conference in order to avoid using up funds from outside sources such as Student Life.

Nova Cheerleaders in Bowl-A-Thon

By Christine Thomann

On February 17, 1991, the Nova University Cheerleaders participated in a Bowl-a-thon at Fairlanes in Pembroke Pines. Their purpose, to help the parents of a little girl pay her medical bills.

Two year old Chelsea Lee Asman is in need of a brain surgery to eliminate her constant seizures. Her medical bills will exceed $ 100,000 dollars.

The squad's bowlers were, Kim LeClair, Robin Silverstein, and Brooke Baldwin. Their excellent scores brought in over $150 dollars. The Cheerleaders would like to thank all our sponsors for their pledges and donations.

D Dorm's Garden Courtyard Revived by RSA

By Tammy Jones

project.

Last semester, a group of students organized by the Resident Student Association (RSA) undertook the task of reviving the gardens in the interior courtyard of Building D.

The gardens, which were once the centerpiece of our student housing complex, had deteriorated into shambles. Today the gardens are lovely again providing a place in which students may study, socialize, or simply enjoy on their way to and from their destinations.

Renovating the gardens involved an essentially new plan which opened them up for use by creating stone pathways with additional lighting and picnic tables. The project required redistributing some twenty eight tons of decorative stone for pathways, a truck load of top soil for revitalized plant bedding.

Dead or hopelessly damaged plants were removed, along with years of collected litter, and the remaining plants were reorganized into a more cordial pattern. Lastly, additional bedding plants such as ornamental grasses, ferns, Mexican Heather, and some annuals were added to complete the

The completed project (without tables) cost thirty five cents per square foot. The extraordinarily low price tag was the direct result of ample volunteer labor. Over the course of the entire project greater than thirty students contributed time to the renovation. The actual costs were assumed by the Department of Residential Life. Technical assistance and some equipment were contributed by the Physical Plant.

D-Building is at this point the cleanest in the Residential Life complex; a feat which could only be conducted by the students who live there.

In the future, RSA will be considering ideas to enhance usage of the Courtyard. Some ideas presently under consideration include Friday early evening, low volume entertainment such as acoustic guitarist, poetry recitals, a cafe offering charcoal-grilled meals, and perhaps lecture series.

Student input is welcome. Until then, Bravol to the RSA and to the student volunteers who made this welcomed event possible. May you enjoy the Courtyard in good health.

The Sea is Calm Tonight

By Harry Stone

"The sea is calm tonight," she states flatly. These five words have an uncommon finality, sounds stopping as abruptly as a train treading the bare ground suspending me in clouds to thought As my mouth begins to open, I stop myself. What can I say, to breath life into a love? To rekindle feelings, which even as I sit, are receding with the retreating waves?

I begin to think of time stretching of itself, Of prolonged pain and fear, and black days of shame. I see rivers, composed of tears from forgotten children, lies exchanged by brothers, and friends. Hurt is compounded in the graying sun, as, Transfixed by the sins of nations, I taste the pale dust of promises unfulfilled.

Mother of mine, what life shall I live? giving the quality of myself unto others? Despising the shallow paths of lust, and wealth? Father, what is ahead? My satisfaction becoming disappointment in the eyes of others? Enrapturing affection leaving me an overloaded piece of emotional machinery? Or will I live to see the sun of tomorrow? Will the deeds of this generation leave any inheritance for those who follow?

Sitting on a beach, alone in feeling although not in attendance, I wonder why we try, how the pain of life can release mental capacity. Like a candle hidden in a closet for too long, the fire in my heart is having trouble making itself known. As always there are two choices: shine with the light of a new day, or never bring illumination forth. "You must do what you want, now I must go." And I leave my suspension, discovering control again in my hands. I live my life for myself, and my intention is to shine.

Naked Death

By Harry Stone

The other day I put a naked girl on my wall, above the derelict drummer of a metallic band. Taut flesh in pleasing proportions, bare of both clothes and enthusiasm for the camera. He sits on a monument of death, a thoughtful expression, and a sickly complexion his only possessions. One moves to the beat of animal lust, the other creates a rhythm about death. He sits easy in abundance of nature, seeing the necessity of fatality, and the blessing of simplicity. her stock pose offers nothing of understanding, her mind as naked as her body. beauty of form cannot compare to beauty of thought, nature reclaims the gifts that it gives, but a vision of life lives on through others.

No More Fairy Tales

magic fairies dance on the reflection of my world, stirring up tranquility with their magic wands, making impossible promises of happy ever-afters. coloring my mirror with rainbows, the absentmindedly forget the thunderstorms clouding the pages of their tails with the rains of reality.

Oceanographic Center Offers Layman Lecture on Squirts and The Gulf Stream

Yasi Fukamachi, a doctoral student at the Oceanographic Center of Nova University will be conducting a layman's lecture on "Squirts and the Gulf Stream" on March 13, 1991, from 7:00pm to 8:00pm in the Oceanographic Center's library, located at 8000 N. Ocean Drive, Dania. Squirts are strong off-shore currents comprising large portions of coastal water, which can shoot off western continental coasts.

Gayle L. Stone, a master's student at the Center, will discuss the biological significance of the well-defined feature called the shoreward front of the Gulf Stream, the boundary of the Stream and the shelf water. You do not have to be an Ocean Studies major to appreciate the lecture. The discussion is open to the public.

Seating is limited so call Bud Huch at (305)-475-7417 to make reservations.

pared. Women are just as capable as men.'

"If sexual equality is to be achieved, women should not only be eligible for support service in wartime, but also front line hand to hand combat," said freshman psychology student, Ryan Herbst.

"Women have been complaining for years about wanting equal rights, but when it comes to something not as easy as pulling a voting lever they [women] don't want anything to do with it," Mark Bizokas whole heartedly agreed.

However, the battle of the sexes gap converged when a whopping 82% of all students polled agreed that women with small children should not be allowed or required to participate in combat.

What happened to the other 18%, you ask?

A surprising 10% of all female students and 7% of male students polled said they believe that women with small children should fight under certain conditions.

One student, who wishes to remain anonymous, and understandably so, believes that women with small children should be allowed and required to participate in hand to hand combat if she is a member of the Armed Forces.

With answers ranging from "Women should fight because they want equal rights," to "Women should stay home because they need to make babies," one can see how dangerous it would be to draw any conclusions, or to make any assumptions about the results of these polls, but it is safe to say that Nova students have thought about the war.

where the devastating effects of mothers who do not receive prenatal care results in "10,000 infant deaths and 100,000 permanently disabled infants annually," and on the other end of the spectrum of life where 9 million older Americans will need long term healthcare.

"The issue is no longer whether to extend to those who don't have it, it is how we can best provide affordable high quality healthcare for everyone," she stressed.

Ferraro suggested that there have been a number of proposals, but the two pronged approach offered by the Pepper Commission embodies the combined interests of the public and private sectors comprehensive social insurance.

"Fixing the healthcare [system] won't be easy, no matter what solution we adopt we will be faced with economic, quality of life, and ethical choices."

Ms. Ferraro voiced her concern with the educational, and job opportunities promised in the television ads and contracts of the American troops in the Gulf by the United States Government.

She feels that the Armed forces are luring people in because they know they want to obtain a better life. Instead, they should be giving support [i.e. monetary] outside of the armed forces so they have some financial stability before they go in to combat.

"Patriotism should mean more than investing in weapons in wartime, it should mean investing in people in peacetime."

II T & D to Have Seminar on "The New European Economic Space"

The Institute for International Trade and Development of Nova University will sponsor a seminar on March 20, 1991, on "The New European Economic Space," at the Port Everglades Authority in Fort Lauderdale from 6:30pm to 9:30pm.

Walter Veith, President of the U.S. International Consulting Corporation (USICC), will highlight new business potentials in the European Common Market now that it has increased from 17 million people to approximately 340 million since East and West Germany reunited.

Veith will also discuss how U.S. companies should plan to best benefit from the European Economic Space (EES), a free trade area by the end of the 1990's that will consist of 400 million people with a combined Gross National Product of $5 trillion.

The cost of the seminar is $15 per person. Call the Institute for International Trade and Development at 1-800-541-NOVA ext. 5608, or (305)-370-5608.

The Institute for International Trade and Development of Nova

University will be conducting an eight-week course from March 27- May 15, 1991, on "The New European Market Now and After 1992."

The course will review basic changes taking place in the 12-nation European Community with special emphasis on how these changes will affect American traders. The Course will update participants on new trends in the European Common Market (EC) so they may properly assess the impact of these trends on their business dealings.

Classes meet on Wednesdays from 6:30pm to 9:30pm in the Sonken building (Entrance 1), room 404, on Nova University's main campus, 3301 College Avenue, Fort Lauderdale.

Students will receive a certificate upon completion of the course.

The cost is $395. A discount will be given for group registrations of three or more participants.

To preregister, or for more additional information, call the Institute for International Trade and Development, 1-800-541-NOVA, ext. 5608, or (305)-370-5608.

Nova Disability Institute Awarded Grant

The Charles and Lucille King Disability Law Institute of the Shepard Broad Law Center of Nova University has been awarded a $95,760 grant from the Governor's Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention State Advisory Committee.

The grant was awarded for a proposal entitled "Prevention of Inappropriate Placements In and Removal of Juveniles from Adult Jails."

"This grant provides us the opportunity to serve juveniles as well as the general population," said Fran Tetunic, supervising attorney for the grant.

"The children's statutory rights are being protected and the state of Florida is obtaining much needed federal funds for its juvenile justice system," continued the administrator of the King Disability Law Institute.

The project is a response to the Justice Delinquency Prevention Act (JDPA) which prohibits the confinement of juveniles charged as juveniles in a jail or lock-up facility for adults.

"This project is part of the Nova tradition of service to our community," said Dr. Roger I. Abrams, Dean of the Law School.

"Together with the Center for Youth Policy now located at the law school, the juvenile justice project demonstrates our commitment to the children of Broward County," he continued.

The state of Florida must be in compliance with the jail removal mandate of the JDPA to receive federal funds under the Act.

The one-year project will provide mediation of disputes with at-risk juveniles and their families, friends, and school personnel.

Dr. Mina Sonenshine has been hired as a compliance coordinator.

She will monitor the placement of juveniles in Broward County adult jails to ensure compliance with the JDPA.

Men's Basketball Loses Eight Games In A Row.

Hansley Named President of FIAC.

By Errol Bodie
Sports Editor

It is near the end of the season for the Men's basketball team, and losing the last eight games in a row has erased all hopes of post-season play. Plagued by injuries, lost of spirit and inconsistency, there was never any doubt after the first 10 games that the Knights would make it very far.

"Of course we are very disappointed with the results we have seen," stated Head Coach Jim Michaels on the issue. "My pre-season forecast was that we would be a pretty good basketball team. I still believe that."

Leading scorer for the Knights, senior Sean Wilkinson, who has averaged 23 points per game, has missed the last five games owing to injury. Star recruit, Omonuwa Obaseki, will play next season, much too late to help out now. Senior Tyler Wilson is the only player who has played each of Nova's 25 games. The only other assistance for the Knights came from Teves Bush, averaging 15 points per game, and Brian Morris, with 123 total assists.

"We have never been able to put our entire team in uniform on any night this season. To have to work hard with recruiting in the off season, trying to put a quality team together, and then to have it fall apart because of injuries is the most frustrating thing for me," went on Coach Michaels. "Our players have worked within their abilities to succeed, but we have been decimated by the loss of important players."

Indeed it was so. Players Ozer Hosgor and Ronald Rohlsen never saw play during the entire season. Player Mike Aiello played only seven games before having to step out because of a leg injury. Then Omonuwa Obaseki, who came to Nova with shin injuries, had to sit out the entire season instead of the pre-scheduled one semester.

Tides may turn, as Assistant Coach Mickey Dillard has already laboured hard to secure good players for next season, a part of his recruiting endeavors. The team should comprised of the same players this season, except seniors Wilkinson and Wilson, who will graduate this semester.

Athletic Director Sonny Hansley was recently named President of the Florida Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (F.I.A.C). Dan Stewart, Athletic Director at Flagler College in St. Augustine, Fl., resigned as President to become Chairman of the the N.A.I.A.'s newly formed District 27.

The FIAC started in the Fall of 1990 and includes eight Florida NAIA schools: Nova, Florida Memorial, Palm Beach Atlantic, Warner Southern, Flagler, Webber, Embry-Riddle, and St. Thomas. Each member must compete in at least three of the six conference sports. They are men's basketball, baseball, and soccer; and women's volleyball, tennis, and basketball.

A few of Coach Hansley's duties include organizing meetings to establish new policies, working to gain recognition for NAIA schools competing in the FIAC. One of his special interest will be to establish a basketball tournament site.

This coming Fall, all Florida NAIA schools will be part of the newly formed District 27, making it the first time Florida has ever had its own NAIA district. This make-up includes the seven FIAC institutions, North Florida, The Northwood Institute, Boca Raton, and Edward Waters.

Rough Start?!!

NU Athletic Press

"Rough" may be too gentle a word to describe the start of the ladies tennis team's start in the '91 season. New coach Roger Morrison had little time to recruit players that could help this year's team, joining the team late last Spring.

Top seeded Nancy Poirer has really had trouble this season, playing against excellent competition. Senior Deanna Cruz has been out for the most of this season, plagued with an arm injury.

"Our two senior players (Cruz and Poirer) have been helping some of the younger members," said Morris. "The players are doing their best, with most of them continuing to improve."

"I have already started recruiting for the next season. The combination of players returning and some new talent should make us a pretty good team next Spring," he concluded.

Like basketball, tennis may not fare well this semester, but we do see improvements in the ladies tennis team like all others.

There are three games left in the season for the ladies tennis team. Everyone should make it an effort to attend as they go against Miami Dade, Webber College, and the College of Boca Raton, April 1st, 6th and 11th. The Lady Knights next home game will be on April 6th against Webber College. Play will begin at 11:00 am and the location will be at Pembroke Lakes. The Editorial Staff of The Knight wish the ladies success in their matches.

Shows Remainder Of Games To Go.

Sight Is Not The Issue Here.

N.U. Athletic Press.

Blind baseball Commentator Donald Wardlow and sighted play-by-play partner Jim Lucas have been working at the Nova University baseball field, busy preparing themselves for the upcoming Miracle season that will begin later in March.

The two broadcasters have been tape-recording their work at home games, preparing for their upcoming season in the Cass A Florida State League.

Wardlow and Lucas, both 27 year old New Jersey natives, met while attending Glassboro State College and have prepared to take their act into professional baseball by commenting practice games for the last five years.

At the professional baseball meeting in Los Angeles in December, the pair of broadcasters were offered jobs from three different minor league teams. Wardlow and Lucas signed a one-year deal with the Miracles, who will play their home games in Pompano. The games will be broadcast on radio station WSBR-740 AM in Boca Raton.

The two announcers caught the attention of Miracle President Mike Veeck and WSBR sales manager Bill Wheatley with a letter they sent.

"Without a doubt, these gentlemen are as professional as any I've encountered," said Veeck. "I know people who are calling games in the bigs who haven't worked that hard, ever."

For these two, Nova games have been an interesting warm up.

"Of course the conditions have been a little different," commented both Lucas and Wardlow.

"Doing the games from behind the backstop on a blanket is different than from being high up in a press box," said Lucas. "But the bottom line is that we are getting the opportunity to practice before it's time to go to work with the Miracles."

During broadcasts, Wardlow makes notes about the games on his brailier. Often, he is accompanied by his black Labrador Retriever, "Gizmo".

Both Wardlow and Lucas has also recently appeared on Continental Cable's "Off the Wall" show, as special guests. Scott Vrabel, of Nova's Athletic Dept., was one of two viewers to call into the show, praising the efforts of the pair.

"Technology is wonderful, but you can't recreate the roar of the crowd as you'd hear it if you were at the game. If you did, you'd never be able to hear the broadcasters," commented Wardlow.

February seemed to be the month of "firsts". First, pitcher Vince Kelly pitched a phenomenal no-hitter in Nova's baseball history on the 5th of February. Then the baseball team of Nova University hosted the College of Boca Raton in a game on Valentines Day, February 14th. Over 200,000 households in Broward County had the opportunity to see the game carried by Continental Cablevision for the first time.

Senior Frank Taylor went six innings and was awarded the win as Nova beat Boca 8-2, the first of three meetings of the season. A crowd of over 200 was on hand to see Nova out do its opponents. Senior Guillermo Munoz crushed a homerun deep into right center field in the third inning, with three men on base.

Broadcasting from the top of the Nova University dug-out, Continental's Program Director, Al Southard, was the play-by-play announcer. The game was later aired that night.

"We were happy to be out there," said Southard. "It was an exciting game featuring two fine local schools," he concluded.

The FAIC Conference Baseball leader is St Thomas with a conference record of 5-0 and an overall record of 7-3. They are followed closely by Nova University who has a 3-0 conference record and an overall record of 6-2 as of the February 14th, 1991. Guillermo Munoz, Chris Zapata, and Craig Smith are all rank in the top ten hitting leaders for Nova. All three have a batting average of .500. Leading for the number of strike outs is Nova's Vince Kelly with a total of ten.

The Fontainebleau College Classic, hosted by Florida International University, February 15-17, opened the Spring season for the Men's golf team. Led by Ron McIver, the Knights were able to place eleventh with a team score of 969. Team players included McIver, David Schuster, Scott Brody, Tom Vitucci, and Rogilio Saldana.

Florida Atlantic University went away victors with a team score of 913, beating out the other 11 schools that included University of Maryland, University of Nebraska, Northern University, Ohio University and University of Akron.

The Knight's will play at Lehigh Acres, Florida, in a tournament, March 3-6, at Mirror Lakes Golf Course.

THAT'S ENTERTAINMENT

Once Around is Worth Seeing Twice

By: Jax

When people think of romance in cinema, movies such as Casablanca, Love Story, and Gone With the Wind come to mind. Currently, Greencard and Pretty Woman are titles that immediately pop into mind. The time has come to add another title to this list, Once Around.

Once Around is a lighthearted comedy about love and family, a combination that doesn't always go well together. Holly Hunter and Richard Dreyfuss both give excellent performances that add to the effect of the movie: Dreyfuss as an exuberant, overbearing, nouveau-riche businessman and Hunter as the childlike object of Dreyfuss' affections.

Both Hunter and Dreyfuss also worked well in the film Always, which had a plot mimicked by Ghost, but was played out better than Swayze and Moore could ever dream of.

Danny Aiello, who has been in other movies such as Moonstruck and Do The Right Thing, gives a superb performance as Hunter's overworked, anxious, middle-aged Italian father.

Once Around plays on the tension created between Dreyfuss and Hunter's family, partially owing to the age difference between the couple. Dreyfuss' character is well past middle aged; Hunter's is in her late 20's.

Eventually, the movie pulls together to show more than romance. It shows the process of acceptance that all families go through when a new member is introduced, acceptance of both the good and bad characteristics of a person.

In conclusion, Once Around is a delightful comedy, a wonderful romance, and a fantastic film. It is a must for the avid moviegoer tired of the same-old Hollywood pabulum being produced year after year. As exhibited in Always, Hunter and Dreyfuss make a great couple, and hopefully they will continue to do so in movies to come.

Shop around before seeing Scenes From a Mall

By: Kevin Hawkins

Keep an eye on Bill Irwin in Paul Mazursky's Scenes From a Mall. "Bill Irwin?" you may ask, "Not Woody Allen or Bette Midler? Bill Irwin? Who's he?" Well, he's not hard to miss: in a cast of up to 2,600 extras, Bill Irwin is the only mime.

Scenes From a Mall is Mazursky's just-barely decent attempt at an 80's-into-the-90's period film. Allen and Midler play a Los Angeles power couple (Nick and Deborah Fifer) on their 16th anniversary. Nick is a sports lawyer and Deborah is a psychologist whose specialty is marriage. True to form, each has their own phone and their dinner parties sport distinctive motifs.

The intriguing aspect of Scenes is that the film unfolds inside a shopping mall. Nick and Deborah go into a mall on their anniversary to 'be alone.' Nick explains this simply as "the lonely crowd, Kafka in California." The film isn't so much about the stressful dialogue between Nick and Deborah as much as it seems to be about society always intruding into your life, and not really caring about what may be found there.

Seeing Allen as this ultra-hip and professional character is amazing. Nick Fifer is almost the antithesis of the well-known Allenesque character. (Continued as "Scenes" - Page 13)

Nova Knight Contest- Find Ben's Head!

It's simple. All you have to do is find the picture of Instructor Ben Mulvey's head cleverly hidden in the Entertainment Section. Once this is accomplished, cut out the section in which it appears, circle Ben's head, and drop it off in room 206 of the Rosenthal Building (c/o Jax) with your name and phone number attached. If you're right, you win a 14" Cheese Pizza from Lupo's Pizza. In the event that there is more than one correct entry, a drawing will be held to determine the winner. Contest ends March 22nd. so get busy and Find Ben's Head!

ATTENTION SPRING BREAKERS

Looking for the right place to go this spring break? Call the National Spring Break Hotline at 1-900-884-4343. This call will keep you informed of the "hot spots" for the price of $2.00 per minute, billed to your touchtone phone. The average call only takes about 2 minutes, but you must be at least 18 to call.

Thinking of A Day at the Zoo? Don't Bother.

By: Jax

The way I see it, a fundamental element of any childhood is a trip to the zoo. I remember when I was five years old up in Jersey, going to a Garden State zoo with my Grandfather, and it is one of my fondest memories of childhood. So, being the child-at-heart kind of guy that I am, I figured a trip to a Florida zoo would be great nostalgia; I figured wrong.

Recently, I visited Metrozoo in Miami and the only descriptive word that leaps to mind is Florida. Not just because it was 90 million degrees when I was walking around, and not just because there were signs everywhere to serve as a constant reminder that I was in Miami Metrozoo, but because everything in the zoo had that commercialized feeling that Florida can deliver so well.

Let me give an example. While at Metrozoo, I went to see the Koalas (which are native to Australia, in case you didn't know). Sure, they were cuddly and cute as they slept in their man-made 'natural habitat' that, by the way, probably cost more than my tuition at Nova for the past 4 years, but outside the cages, there were plush Koala toys that you could take home for the outrageous price of 30 dollars.

Thirty bucks for a stuffed reminder of my trip to the zoo is outrageous, but when you consider that they had booths for at least 30 different animals to entice the kiddies to scream until their parents bought them one of each, it's worse than outrageous; it's downright commercial.

Speaking of kids, the place is crawling with them. Not that I mind kids (as long as they aren't mine), but when you're surrounded by hundreds of screaming brats that want the stuffed Koalas, it begins to grate a bit. Looking for an escape route, I headed for the monorail.

The monorail system operates much like the ones at Disney, but the main difference is that the ones at Disney don't look like they're going to hop off the rail at any second. Pretty scary to think about when you're right above the lion-pit and they look as hungry as salesmen at BrandsMart. I made it off the monorail safely and headed for home.

In summary, I spent 10 bucks (that's without the Koala) and three hours mulling around with a bunch of animals and kids. I could have saved the money and gone to the Lower School for the same experience. I hadn't been to the zoo in 16 years, and it will probably be another 16 before I go again. I can only imagine what it will be like then: you'll probably be able to buy the animals and take 'em home.

Within ten minutes, Nick not only insults New York, but he also speculates that one of his clients may be Jewish. Oddly enough, the character is still recognizably Allen, just polarized.

Midler seems to never really fill-out her part as Deborah Fifer. At times it is painfully obvious that she is acting. She seems to either overplay or underplay her role and no definite character emerges.

Scenes is a short movie, about only an hour and 15 minutes long. Mazursky and Roger L. Simon managed to fit in a fair amount of humor into this slice of time. Some well-placed jabs at contemporary relationships and society are good for the occasional laugh, but not enough to spirit the movie into any awards. Oh, and keep an eye on Bill Irwin, he's the mime.
